SEC. 901. FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 1988 AND 1989.

Sections 1201 through 1204 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989 (Public Law 100–204) are repealed.

Sections 148 and 805 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal years 1986 and 1987 (Public Law 99–93) are repealed.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, DC, July 9, 1993.

Hon. AL GORE,
President of the Senate.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: On behalf of President Clinton, I am pleased to transmit the enclosed Act for Reform In Emerging New Democracies and Support and Help for Improved Partnership with Russia, Ukraine and Other New Independent States—the "FRIENDSHIP with Russia, Ukraine and Other New Independent States Act." I am also enclosing a section-by-section analysis of the proposed legislation.

Submission of the bill follows a broad review of Cold War legislation ordered by the President on April 23 and reflects our consultations with Congress. The Administration welcomes the broad bipartisan support for the efforts to develop this legislation as expressed by the leaders in both Houses of Congress, and looks forward to similar support in consideration and passage of the bill during this session of Congress.

The bill represents a substantial step forward in the development of friendly and cooperative relations with Russia, Ukraine and the other independent states of the former Soviet Union. In eliminating or revising over seventy statutory provisions, it would go well beyond the substantial steps that Congress has previously taken in the FREEDOM Support Act and elsewhere. It would, for example, remove special requirements for registration of commercial representatives of the Soviet Union; special review procedures for exports of products developed in certain Department of Defense programs; ineligibility for benefits under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP); provisions linking most-favored-nation trade status to lend lease arrearages; and provisions directed against the presence of Soviet diplomats or other nationals in the United States.

Perhaps as important, the bill proposes the elimination or revision of extensive Cold War languages that has political importance beyond the elimination of specific prohibitions and restrictions. In this way the legislation will demonstrate the resolve of the American people to build new relationships with Russia, Ukraine and the other independent states based on a spirit of friendship and partnership.

At the same time we are submitting this legislation, the Administration is continuing other efforts of interest to President Yeltsin and the other leaders of the independent states. Thus, we are actively engaged in discussions with our allies on how best to reorient the export control regime under the Coordinating Committee on Multilateral Export Controls (COCOM) in light of the new relationship with these states. Because the COCOM regime is multilateral, reform in this area must focus on diplomatic rather than legislative efforts, but we will remain in close contact with the Congress as negotiations with our COCOM partners evolve.

We are also engaged in discussions with the Russian Government on issues related to the Jackson-Vanik Amendment. The President has expressed his concerns about continuing restrictions on individuals wishing to emigrate from Russia. We have asked the Russians to explain how they intend to handle refusenik cases in the future, and requested that they resolve all current cases. President Yeltsin has assured President Clinton that he would look into outstanding refusenik cases and we are awaiting a full response from the Russian Government. We will continue to work intensively with the Russian Government, but a final decision on action related to Jackson-Vanik will depend on progress on these and related issues. The Administration will work closely with Congress as we move forward.

We are at a critical juncture in the development of relations with the independent states that will profoundly affect the welfare of our country for decades to come. The proposed legislation represents an important step forward in strengthening those relations and thereby contributing significantly to a world in which the United States is safe and can prosper. I urge its prompt and favorable consideration.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the presentation of this proposed legislation to Congress and that its enactment would be in accord with the President's program.

Sincerely,

CLIFTON R. WHARTON, JR.,
Acting Secretary.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

The Act For Reform In Emerging New Democracies and Support and Help for Improved Partnership with Russia, Ukraine and Other New Independent States (the FRIENDSHIP with Russia, Ukraine and Other New Independent States Act) would revise or eliminate numerous statutory provisions that restrict or otherwise interfere with relations between the United States and the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the other independent states of the former Soviet Union.

Section 1—Short titles

This section entitles the bill the "Act For Reform In Emerging New Democracies and Support and Help for Improved Partnership with Russia, Ukraine and the Other New Independent States" or the "FRIENDSHIP with Russia, Ukraine and the Other New Independent States Act".

TITLE I—POLICY OF FRIENDSHIP AND COOPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA, UKRAINE AND THE OTHER INDEPENDENT STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION

Section 101—Findings

The section sets forth a series of findings regarding the new spirit of cooperation and partnership between the United States and the independent states of the former Soviet Union, and emphasizes the importance of our cooperation with these countries. The findings note that many Cold War statutes remain in force, and that repeals or revisions of these provisions can play an important role in fostering and strengthening the bonds of trust and friendship, as well as mutually beneficial trade and economic relations, between the United States and the new independent states.

Section 102—Statutory provisions that have been applicable to the Soviet Union

This section notes the fundamental changes that have taken place since the enactment of many of the statutes that still remain in force regarding the Soviet Union, some of which do not refer specifically to the Soviet Union. For a variety of reasons, several such statutes (the provisions listed in subsection (b)(2) are illustrative) would not be repealed or revised directly under this bill—e.g., a provision regarding U.S. treatment of communist dictatorships may in some cases still have relevance with respect to other countries that continue to be dominated by communist dictatorships. Subsection (c) sets forth a congressional finding and affirmation that such provisions should not be construed as being directed against Russia, Ukraine or the other independent states of the former Soviet Union, connoting an adversarial relationship between the United States and those states, or signifying or implying in any manner unfriendliness toward these countries.

TITLE II—TRADING AND BUSINESS RELATIONS

Section 201—Eligibility for generalized system of preferences

This section would repeal the provision that rendered the USSR ineligible for benefits under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP).

Section 202—Policy under Export Administration Act

This section would repeal findings language contained in paragraph (11) of section 2 of the Export Administration Act, regarding acquisition by the Soviet Union of national security sensitive goods, while leaving intact language in the other paragraphs of section 2 that sets forth the importance of considering the contribution certain exports can have to the military potential of foreign countries; and paragraph (15) of section 3, which contains language stating that it is the policy of the United States to continue to object to exceptions to the International Control List for the USSR. At the same time that this legislation is being submitted, the United States is actively engaged in discussions with our allies on how best to re-orient the COCOM export control regime in light of the new relationship with these states. Because the COCOM regime is multilateral, reform in this area must focus on diplomatic rather than legislative efforts.

Section 203—Prohibitions and restrictions on importations of strategic and critical materials into the United States

This section authorizes exceptions for the countries of Eastern Europe or the independent states of the former Soviet Union to the restrictions contained in section 13 of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act.

Section 204—Representation of countries of Eastern Europe and the Independent States of the former Soviet Union in legal commercial transactions

Section 951 of title 18, United States Code, requires agents of foreign governments, acting in the United States, to notify the Attorney General of their agency relationship. Failure to do this is subject to a criminal penalty. The statute makes exceptions from this registration requirement for accredited diplomats and other officially acknowledged government representatives, and members of their staffs who are not United States citizens. It also makes exceptions for persons engaged in legal commercial transactions, but qualifies this exception by excluding from it representatives of the Soviet Union, the German Democratic Republic and Czechoslovakia, which no longer exist, as well as Hungary, Poland, Bulgaria, Rumania and Cuba, unless special exemption is authorized by the Attorney General. The amendment would eliminate the country-specific exceptions for all these countries except Cuba. Instead, the President would determine, in light of changing relationships, which countries pose threats to the national security interests of the United States that require application of the notification provisions of this statute to commercial representatives of foreign governments.

Section 205—Procedures regarding transfers of certain Department of Defense-funded items

Subsection (a) of this section would amend section 709(d) of the Department of Defense Appropriations Authorization Act, 1975, under which exports to controlled countries of goods, technology, and industrial techniques developed as a result of certain research and development programs are subject to special review procedures. The amendment would modify the definition of controlled countries to delete the reference to the Soviet Union and the countries of Eastern Europe, and replace it with a definition based on countries designated by the President.

Subsection (b) would repeal section 223 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, which prohibits the transfer of military technology developed with funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Strategic Defense Initiative unless the President makes a determination regarding the transfer that Congress approves by joint resolution.

Section 206—Lend lease

This section authorizes the President to waive the application of the second sentence of section 404(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-618) to any of the independent states of the former Soviet Union for such period of time as he determines to be appropriate.

Section 207—Soviet slave labor

This section repeals section 1906 of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988, which contains a congressional statement that the President should express to Soviet Union moral opposition of the United States to the slave labor policies of the Soviet Union.

Section 208—Multilateral Export Controls Enhancement Amendments Act

This section eliminates findings language contained in section 2442(1) of the multilateral Export Control Enhancement Amendments Act.

TITLE III—CULTURAL, EDUCATIONAL AND EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

Section 301—Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961

This section would amend the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, as amended, to reflect the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved, and there exist now independent states of the former Soviet Union.

Section 302—Soviet-Eastern European research and training

This section would amend the Soviet-Eastern European Research and Training of 1983 to redesignate the Soviet-Eastern European Studies Advisory Committee as the Advisory Committee for Studies of Eastern Europe and the Independent States of the Former Soviet Union, and making other changes that reflect the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved, and there exist now independent states of the former Soviet Union.

Section 303—Fascell Fellowship Act

This section would amend the title heading of section 1002 of the Fascel Fellowship Act to reflect the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved, and there exist now independent states of the former Soviet Union.

Section 304—Board for International Broadcasting

This section would amend the Board for International Broadcasting Act of 1973 (the "BIB Act") to reflect the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved, and there exist now independent states of the former Soviet Union. It would also repeal sections 307 and 308 of the Board for International Broadcasting Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1984 and 1985. The provisions of this section are without prejudice to the repeal of the BIB Act in the proposed United States International Broadcasting Act of 1993, which repeal would be effective no earlier than September 30, 1994.

Section 305—Scholarship programs for developing countries

This section would repeal subsections (6) and (7) of section 601 of the Foreign Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987, which describe the risk that scholarship programs by Soviet-bloc governments entail in increasing the likelihood that potential future leaders of the developing world will be educated in Soviet-bloc countries.

Section 306—Elimination of report on Soviet participants in exchange programs that jeopardize national security interests

This section would repeal section 126 of the Department of State Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1982 and 1983, under which the Secretary of State is required to submit annually to Congress a list of Soviet nationals participating during the upcoming year in certain US–USSR exchanges, and to include a determination that these programs will not jeopardize United States national security interests.

TITLE IV—ARMS CONTROL

Section 401—Arms Control and Disarmament Act

This section would make several amendments to the Arms Control and Disarmament Act to reflect the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved, and there exist now independent states of the former Soviet Union.

Section 402—Provisions in Arms Export Control Act

This section would amend the provisions of the Arms Export Control Act related to transfers of certain CFE Treaty-Limited Equipment to NATO members. The proposed amendments would replace references to the "Warsaw Pact countries" with references to the countries of the Eastern Group of States Parties to the CFE Treaty.

Section 403—Reports

This section would repeal the reporting requirements contained in section 1002 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1986 and section 906 of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1989.

Section 404—Joint resolution on United States/Soviet direct communication link

This section would amend Public Law 99–85 to reflect the fact that the direct communication link is now with Russia.

TITLE V—PROVISIONS RELATED TO DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

Section 501—Travel restrictions

This section would amend section 216 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956, under which the Secretary of State is required to apply the same generally applicable restrictions to the travel while in the United States of personnel (and family members and dependents) of certain missions as are applied under Title II of the Act to the members of missions of the USSR. With the dissolution of the USSR, it is not possible to apply this section by its terms. The proposed amendment would make clear nevertheless that appropriate controls may be imposed.

Section 502—Personnel levels and limitations

This section would repeal a series of provisions that are related to personnel levels and limitations. The provisions that would be repealed are section 602 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1990, section 154 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, section 501 of the Intelligence Authorization Act, Federal Year 1988, section 702 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1987, and sections 136 and 813 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987. The proposed deletion of these Soviet-specific provisions, e.g., section 702, does not signify a departure from the general principle that there should be, as nearly as possible and absent unusual circumstances, parity in the numbers of diplomatic personnel between the United States and the countries with which it maintains diplomatic relations. With respect to section 136, the United States fully realizes that foreign nationals employed at diplomatic establishments abroad may pose security concerns. These concerns, however, should be addressed in the selection and placement of such nationals rather than by a general prohibition directed at particular countries.

Section 503—Other provisions related to operation of embassies and consulates

This section would repeal additional provisions related to the operation of Embassies and Consulates. The provisions that would be repealed are sections 132 and 133 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1992 and 1993 (except for section 132(e)), section 134 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991, section 1232 of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1989, sections 151 through 153 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, section 1122 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, section 901 of the Intelligence Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1988, and subsections (a) and (c) of section 1364 of the National Defense Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 1987.

Section 504—Foreign Service Buildings Act

This section would repeal section 4(j) of the Foreign Service Buildings Act, 1926.

TITLE VI—PROVISIONS RELATED TO OCEANS AND ENVIRONMENT

Section 601—Arctic Research and Policy Act

This section would amend the Arctic Research and Policy Act of 1984 to eliminate congressional findings language referring to the Soviet Union, including language that tied the importance of the Arctic to its critical role to national defense as the only common border with the Soviet Union.

Section 602—Fur seal management

This section would amend section 102 of the Fur Seal Act to reflect the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved, and there exist now independent states of the former Soviet Union.

Section 603—Global climate protection

This section would amend section 1106 of the Global Climate Protection Act of 1987, which contains a congressional statement that, in light of the leadership roles of the United States and the Soviet Union in this area, the President should accord climate protection a high priority on the agenda of US–USSR relations. The amendment would change the reference to indicate that climate protection should be accorded a high priority on the United States agenda with each of the independent states of the former Soviet Union.

TITLE VII—REGIONAL AND GENERAL DIPLOMATIC ISSUES

Section 701—U.N. assessments

This section would amend congressional findings language contained in section 717 of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1981, which calls for the President to undertake a diplomatic initiative to obtain payment by the Soviet Union of all its outstanding financial obligations to the United Nations. Under the amendment, neither the Soviet Union nor its successor states would be singled out; instead, more general language would call for appropriate diplomatic initiatives to ensure that all members make payments of all their outstanding financial obligations to the United Nations.

Section 702—Afghanistan

This section would repeal language regarding Afghanistan and the Soviet role in that country contained in section 1241 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989.

Section 703—Angola

This section would repeal language regarding Angola and the Soviet role in that country contained in section 1222 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, and section 405 of the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act of 1976.

Section 704—Independence of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania

This section would amend two provisions dealing with the Baltics. First, it would delete preambular language contained in Public Law 102–17, which contains numerous obsolete references—e.g., references indicating that the Soviet Union is not committed to the policies of Glasnost and Perestroika—and proceeds on the basis of the situation at the time that the Baltic countries remained forcefully incorporated in the Soviet Union. The amendment would leave in force the operational elements of the provision, under which the President was authorized and requested to issue proclamations calling upon the people of the United States to observe "Baltic Freedom Day." Second, this section would modify paragraph (1) of section 1206 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989, to recognize that the "continuing desire and right of the people of the Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania for freedom and independence should be recognized." This is similar to existing language, with the exception that the provision would refer to the desire of the Baltic people for freedom and independence (rather than to their desire for freedom and independence from the Soviet Union) in view of the fact that such freedom and independence has now been achieved and the fact that the Soviet Union has dissolved.

Section 705—Obsolete references in Foreign Assistance Act

This section would modify three provisions in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended. Subsection (a) would replace the references in the policy language of section 501 to "international communism and the countries it controls," the need to "defeat Communist or Communist-supported aggression," and the importance of giving priority to the needs of countries in danger of "becoming victims of active Communist or Communist-inspired aggression or those countries in which the internal security is threatened by Communist-inspired or communist-supported internal subversion." In each case a more general reference would be substituted. Subsection (b) would replace the reference in section 614 to victims of "active Communist or Communist-supported aggression" with a reference to "active aggression." Subsection (c) would repeal section 620(h), which calls upon the President to adopt regulations and establish procedures to insure that United States foreign aid is not used in a manner that promotes the foreign aid projects of activities of "the Communist-bloc countries."

Section 706—Sense of Congress on review of policy toward U.S.S.R.

This section would repeal section 24 of the International Security Assistance Act of 1978, which contains hortatory language that the President should make a full review of policy toward the Soviet Union.

TITLE VIII—INTERNAL SECURITY PROVISIONS; SOVIET CONSPIRACY TO ESTABLISH WORLDWIDE COMMUNIST DICTATORSHIP

Section 801—Civil defense

This section would amend a reference in section 501(b)(2) of the Federal Civil Defense Act of 1950 that highlights among the objectives of the civil defense system the need to contribute to perceptions of United States strategic balance with the Soviet Union, which has dissolved.

Section 802—Report on Soviet press manipulation in the United States

This section would repeal section 147 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987, which required an unclassified report to Congress on Soviet and communist misinformation and press manipulation in the United States.

Section 803—Subversive Activities Control Act

This section would repeal most of the provisions of Title I of the Internal Security Act of 1950, as amended. In this Act Congress found, for example, that "there exists a world Communist movement which, in its origins, its development, and its present practice, is a worldwide revolutionary movement whose purpose it is, by treachery, deceit, infiltration into other groups (governmental and otherwise), espionage, sabotage, terrorism, and any other means deemed necessary, to establish a Communist totalitarian dictatorship in the countries throughout the world through the medium of a world-wide Communist organization." The Act imposed a variety of restrictions on Communist and Communist-front organizations, and created the Subversive Activities Control Board. Many of these provisions have already lapsed or been ruled to have various constitutional infirmities. The criminal provisions prohibiting disclosure of classified information by government officials to agents of foreign governments would be retained, with conforming changes to reflect other modifications being proposed by this section. In addition, section 17, specifying that the criminal provision is in addition to (not in modification of) other criminal laws, would be retained, as would be a general provision allowing the Secretary of Defense and military commanders to impose security restrictions on military facilities.

TITLE IX—MISCELLANEOUS

Section 901—Foreign Relations Authorization Act, fiscal years 1988 and 1989

This section would repeal sections 1201 through 1204 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1988 and 1989.

This section would repeal sections 148 and 805 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987.●

By Mr. LAUTENBERG:

S. 1297. A bill to establish community-based partnerships to fight crime in public and assisted housing; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS AGAINST CRIME ACT

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Community Partnerships Against Crime Act, or COMPAC, a bill to expand and strengthen the Federal Government's commitment to fighting crime in public and assisted housing. The bill is a product of a joint effort between myself and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Henry Cisneros, who has included the proposal as part of a broader housing bill which is being submitted to the Congress.

Mr. President, the Community Partnership Against Crime Act builds on legislation I developed in 1988, the Public and Assisted Housing Drug Elimination Act, or PAHDEA, which established a competitive grant program that provides funds to housing authorities and residents for antidrug initiatives. Funds can be used to hire additional security personnel; to establish, equip, and train tenant patrols; to make physical improvements designed to enhance security; and for initiatives designed to reduce the use of illegal drugs, such as prevention, referral, and treatment programs.

PAHDEA has had a significant, positive impact in housing authorities throughout the country. Residents in many areas report substantial improvements in their living environments, as improved security programs have eliminated drug dealing and crime. However, the program remains limited in scope, and the need for assistance has overwhelmed available resources.

The Community Partnerships Against Crime Act would expand and enhance PAHDEA in several ways.

First, it would broaden PAHDEA's scope to apply to all types of crime, not simply crime that is drug related. While drugs remain a serious problem in many housing developments, and are directly related to many crimes, there are other types of criminal activity that also demand a response.

Second, COMPAC would significantly increase the resources available to fight crime. In the current fiscal year, $145.5 million was available for grants to public housing authorities under PAHDEA. This was sufficient to fund antidrug programs at only 438 of the roughly 3,200 housing authorities nationwide. The scarcity of funding has discouraged many authorities from even applying. Of those that do apply, 48 percent are rejected, including some with serious crime problems.

COMPAC proposes an authorization level of $265 million in fiscal year 1994 and $325 million in fiscal year 1995. This should better meet the demand for funding, though inevitably some needs would remain unmet.

A third feature of COMPAC is that it will encourage involvement of a broad range of community-based groups, and residents of neighboring HUD-owned or assisted housing, in the development and implementation of anticrime plans. This reflects Secretary Cisneros's commitment to working on problems through a broad-based, community-wide approach. I agree entirely with this approach, and believe it is essential to the success of anticrime programs. Under COMPAC, as under PAHDEA, authorities that involve the community will be at a significant competitive advantage in the grant selection process. The legislation goes beyond the existing program in highlighting the importance of involving not only community-based groups, but neighboring residents as well.

The next major element of COMPAC would target opportunities for long-term commitments of funding to housing authorities with serious crime problems. This is designed to respond to concerns that have been raised by some housing authorities about the current program, which makes grants available for 1- and 2-year periods. Many authorities have found that the lack of long-term certainty has made it more difficult to hire drug counselors and other personnel, and to plan their anticrime programs.

To respond to the need for greater certainty, COMPAC proposes two modifications to PAHDEA. First, the legislation would allow housing authorities with especially severe crime problems to apply for renewable grants. Winners of these grants, so long as they perform in a satisfactory manner, would be assured of funding for 5 years, without the necessity of competing against other housing authorities for the scarce resources available.

Housing authorities not eligible for renewable grants could compete for grants of up to 2 years. To assure greater certainty of continued funding, the Secretary would be authorized to provide a scoring preference to those housing authorities seeking to extend programs funded by a prior grant, if they are performing well.

While these two provisions will provide greater certainty for housing authorities that win grants, some have suggested that we go further, and automatically provide grants to all authorities with crime problems. I understand why some authorities would prefer such an entitlement, and I am sympathetic to their concerns. At the same time, a broad-based formula approach has some significant disadvantages.

Even with the increase proposed in COMPAC, there simply is not enough money to provide a meaningful allocation to all authorities with real needs. Therefore, either some needy authorities would have to be excluded from a formula altogether, or the amount of funding distributed would be insufficient to mount an effective anticrime program in many areas.

COMPAC would avoid the need to set an arbitrary cutoff, while allowing meaningful grant amounts, by targeting grants to housing authorities that score highest on four selection criteria: First, the extent of the applicant's crime problem, second, the quality of the applicant's anticrime plan, third, the capability of the applicant to carry out the plan, and fourth, the extent to which the applicant involves residents and the local community in the design and implementation of anticrime plans. Each of these factors deserves to be considered, to ensure that scarce resources are provided where the needs are greatest, and where grants will be put to their best use.

Beyond targeting scarce resources effectively, COMPAC's competitive mechanism creates an incentive for housing authorities to produce high quality anticrime plans. Research has shown that for anticrime programs to work, it is essential that authorities work closely with their residents and with the local community. This means, for example, involving youth groups, drug counseling centers, and schools, enlisting the support of local elected officials, and ensuring that local law enforcement agencies are committed to addressing the crime problem in public housing. Competition creates an often-needed incentive for authorities to invest their time and effort in this kind of outreach, since HUD evaluates outreach efforts in selecting applications.

I should note that the legislation does allow HUD considerable discretion in structuring the mechanism by which grants are selected, so long as that mechanism is consistent with the selection criteria established in the legislation. Thus, for example, HUD could choose to give greater weight to the extent of the crime problem, the first selection criterion, in the evaluation of applications, a step that I would support.

Mr. President, I want to thank Secretary Cisneros for his help and cooperation in putting together this legislation, and for his commitment to fighting crime in public housing. I appreciate it, and look forward to working closely with the Department as the bill moves through the legislative process, and as we seek funding for the program.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY (NED)

• Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, sometime this week the full Senate will take up legislation that will ask Members to make a judgment on the National Endowment for Democracy [NED]. The legislation could be both an authorization bill and an appropriations bill. I strongly urge Members to support continued funding for the NED when these bills reach the floor.

The National Endowment for Democracy has been in existence for a decade and has been one of the most effective organizations in the world in supporting democracy and democratic institution-building. The NED and its core grantees have been involved globally in helping nondemocratic societies transition to open political systems, sustain those fledgling democratic societies once the transition has begun, and strengthen democratic institutions during the difficult post transition phase of democratic conversion. Whether supporting a free press, civic education, free and fair elections, government accountability, free market practices, or labor organizing, the NED has helped play a catalytic role in promoting open and pluralistic civil societies around the world.

I have been privileged to be a member of the NED board of directors for the past year and have been able to observe first hand and up close the vigorous review process on all proposals before the Board. I have been deeply impressed by the quality, diligence, and dedication of the entire NED family. I have been equally impressed by the fact that NED has been engaged in its worldwide activities with a comparatively small staff, low overhead costs, and a relatively modest budget. Much of the work of its core institutes is done by volunteers who are not paid, who give up free vacation time, and who wish to contribute to grass roots efforts to build democratic societies abroad.

There should be little doubt about NED's success in promoting democratic values and practices, about its international reputation, or about its contribution to beating back threats to democracy from authoritarianism, communism, repression, and statism. Letters, in the form of testimonials and endorsements, have come in from around the world urging continued support for NED. They come from national leaders, reformers, democrats, from people of all persuasions and orientations who share one common overarching value: that freedom and democracy are values worth having because they lead to a better and more enriching life with greater dignity and purpose. NED has been an important part of the experiences of these distinguished individuals as they grappled with problems in bringing democracy to their countries. Comparable endorsements have poured in from U.S. Government leaders, the press, and others in virtually every sector of our own society.

This global endorsement should not be surprising. The NED has enjoyed strong bipartisan support here in the United States and in the Congress ever since it was established. It received the enthusiastic support of Presidents Reagan and Bush and is now a major foreign policy priority of President Clinton. Democrats and Republicans, liberals and conservatives, academicians, practitioners, businessmen, political activists, amateurs and professionals openly and knowingly praise the work of NED and its four core institutes: the Free Trade Union Institute [FTUI], the Center for International Private Enterprise [CIPE], the International Republican Institute [IRI], and the National Democratic Institute [NDI].

Mr. President, I ask that a representative sample of excerpts from letters and testimonials about NED be included in the RECORD. They come from abroad and at home. It is my hope that these documents will help inform Members of NED's efficacy and that each Member will support the NED provisions in the Foreign Relations authorization bill and in the Commerce, Justice, and State appropriations bill when they come before this body.

The material follows:

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

MISCELLANEOUS ENDORSEMENTS

"NED played a critical role in support of Lithuania's drive to reestablish democracy and national independence. By supplying Sajudis and other grassroots democratic organizations in Lithuania with computers, telefax machines and other technical assistance as well as paper for its democratic press, NED made our enormous task of challenging, and ultimately defeating, the Soviet Empire much easier. * * * NED had the foresight and courage to support us at a time when others in the West preferred to sit on the sidelines or even to support Goliath against David * * * Lithuania's democratic forces need NED's assistance today as much as they needed its help in 1989 and 1990 * * * the return of anti-democratic regimes in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union and the resurgence of imperial forces in Russia is an ever-present threat not just to the citizens of those countries but also to those of the United States."—Vytautas Landsbergis, former President of Lithuania.

"We think the democratic revolution in Ukraine is not yet finished. The old communist nomenclature changed its name and called itself democratic. It is still in power and does its best against development of real democracy in Ukraine. So we are in the position that the help of the National Endowment for Democracy is still very important for Ukraine. We are grateful to NED for its contribution to the development of democracy. That is the best proof of the American peoples' devotion to democratic ideals."—From a letter signed by nine members of the Ukrainian parliament, including representatives of the Independent Miners Trade Union, the Ukrainian Legal Foundation, several independent publications and the Ukrainian Centre for Independent Political Research.

"Practically speaking, the endowment is the only grant-giving organization which focuses its activities in the post-totalitarian countries directly on supporting the work of non-governmental organizations. In this way, it promotes the emergence of civil society, which serves as the basic guarantee that the future development of these countries will follow along a democratic path. * * * The closing of the Endowment poses a danger * * * which can best be characterized by the proverb, "penny wise, pound foolish."—Elena Bonner, widow of Andrei Sakharov.

"Your organization provides important support to independent media organizations in Russia. * * * In contrast to the numerous other foreign aid programs * * * the Endowment has always economically and effectively used its allocated resources. * * * We would like to raise the hope that the activities of the Endowment, which pursue the noble goal of helping democracy triumph in Russia, will continue."—V. Davidov, Chairman of the press syndicate "The Globe," Moscow, Russia.

"I want to thank you for your ongoing support of the work of the Center for Anti-War Action and for your generous financial backing of our conference on war crimes and the International War Tribunal. * * * The National Endowment for Democracy not only made this important meeting and future contacts and collaboration possible, but also set a significant example for others committed to freedom and human rights to follow."—Vesna Pesic, Director, Center for Anti-War Action, Belgrade.

"NED's activity is the mortar which binds together the bricks which together make up the civil society we so much need * * * NED's support gives us the moral and material means to serve a cause dear to us all. * * * It isn't anymore a short, violent battle of arms. It is a long tenacious battle of arms. It is a long tenacious battle to change the mentality of a society. We shall win this struggle the day we shall be able to say truthfully that the people decided their future through their own will."—Luminita Petrescu, Executive Director, Humanitas Foundation, Romania.

"Because of what NED has done for Iraq since the Gulf War, it has been possible for Iraqi writers and human rights activists to get their ideas and aspirations into Iraq. * * * Reports still reach me of the effect of this kind of work in creating a new and enriching climate of ideas on issue of democracy and the imperative for a central focus on human rights in the building of a new order in Iraq. None of this would have been possible without the backing of the National Endowment for Democracy. * * * The work of the NED affects millions of lives and must continue."—Kanan Makiya, Iraqi author of Republic of Fear and Cruelty of Silence.

"In my experience, the Endowment is the only institution prepared to assist fledgling organizations committed and richer institutions, the Endowment does not look for glamorous or elaborate projects, but seeks hands-on sustained effort that works and can have an impact particularly at the grassroots level. It provides support, encouragement and hope for struggling democrats often working under difficult conditions. * * * The end of the Cold War offers an unprecedented chance of success for efforts by the endowment at strengthening a democratic culture among developing nations. * * * Such activity is now "pro-people" and can only be rejected by dictators who constitute a threat to their own countrymen and to world peace. It is in the interest of civilization as a whole to seize this opportunity and, through peaceful, cost-effective means, assist democratic groups to develop and sow the seeds of democracy. * * * I would like to thank the Endowment for having the vision to realize that supporting democracy is not merely a Cold War tool. Iraqi democrats, through the intermediary of the Iraq Foundation, have benefited from this vision and appreciate the Endowment's commitment."—Rend Franke, Executive Director, Iraq Foundation.

"The pro-democracy movements of many countries, including China, are directly encouraged by NED's efforts. It is true that the Cold War is over, but that does not mean that democracy has been achieved. In fact, many countries in today's world are still ruled by oligarchic dictatorships, still lack freedom of speech, still have no meaningful elections and still hold political prisoners. Therefore, NED's functions are still absolutely necessary for the leadership of the US in international affairs. * * * History has shown many times that a dictator who relies on massacre and suppression to maintain his rule at home is frequently untrustworthy in international affairs as well. In this sense the problem of democracy is one of the world-wide problems, like that of environment. Without step-by-step improvement in the world-wide environment for human rights and democracy one cannot expect a complete solution of many international problems."—Fang Lizhi, Chinese astrophysicist.

"We, the Third World people in Asia, Africa and Latin America, still have a life-and-death struggle for democracy, freedom and justice against ruthless dictatorships. The NED's support for our struggles, in the face of severely limited resources, is very crucial and could make a difference between total victory and defeat for the democratic forces. * * * We have achieved much in our struggle because of the support given by NED. * * * Reducing or cutting off NED's support would surely weaken to a great extent democratic movements in general and our struggle in particular."—Dr. Sein Win, Prime Minister, National Coalition Government of the Union of Burma.

"The NED is unique in recognizing the necessity for democratic political development as a global and long-range project. By giving concrete support in a coherent and continuous fashion to a wide diversity of grassroots indigenous movements, the Endowment is giving voice to the victims, providing them with the basic and indispensable tools with which they can set about constructing their democratic future. * * * NED supports a wide range of programs, large and small, provided that they are dynamic and original efforts which make a positive advancement toward democratic progress. * * * The NED, with its unique and far-sighted objectives, is truly pushing back the frontiers of democracy for present and future generations."—Vo Van Ai, President, Que Me, Vietnam Committee on Human Rights.

"Of all the American funding agencies, the Endowment deserves high praise for the quality of its staff, the level of understanding and awareness about the regions it serves, and the assistance and support it provides to its grantees. * * * The National Endowment for Democracy is not mired in paper, bureaucracy or inaccessibility. Operating as a professional foundation, the Endowment has been able to successfully address the needs of new democracies with energy, insight, commitment and dispatch."—Raymond Shonholtz, President, Partners for Democratic Change, San Francisco, CA.

"There is no other US government program which has done so much to secure democracy, freedom and peace in Latvia. The National Endowment for Democracy supported both morally and financially the efforts of the American Latvian Association to aid pro-democracy forces in Soviet-occupied Latvia. This support came at a time when other parts of the US government were unable or unwilling to provide overt help to groups and individuals seeking to reestablish freedom and democracy. * * * I feel it is not overstating the case to say that the National Endowment for Democracy is in part responsible for the victory of democracy in Latvia. The National Endowment for Democracy must be preserved, to help consolidate the gains democracy has made in our world. Latvia, other new or renewed democratic in Europe and around the world and the United States itself have too much at stake to allow America's most successful exponent of democracy reform to die."—Ints Rupners, President, American Latvian Association.

"We have a grant from the National Endowment for Democracy to place recycled computers in organizations to help develop democracy. Our work has had a profound impact on the target organizations. * * * The League of Women Voters in Prague, Czech Republic, keeps its membership list on a donated computer. The Congressional Research office of the Ukrainian parliament publishes 30 journals a week, all with donated computers. The Open Media Foundation in South Africa teaches freedom of speech with donated computers. Old Star Wars accounting computers are on-duty making freedom of speech a reality in Romania. The list goes on and on. Had NED purchased the equipment it would average $3,000 per system. We delivered the machines, on the ground, ready to use for $100 each. This is cheap. And it is indicative of the work being done with NED's money. NED is not a relic of the Cold War. It is a living organization working under different conditions to stimulate democracy."—Alexander Randall, President, East-West Education Development Foundation, Boston, MA.

"The NED is prepared to provide modest but crucial support to citizen projects too small to interest USAID and its ponderous mechanisms. Further, it has brought the skills and talents of many Wisconsin citizens together with those in other countries struggling to build democratic structures and understanding. Former Eau-Claire county administrators have taught regional governance in Belarus, for example * * * and I am sure there are many other Wisconsin leaders like me whose efforts have been engaged in translating US policy into human experience through the NED."—Sarah Harder, Office of the Vice-Chancellor, University of Wisconsin, Eau-Claire.

"The Mershon Center has underway with the Polish Ministry of National Education and major Polish universities the largest, most comprehensive project on democracy education in Central Europe—"Education for Democratic Citizenship in Poland." Among other things, this project is developing curriculum guides for civic education for primary and secondary schools, a civics course that will reach nearly one million primary school students a year, a university course for new teachers on "schools and a democratic society" and five centers for civic and economic education across Poland. This project would not exist without support from the National Endowment for Democracy. * * * Polish philosopher Leszek Kolakowski echoed our own founding fathers when he said "Freedom is never assured. It is always to be defended." In my judgment, the Endowment is worthy of strong, bi-partisan support; you are making an invaluable contribution to the development of democracy across the world and thereby to the defense of American democracy."—Charles Herman, Director, Professor of Political Science, Mershon Center, Ohio State University.

WHAT OTHERS ARE SAYING ABOUT THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

"The NED has proved to be one of our most effective means for supporting grass-roots trade union, business and citizen groups, which form the basis for democratic reform. By fostering such reforms abroad, we not only project our own values, we also increase our own security and create better partners for trade and global problem solving."—President Bill Clinton, June 16, 1993.

"Backers of NED point out that the Cold War may be over, but the triumph of democracy in large parts of Asia, Africa and Eastern Europe is far from ensured. All sorts of hostile elements are ready to strangle democracy in the crib. * * * The Senate next month has a chance to undo the damage [of the House vote to kill NED] and keep the United States on the side of building democracy in the world."—David Broder, July 4, 1993.

"The Senate should reverse the House's shortsighted action and restore NED funding. The NED is a dynamic, flexible and cost-effective means of furthering U.S. interests by promoting the development of stable democracies in strategically important parts of the world. The U.S. cannot afford to disarm unilaterally in the international war of ideas."—Executive memorandum, The Heritage Foundation, July 8, 1993.

"The National Endowment has done very effective work. The fact of the matter is, establishing a democracy is a tough, difficult task. It is far more than just running an election. You are building the institutions of democracy, and that is what the Endowment has expertise in."—Congressman Lee Hamilton, June 22, 1993.

"We have observed the Endowment's programs first-hand. They work, and they are cost-effective. We unanimously urge continued funding for efforts that are contributing to the development of democratic institutions and free market economies abroad. * * * Now more than ever, the National Endowment for Democracy is an investment in America's future."—Tom C. Korologos, Chairman, U.S. Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy, July 9, 1993.

"The work of the National Endowment for Democracy and its affiliates in promoting civic education and the transition to free market economies and pluralistic democracies has proven to be extremely cost-effective. The money spent in promoting democracy is money saved in responding to civil conflicts."—Former President Jimmy Carter, June 30, 1993.

"The NED helps democracy by means of small but life-giving grants for trade unions, student groups, publications, legal assistance for the persecuted, and other measures. It has a record of success in helping democracy put down roots in stony social soil."—George F. Will, July 11, 1993.

"How, in 1993, less than two years after the dissolution of the Soviet Union, less than four years after the fall of the Berlin Wall, less than 12 years after the National Endowment for Democracy started working with Lech Walesa and other believers in democracy in Eastern Europe, within 10 years after the National Endowment for Democracy went to the Philippines and went to Chile, went to Namibia, and went all over the world where the struggle for free elections and democracy was going on and winning support, how can we possibly contemplate wiping out the key part of America's program."—Congressman Howard Berman, June 22, 1993.

"Often mistakenly portrayed as an anti-communistic relic, NED is instead a pioneer of the pro-democracy activism that emerged on every continent in the 1980s."—Scripps Howard News Service editorial, July 3, 1993.

"The National Endowment embodies America's broad-based and bipartisan support for freedom. The Endowment's pioneering programs are models of how democratic principles can be given practical expression in every single region of the world."—Secretary of State Warren Christopher, April 26, 1993.

"The National Endowment for Democracy, during the Cold War, played a vital role from El Salvador to Poland. In the transition out of the Cold War, it plays an even more important role."—Congressman Dana Rohrabacher, June 22, 1993.

"Iraqis fighting Saddam Hussein say one American organization in particular helps keep alive their hopes that democracy has a chance in their country. China's dissidents, at home or in exile, know and bless its name—the National Endowment for Democracy."—A.M. Rosenthal, July 13, 1993.•

TRIBUTE TO KENTUCKY'S BLUE RIBBON HIGH SCHOOLS

• Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to six outstanding Blue Ribbon Kentucky high schools.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Assumption High School, Belfry High School, Elizabethtown High School, Fort Campbell High School, St. Xavier High School, and Williamsburg High School for their exemplary achievement in secondary education. Recently, these fine Kentucky high schools were honored as Blue Ribbon Schools by the U.S. Department of Education. All six of these high schools will be formally recognized at a ceremony in Washington, DC, this September. I have had the distinct pleasure of visiting several of these schools in the past and I intend to visit more of these outstanding schools in the future to get a firsthand look at their accomplishments.

The recognition of these institutions as Blue Ribbon Schools is particularly laudable considering the vast number of nominations for the award. Only 260 high schools nationwide were awarded this Blue Ribbon honor. Each nominated school was carefully scrutinized by neutral educators. Their evaluation included consideration of curriculum, test scores, general school records, and the overall attitude of the student body. In light of these rigid standards, it is clear that these schools warrant even more praise and respect.

Mr. President, I applaud these Kentucky high schools, not only because they effectively meet local, State, and national education objectives, but also their diligent efforts to provide Kentucky's youth with superior opportunities and brighter futures. It is clear that these exceptional secondary schools have set the standard by which other Kentucky schools should be judged.•

RETROACTIVE ESTATE TAX A BAD IDEA

• Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have been troubled as a matter of policy by efforts to legislate tax policy retroactively, as it seems to me that the principle of fundamental fairness dictates that taxpayers should only incur tax liability prospectively so that they can plan accordingly. Therefore, I am concerned about a provision in the budget reconciliation bill (H.R. 2264) that provides for a retroactive increase in the Federal estate and gift tax.

While I support this provision if applied prospectively, estate planners, like all individuals and businesses, make financial decisions based on the existing tax rate, and we should not take actions that undermine their legitimate decisions based on current law.

I would like to bring to my colleagues' attention two editorials that recently appeared in the New York Times and Wall Street Journal that point out the various concerns about the retroactive clause. The first is written by Shirley Peterson, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue from 1992 to 1993; the second is written by Gregory Jenner, former tax counsel for minority staff of the Senate Finance Committee.

I believe that both authors eloquently argue against the retroactive application of this provision. Mr. President, I ask that these two editorials be printed in the RECORD.

The editorials follow:

MORE BAD NEWS ABOUT DEATH AND TAXES

(By Gregory F. Jenner)

As the House and Senate conferees iron out the differences in their versions of President Clinton's deficit-reduction package, virtually no attention is being paid to an unfair, and potentially unconstitutional aspect of the package's estate tax rate increase.

The estates of certain individuals who have died since Jan. 1 face higher taxes even though the tax rate increase was not part of the law on the date they passed away. The estate tax is an excise tax imposed on the right to transfer property at the time of death. If this provision is enacted, it will be the first time in the 77-year history of the estate tax that the rates have been increased retroactively.

Contrary to popular opinion, the estate tax does not apply only to the very wealthy. Under current law, the tax begins to apply for taxable estates valued at $600,000 and above. Thus where the decedent has no surviving spouse (and thus no marital deduction), the ownership of a fairly decent home, a couple of life insurance policies, and a modest amount of savings will likely trigger the tax. Advocates for small business have long argued that the imposition of the estate tax beginning at $600,000 of assets is potentially ruinous to a small, family-owned operation.

But the issue raised by the retroactive increase goes beyond the appropriate level and threshold of the tax. (Estates with less than $2.5 million in assets will not be affected by the rate increases.) Rather, the question is one of fairness: Is it appropriate for Congress to increase the tax on the estate of an individual after that person is already deceased? Even to the most fervent supporter of wealth redistribution, there is something about a retroactive increase that is just not right.

In many cases, the assets that make up the estate are not the vast dynasties that people expect to be subject to the estate tax. Rather, they are businesses that the decedent and his spouse built over the years through hard work and the reinvestment of profits.

For example, a midsize farm of 3,000 acres in Iowa, where farmland is currently valued at approximately $2,500 an acre, would be valued at $7.5 million, plus the value of the equipment. An estate consisting primarily of such a farm would owe $250,000 in additional taxes because of a 5% retroactive increase. The likely outcome is that the farm would be sold off to pay the taxes.

The result is even more egregious if the transfer is subject to the generation skipping transfer (GST) tax. The GST tax applies to the same property, over and above the estate tax, when the property is left, for example, by grandparents to grandchildren. The GST tax rate equals the maximum estate tax rate. Thus for people leaving property to grandchildren, the retroactive increase would be 10% instead of 5%—on top of the current high rates.

Here the example might be, say, a small printing plant in Washington state that the decedent and her husband started from scratch and that eventually grew to a $20 million business. If the decedent left the plant equally to two grandchildren, the total tax (estate and GST) would be approximately $15 million, an effective rate of 75%.

For those heirs faced with selling off the family business in order to pay estate and GST taxes, the process of disposing of a lifetime of work takes a tremendous amount of planning. These taxes must be paid within nine months of the decedent's death; thus the planning decisions are made well in advance, since it often takes time to sell off the family business. For decedents dying after Jan. 1 of this year, many of these decisions have already been made and implemented, often at significant cost to the estate. Is it fair for Congress to ruin these planning decisions by imposing a higher tax rate retroactively?

Beyond the question of fairness is one of constitutionality. Many tax experts believe that a retroactive increase in the estate tax rates would violate the due process clause of the Constitution. Unlike income tax rates, which apply to income earned during a certain period, estate tax rates apply to assets owned at a particular moment in time—the date of death. Where the tax-rate increase could not have been anticipated—in this case, before the president's State of the Union address on Feb. 17, at the earliest—there is a serious question whether Congress has the power to impose a retroactive change in the rates.

The fairest decision would be to apply the tax rate increase prospectively only—beginning on the date the bill is signed by the president.

Most members of Congress would agree that increasing the estate tax rate retroactively is unfair. But to cancel out the retroactive part of the tax would reduce by $237 million the revenue that it would raise, and that loss would have to be made up somewhere else to meet the president's deficit-reduction target. Once again, Congress is faced with the choice of good policy or more revenue. In the past, Congress has usually made the right choice when confronted with this dilemma: For the past 77 years it has honored a tradition of prospective-only increases in the estate tax. With the serious questions about fairness and constitutionality that a retroactive change would raise, there is no good reason to change that pattern now merely for a one-time revenue increase.

DEATH AND (RETROACTIVE!) TAXES

(By Shirley D. Peterson)

WASHINGTON.—Tucked away in the statutory language of President Clinton's budget reconciliation bill, now in a House-Senate conference, is a little noticed provision that would surprise many estate beneficiaries. The measure would unfairly impose a rate increase in estate, gift and generation-skipping taxes that would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

The proposed increase, which would raise the top rate from 50 percent to 55 percent, would hit many estates and beneficiaries, including many owners of family-owned businesses and farms.

Certainty and predictability, important virtues of a tax system, are especially important in estate taxes. Estate plans are usually designed taking into consideration anticipated tax consequences and cannot be altered following death—regardless of any retroactive change in the law.

Consider a man who wishes to provide equality for the children of his first and second marriages. He intends to leave his major asset, stock in the family business, to his son from his first marriage. He also intends to leave an equal provision to the children of his second marriage through life insurance. In January, he writes a will leaving the stock to his son and indicating that the estate taxes will be paid entirely from his son's share. He then buys a life insurance policy, payable to the other children, equal to the value of the stock after payment of taxes. The father dies later that month. If the estate taxes are raised retroactively, his intention to treat his children equally is defeated—the son will pay increased taxes and receive far less than his siblings.

The proposed change is a radical departure from tradition: No retractive change has been imposed since the estate tax was enacted in 1916. As Commissioner of Internal Revenue, I was scolded several times by members of Congress who insisted that retroactive changes should not be allowed under any circumstances.

When I testified at a Senate finance subcommittee hearing in February 1992, Senator David Pryor, Democrat of Arkansas, questioned the appropriateness of retroactive tax regulations. "One of the more disturbing trends that I see in the Federal system is the tendency to move toward more . . . retroactivity," he said. "I do not think it is justified. I do not think it is fair. In fact, I do not even think it is legal." The Senator had a good point. Congress should heed it.

It is remarkable that Congress would consider enacting a retroactive tax increase at the same time that there is legislation with strong support in the Senate and House that would, with few exceptions, deny the Treasury Department the power to apply tax regulations retroactively. That legislation is part of the Taxpayer Bill of Rights, which passed both houses last year but was vetoed by President George Bush.

If, last year members of Congress found it inappropriate for the Treasury to issue retroactive regulations that merely interpret Federal law, how can they now justify making retroactive changes in the law itself?

They should follow the lead of every previous Congress that has considered the issue and change the budget reconciliation bill so that it imposes the rate increase only on the estates of those who die after it becomes law.•

PRAISING THE ARREST OF SKINHEADS IN LOS ANGELES

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, hate crimes and acts of bigotry are tearing this Nation apart. Sadly, those who believe in racial and ethnic superiority continue to spread their hateful message through acts of sheer terror. This was recently illustrated by an Anti-Defamation League report which showed a rise in hate crimes committed by neo-Nazi skinheads. These ignorant and cowardly acts must be strongly and swiftly countered by law enforcement agencies throughout the country.

Today, I applaud the outstanding work performed by numerous agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, as well as numerous branches of the Los Angeles law enforcement community. In a coordinated effort, these talented and dedicated agents were able to infiltrate a number of Los Angeles area white supremacist hate groups.

The efforts of these courageous individuals led to the arrest of eight people on charges ranging from illegal weapons possession to conspiracy to manufacture pipe bombs to attack an African-American church in Los Angeles. These arrests may have saved countless innocent lives, and they send a strong message that such activity will not be tolerated, and those who fail to heed these warnings must be aware that they will be punished to the fullest extent of the law.

Our Nation owes a tremendous amount of gratitude to the agents and officers involved with the investigation, infiltration, and ultimate arrest of these individuals.•

PROJECT FUTURE FORCE

• Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, my deep commitment to combating juvenile justice prompts me to call to the attention of my colleagues a new program that brings law enforcement, business, school and community leaders together on behalf of children from at-risk environments. The program is Project Future Force and this week, in the high country of northern Arizona, it has brought together more than 100 youngsters to a special camp run by deputies and detention officers from one of Arizona's major law enforcement agencies—the Maricopa County sheriff's office.

At the camp, fourth- and fifth-grade boys and girls are engaging in activities designed to promote the values of family, community, and school over the negative pressures that can lead to drug abuse, gang activity, violent crime, and failure to complete a basic education. Camp participants include children from barrios, poor rural communities, and schools throughout the greater Phoenix area in which the Maricopa County sheriff's office conducts D.A.R.E. [Drug Abuse Resistance Education] programs. They are children who have not yet been in trouble, but who have been identified by sheriff's

D.A.R.E. officers and school teachers as youngsters facing serious risks. Activities to encourage self esteem, goal setting, conflict resolution, and team involvement are part of the camp's agenda. This week's program also includes sports, fishing, hiking, and other activities under supervision of sheriff's personnel. Yet, the camp is only one component of the Project Future Force concept.

With backing from the Sheriff's Youth Assistance Foundation and one of the Nation's leading public power and water utilities, the Salt River project, Project Future Force offers ongoing support and guidance to its participants. Through the fourth and fifth grade, deputies will meet weekly with individual youngsters and serve as advisers and leaders on Project Future Force outing to local museums, parks, sports events, and cultural sites. At the sixth grade, participants will be enrolled in formal D.A.R.E. courses, invited to become peer leaders to younger children and encouraged to enroll in career mentoring programs at the junior high and high school levels.

Behind Project Future Force is the view that early intervention and prevention are preferable by far to prosecution and detention. The program also takes the view that powerful community partnerships, not piecemeal endeavors, are needed to help today's youth overcome serious challenges and difficulties. In this vein, the sheriff's office and Salt River project deserve high commendations for their vision and commitment to creating a major community partnership on behalf of young people. With continued commitment and support, Project Future Force promises to become a model program for central Arizona and other communities around the Nation.•

NEW LEADERSHIP AT THE ACLU WASHINGTON OFFICE

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I would like to include in the RECORD an article from the Los Angeles Daily Journal about Laura Murphy Lee. Ms. Lee became director of the Washington office of the American Civil Liberties Union on February 1 of this year. She has had a distinguished career thus far, and I am confident that she will do an excellent job in this important position. I ask that this article be printed in full in the RECORD in its entirety.

The article follows:

LOBBYIST PLANS FOR NEW ROLE

(By Charley Roberts)

WASHINGTON.—The view out Laura Murphy Lee's window is a constant reminder of the challenges she faces in her new role.

Across the street from her second-floor office is what was once the home of Hiram Johnson, the senator from California from 1917 to 1945, stands the shimmering white marble temple of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Lee, who became director of the Washington office of the American Civil Liberties Union on Feb. 1, says the seemingly beautiful view makes her "sad."

That's because it reminds her that Justice Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan are no longer on the court.

"I wonder what the court will do to us now," she said.

Already, a Jan. 27, 1992, ruling—rendered by the court six months after Marshall retired—has created work for Lee as the ACLU's new chief lobbyist.

One of Lee's top priorities is to have Congress overturn the court's 6-3 decision in Presley v. Etowah County Commission, 92 Daily Journal D.A.R. 711.

In Presley, the court held that changes made by county commissioners regarding the distribution of power are not subject to prior approval by the Justice Department under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act.

The case grew out of a federal court challenge in Alabama to the at-large election of county commissioners. Under a consent decree, the number of Etowah County commissioners was increased from five to six, to be elected by district.

In 1986, after the first black member since Reconstruction and a new white member were elected, the commission transferred control over county road and bridge maintenance in all six districts to the four white commissioners who had previously exercised this authority in their individual districts.

Lee said if this decision is allowed to stand, it could provide a loophole in the Voting Rights Act for local government entities seeking noncompliance.

'COMFORTABLE WITH CONFRONTATION'

While having to re-fight legislative battles to recoup earlier gains annoys her, Lee, who is separated and has a 3-year-old son, doesn't shrink from the test of wills ahead.

"This is the type of organization where I belong," she said. "I'm comfortable with confrontation and challenge."

In fact, she seems drawn to such situations.

As a teen in the late 1960s, Lee refused to recite the pledge of allegiance in junior high school in racially divided Baltimore. She didn't believe its message of "liberty and justice for all" was relevant to her as a black female.

"I'm willing to say the pledge today," Lee added, "because things have changed."

When the school tried to expel her, she fought back and won. This was no youthful rebellion against adult authority, however. It was a political and social statement born of experience.

"I come from a politically active family," she explained.

ACTIVIST ROOTS

Her father is a lawyer who later became a judge. Her mother is a social worker. Both are activists in Baltimore's black community.

Lee, the youngest of five children in the Murphy family, became an activist at an early age. During the civil unrest after Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination, she worked the telephones while her parents went out into the community to help get people released from custody.

Later, when a brother encouraged her to seek admission to Ivy League universities, a white high school counselor ridiculed the notion and urged her to apply exclusively to predominantly black colleges. Offended, Lee won acceptance to three Ivy League schools and chose Wellesley College, an all-female bastion of wealth and privilege.

After graduating in 1976, she put aside plans to go to law school to join the staff of Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md., a family friend and brother of the late Clarence Mitchell, the legendary Washington Lobbyist for the NAACP.

"My father is still disappointed I didn't go to law school," she said, "but I couldn't wait. Mitchell offered me a chance to make things happen."

The following year, Lee became legislative assistant to Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., who was the first black woman candidate for president.

JOINED ACLU IN 1979

Lee joined the ACLU national staff as a congressional lobbyist in 1979. Over the next four years, she worked on various issues, but she said the high point of her tenure was the renewal and revision of the Voting Rights Act.

As finally adopted, the Voting Rights Amendments of 1982 extended the enforcement provisions of the landmark 1965 act that required preclearance of any changes in election laws in states with a history of discrimination. It also extended the bilingual ballot requirements first adopted in 1975 and established new procedures for states to win release from preclearance.

Additionally, it overturned a 1980 Supreme Court decision that had increased the plaintiff's burden of proof in voting rights cases.

"She demonstrated a real understanding of the complexities of the law," said Laughlin McDonald, director of the ACLU's Southern Regional office, who worked closely with Lee on the amendments.

Lee also demonstrated coolness under fire.

Antonia Hernandez, then a lobbyist for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, recalls attending a meeting where an arch-conservative congressman made anti-Latino comments.

"He was very condescending," remembers Hernandez, who is now president and general counsel of Los Angeles-based MALDEF. "But the reaction of Laura was to carry forward bilingual issues, my issues, and allow me to bring in other issues."

In addition, Hernandez said, Lee is "charming and one hell of a loyal friend."

BRINGS PEOPLE TOGETHER

"She is a good human being with a real sense of balance," Hernandez said. "She doesn't take herself too seriously. Laura is one of those unique individuals who transcends gender. She brings people together. She has a personality that brings out the best in people."

Lee also vividly recalls the incident with the lawmaker.

"That's the closest I have ever come to cussing out a congressman," she said. "But the day I do that is the day I quit."

In 1983, Lee moved to Los Angeles to become director of development for the ACLU Foundation of Southern California.

Ramona Ripston, Southern California ACLU's chief executive, remembers Lee as hard working with impressive people skills. She also recalls that Lee succeeded in meeting the foundation's fund-raising goal that year.

Lee joined a Los Angeles public relations firm, Mixner/Scott, Inc., in 1984. David Mixner is President Clinton's liaison to the homosexual community.

From 1986 to 1987, Lee headed the Southern California office of Assembly Speaker Willie L. Brown, Jr., D-San Francisco. Brown also recruited her to be national finance director for Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign in 1987–88.

Lee was recruited by District of Columbia Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly in 1991 to establish and run a D.C. Office of Tourism and Promotion. Lee said she was taken aback when Kelly first proposed the idea. But she said she changed her mind for three reasons: Kelly represents change. Tourism is the capital city's number one private industry. And the job rounded out Lee's experience in all three levels of government—federal, state and local.

"PERFECT MATCH"

Although happy in that post, Lee said she jumped at the chance to head the ACLU's Washington office because it presented a perfect match with her interests and skills.

Since then, Lee and her staff have been extremely busy because, with the election of a Democratic president, groups like the ACLU suddenly have access to executive branch officials for the first time in 12 years.

However, that doesn't mean she expects to find an ideological soul mate in the White House.

"I hope that Clinton will be better than Reagan and Bush," she said warily.

The first test may come on an omnibus anti-crime bill. Clinton supports capital punishment, and the ACLU opposes it. The bill, like last year's, is expected to make the death penalty available for some 50 federal offenses. It also is expected to address the exclusionary rule and habeas corpus reform. The ACLU is opposed to extending the good-faith exception to warrantless searches and to curtailing post-conviction collateral appeals.

Clinton's new attorney general, Janet Reno, testified at her confirmation hearing in favor of reducing delays in capital cases caused by habeas appeals. However, she said competent counsel need to be provided at all proceedings.

The ACLU advocates requiring competency standards and adequate compensation for court-appointed lawyers in death-penalty cases. The ACLU also is active on privacy, abortion and free-speech issues.•

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION, NOGALES, AZ

• Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I was extremely pleased to hear from Nogales, AZ, of its centennial celebration of the incorporation of this fair city. I would like to congratulate Nogales on this achievement.

Nogales, AZ, has blossomed from a tiny community in 1893 to its present population of 20,000-plus. The growth, not only in population, but in the construction of homes and businesses, speaks so well of the commitment and dedication of those responsible for its progress. Mr. President, I would like the Senate to take note of the great city of Nogales and all that has been achieved there.

Mr. President, again my heartfelt congratulations to all the residents and civic leaders of Nogales for the first 100 years as a true American community and on the next 100 years.•

EARLY GANG PREVENTION CENTERS

• Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, last year's reauthorization of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 was an important step in focusing attention on our youth at risk. Adequate funding for the act is the next crucial step.

Last Congress, I introduced legislation to establish early gang prevention centers which would specifically target children at the elementary school level who are seriously thinking of gang membership. This program builds on my earlier efforts to address the gang problem, the Gang Prevention Grant Program, which became law in 1988. The success of programs funded under this effort pointed out two things: We desperately need to continue working with youth involved with gangs and, we must also broaden our focus to include effective prevention for younger children.

I was pleased when my early gang prevention center legislation passed as part of the reauthorization of the Juvenile Justice Act. Part D of that act allows the Administrator to make grants and to support programs for a wide array of anitgang efforts in schools and communities. While I am pleased to see the attention now given to the gang problem, I feel strongly that programs to target at-risk youth are the best answer to the gang problem. We must concentrate on prevention. We must educate our youth to let them understand that gangs are a dead end. They need support to resist gang membership, as well as alternatives that allow them to pursue healthy avenues for their lives.

It is crucial to focus our energies toward targeting at-risk elementary school children. While I certainly recognize the extent of gang violence in America and the need for programs to address all aspects of this problem, I very much hope that in funding antigang programs, the Administrator will focus on prevention programs for elementary school children.•

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WOFFORD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE GOOD BUSINESS CLIMATE IN SOUTH DAKOTA

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, a very complimentary article appeared in the Los Angeles Times concerning the business climate in my home State of South Dakota. South Dakota has attracted a lot of industry and new businesses by having no State income tax, no State corporate tax, and no special franchise taxes on small business. Our State depends heavily on small business, and we have been doing well in attracting new small businesses. Several newspapers and magazines have written about the enormous economic opportunities in South Dakota and now the Los Angeles Times has published a lengthy article about why several California firms are moving to South Dakota, further proof that South Dakota offers a good climate for entrepreneurship and economic development.

THE ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE PROGRAM

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, today I rise to discuss a topic that is certainly not new to this body—the Essential Air Service [EAS] Program.

The House Appropriations Committee recently eliminated all funding for the EAS program. As my colleagues know, the termination action by the House is not an unprecedented event. The U.S. Senate previously has had to restore funding for this vital program.

I speak today on behalf of South Dakotans and small rural communities all across the Nation. Airline attendants and executives, pilots and passengers have expressed concern over the possible termination of EAS. Their concern is well founded. Elimination of the EAS program could devastate numerous local economies across the country.

Mr. President, I voted against airline deregulation in 1978 when I was a Member of the House of Representatives. I had specific concerns back then about the effect of a deregulated airline industry on rural and small cities. These concerns have become realities in the years since the Airline Deregulation Act was enacted.

Before deregulation, the traveling public was accustomed to modern equipment and convenient scheduling and route structures. Rural communities quickly learned, however, that postderegulation environment meant small airplanes, limited schedules, and inconvenient routes. Delays and cancellations characterized the airline industry in the early 1980's. Air travelers had to pay hundreds of dollars more to travel from a local airport rather than from a larger airport. In some cases, South Dakotans actually had to pay more to travel within the State than to a foreign country.

In 1988, Congress decided to continue the EAS program for another 10 years. Now, with 5 years of authorization remaining in this vital program, the House Appropriations Committee has opted to eliminate essential air transportation funding from all communities presently receiving assistance. Is this action fair? No, it is not fair.

Thousands of constituents in South Dakota and surrounding States have contacted me to say, "Cut Spending First." Mr. President, these people are not talking about slashing the relatively small and inexpensive $38 million Essential Air Service Program. The Senate must remember that this program is, as its name indicates, essential to the economic development of numerous communities across our Nation.

Think back to the early 1960's. Government subsidies for air services peaked at $83 million in 1963. That was nearly 2½ times the amount appropriated annually from 1988 through 1998. Mr. President, the Essential Air Service Program is heading in the right direction. The House Appropriations Committee, in moving to eliminate EAS funding, is heading in the wrong direction.

Since the airline deregulation process began in 1978, small community air services have had numerous difficulties trying to maintain quality air transportation. Huron, SD, is an excellent example of a community providing air service in rural areas.

The Huron air service area covers a region 600 times larger than Washington, DC, yet it contains only a small percentage of Washington, DC's population. There are about 55,000 people in eastern South Dakota who are served by Huron's airport. As a result, the consumer base surrounding Huron clearly is not large enough to adequately fund an air carrier operating from the area. These same complications can be observed in the South Dakota communities of Brookings, Mitchell, and Yankton. Nonetheless, with assistance through EAS, air service from these four vital communities certainly is a major player in South Dakota's economy.

South Dakota has tried to diversify its economy beyond its traditional agricultural base. We have worked to expand and attract numerous industries. Huron, again, is a perfect example. During the past 2 years, Huron has added more jobs than in the previous 10-year period. The long-term loss or severe degradation of air service would affect seriously future economic development opportunities for Huron and other South Dakota communities. Further, a recent study of Fortune 500 companies indicates that 80 percent of those companies would not consider locating in a city without good air service.

Mr. President, I recognize that the EAS Program was enacted in 1978 to be a transition program providing an opportunity for air service from small communities to overcome the uncertainty of deregulation and to achieve prosperity in the future. The situation, however, is not that simple. Many communities must continue to receive such assistance in order to survive. Mr. President, in 1988, Congress made a 10-year pact with the American people to provide EAS assistance to smaller communities. Taking this funding away now would be unjust and unfair.

Mr. President, many problems are currently affecting the airline industry. Some suggested solutions for improving the industry include: Congress should continue EAS funding for communities currently receiving assistance. There should be no reduction in funding from this program unless appropriate measures are taken to reduce an air service's dependence on Federal assistance. Likewise, a structured commercial air service designed to remove the necessity of any EAS subsidy should be implemented. Government should provide guidance to all small communities. We need to emphasize programs, such as code-sharing between an air carrier and a local air service, as a means for rural airports to succeed.

Furthermore, specific Federal rules and regulations presently hinder the operations of airports like the one in Huron. For instance, passengers from Huron are required to travel through other South Dakota cities like Mitchell and Brookings before reaching Minneapolis. Long delays and layovers like these chase consumers away from rural airports.

The Senate once again is in a position to save the EAS Program. I invite my colleagues to support communities in the 35-States that need the EAS Program to ensure continued economic diversification and development. Mr. President, the cost of this vital program is small, but the economic return on this public investment is enormous.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS INFRASTRUCTURE ACT OF 1993

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, today I would like to discuss a significant legislative initiative designed to accelerate private investment in our Nation's telecommunications networks—S. 1086, the Telecommunications Infrastructure Act of 1993. First, I commend the distinguished ranking member of the Commerce Committee, Senator DANFORTH, and the distinguished chairman of the Communications Subcommittee, Senator INOUYE, for their outstanding leadership. S. 1086 is a tribute to their bipartisan cooperation and tireless efforts to craft legislation in a complicated area. It is a good start.

Infrastructure surely is the buzzword of the 1990's. Traditionally, the term primarily was used to describe our transportation networks—moving people and products. Today the word infrastructure more often refers to cable, phone, and satellite networks transporting information and ideas at the speed of light. Every week seems to bring another major newspaper or magazine article describing how the information superhighway will revolutionize our lives. Advanced telecommunications networks promise to change the way we work, educate our children, provide health care, and spend our leisure time. Who will deliver these new services? Every day seems to reveal another strategic alliance between multibillion-dollar companies seeking to spearhead the delivery of services over the information superhighway.

The convergence of computers, telecommunications, and video technology is quickly outpacing our existing regulatory framework. Policies designed for disparate industries do not seem to make sense if multiple providers can offer competing services. Yesterday's rules are not likely to hasten delivery of tomorrow's services. In fact, the legal status quo is a formidable barrier to technological development. Congress has an opportunity to frame a policy for accelerating investment in the information superhighway. Our challenge is to ensure all Americans have access to an on-ramp.

Universal service always has been the touchstone for this Nation's telecommunications policy. Both Federal and State policymakers have tried to ensure that the benefits of communications technology are available to all citizens. As Congress develops policies to encourage further modernization of our telecommunications networks, we should ensure that improvements will be shared by all. We should upgrade the entire network. We should not create a two-tiered system of haves and have-nots.

S. 1086 is designed to stimulate private investment in our Nation's telecommunications networks in two significant ways. First, the proposal would open the local loop by permitting potential competitors, such as competitive access providers and cable television operators, to interconnect with the local telephone network. Second, it would remove the existing ban on telephone company operation of cable service within the telephone company's own service area.

Recent history shows that competition has spurred infrastructure investment in other sectors of the telecommunications market. For example, faced with stiff competition in the long distance market, AT&T accelerated optical fiber deployment and wrote off billions of dollars in older plant. Similarly, the opportunity to provide new services has encouraged new technologies. For example, Bell telephone company joint ventures in the United Kingdom pioneered delivery of telephone services over cable systems.

Although S. 1086 relies primarily on competition to bring new technologies and services to the consumer marketplace, it anticipates the limitations of market forces in particular circumstances. First, the proposal addresses the need to ensure that competition does not endanger universal service. All carriers would be required to contribute to the universal availability of affordable phone service. Second, the bill acknowledges that competition alone may not bring the benefits of new technologies to rural markets. Third, the proposal anticipates that telephone company dominance in the local telephone market may require certain safeguards. For example, S. 1086 would require a separate subsidiary for a telephone company's cable operations and for a Bell Co.'s electronic publishing services. It also would require other safeguards designed to prevent cross-subsidization and discrimination.

We need to examine carefully what effect local competition will have on universal service and the availability of advanced telecommunications services in small cities, towns, and rural areas. I am concerned with access to affordable phone service. I care about the quality and diversity of services available in small States like South Dakota. If access to the information superhighway becomes an essential means of fully participating in society, we may need to redefine universal service.

Earlier this year I joined my distinguished colleagues, Senator GRASSLEY and Senator EXON, as an original cosponsor of S. 570, the Local Exchange Infrastructure Modernization Act of 1993. This bill is designed to guarantee that small, local telephone companies will have access to new information services and technologies. I am pleased that my distinguished colleagues, Senator DANFORTH and Senator INOUYE, have included some similar infrastructure sharing provisions in their legislation.

S. 1086 would require the Federal Commuunications Commission (FCC) to ensure that local telephone companies in the same geographic area engage in joint coordinated planning and design of the telephone network. S. 1086 also would require the FCC and State regulators to ensure that rural customers obtain access to high-quality telecommunications services. I support these goals.

Mr. President, I congratulate my distinguished colleagues, Senator DANFORTH and Senator INOUYE, for their work on this proposal, and pledge my support to work with them to improve it. The distinguished ranking member and the distinguished chairman recognize that this legislation is a work in progress. We all know it raises many controversial policy issues. As I stated, I am particularly concerned about the universal service provisions and rural area protections. All consumers, regardless of location, should look forward to the benefits to competition and technological ingenuity.

In conclusion, we continue to hear there are many great technological innovations. We read article after article in the weekly news magazines and daily newspapers about the future telecommunications infrastructure and the information superhighway, but the fact is that we are paralyzed by inaction. We are paralyzed because we cannot decide who is going to do what. We have to start addressing some of these issues.

This is what Senator DANFORTH and Senator INOUYE are working to accomplish. Everyone will have to compromise and negotiate, if we are going to accomplish any changes. Otherwise, we are going to be frozen in indecision. Without action all these new, advanced technologies will not be available to the American people.

NIGERIA

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, last April I traveled to eight African countries: Senegal, Cameroon, Kenya, Uganda, Central African Republic, Congo, Mauritania, and Nigeria. I returned from my travels with hope—hope for the future, particularly for the future of democracy in Nigeria. Its military leader, Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, had promised an end to military rule. Nigeria holds a key position on the African Continent. With more than 88.5 million people, Nigeria is Africa's most populous nation. With numerous opportunities for economic and social progress, Nigeria's potential as a role model for other African countries is indisputable. However, that can not occur unless democracy is realized.

Democracy is not the norm in Nigeria. It has been ruled by military dictators for 24 of the 33 years since its independence from Britain in 1960. It appeared that Nigeria was moving constructively toward independence from military rule. Originally, according to a timetable established by General Babangida himself in 1987, the military was scheduled to relinquish power to elected civilian officials by 1990. Since then, local and state government elections have been held and state and national legislatures have been successfully established. Elected civilian leadership appeared on the horizon. On June 12, Presidential elections were held. It appeared Moshood Abiola of the Social Democratic Party (SDP) would emerge victorious over Bashir Tofa of the National Republican Convention (NRC). However, it was not to be: a national court barred the release of election results due to a lawsuit initiated by Babangida's supporters. Not long after, General Babangida declared the election null and void—the third time General Babangida has obstructed Nigeria's quest for an elected leader.

There is a small faction in Nigeria that wishes Babangida to remain in power. However, the general must respect the wishes of the large number of Nigerians who cast their ballots for a civilian leader. Mr. President, the people of Nigeria fervently desire a democratically elected government. They want a say in the governance of their country. Where is the proof of that? The proof was demonstrated by the thousands of Nigerians who voted for democracy. Negatively, the proof was shown by thousands of students who rioted in the streets of Lagos. The situation is intensifying each and every day. Tens of thousands of people have set fires and erected barricades. Violent confrontations between police and rioting civilians have resulted in a number of Nigerians being killed. These people risked their lives in the name of democracy. If progress toward democracy remains impeded, we should consider reassessing our policies and our financial support for Nigeria.

General Babangida should allow the democratic process to function freely. He should allow the voters to speak for themselves. It should not be democracy at his discretion. It should not be majority rule by minority will. While visiting Abuja, Nigeria's new capital, our delegation was assured by Chief Ernest Shonekan, chairman of the transition council, that General Babangida was resolutely committed to completing the transition to civilian rule. I must say that upon my return I was hopeful Nigeria was truly on the road toward democracy and an end to 24 years of military rule. I sincerely hope General Babangida's future actions soon will disprove allegations that he is stalling the progress of democracy in order to remain in power. General Babangida and all his military officials must prove their commitment to the transition to civilian rule. Further attempts to block the fulfillment of democracy could thrust the country into anarchy.

Therefore, I strongly urge General Babangida to adhere to his own timetable and facilitate the swearing in of a democratically elected President on August 27. In response to his annulment of the June 12 election, President Clinton reduced assistance by roughly $1 million, and expelled Nigeria's military attaché here in Washington. Other tough measures could be taken if General Babangida continues to pay nothing more than lip service to democracy. Such measures would be most unfortunate but necessary.

Mr. President, this year alone, Burundi, Eritrea, Lesotho, Madagascar, Malawi, and Niger have conducted internationally supervised elections and referendums. However, Nigeria, a nation of enormous potential, once again has stalled on the road to democracy. This of all African countries has the potential to succeed. I hope that August 27, 1993, will be a day to celebrate Nigerian democracy. Now is the time for General Babangida to restore legitimacy to the Nigerian State.

Mr. President, in summary, my visit to Nigeria with Senator SPECTER was a very interesting experience but also very sad in some ways, because here you have a country with such enormous potential, where gasoline is sold for a few cents a gallon on the streets because of government subsidies, where the people want to have elections, where they were having the party conventions, and yet the elections were canceled.

All the countries we visited—we visited eight countries across Central Africa, starting in Senegal, and then to Kenya and going all the way back to Nigeria including the Central African Republic, Cameroon, Congo, Uganda, Kenya, and Mauritania—they were all a disappointment in terms of the development of democracy, except for Uganda, where the President, Yoweri Museveni, is trying hard to put democratic institutions in place. All the others, it is my judgment, except maybe the Congo, have kleptocratic governments; that is, governments that are stealing from the people. I believe, these government leaders get into power and their idea is to stay in power and to steal as much as possible.

I was told by our Foreign Service officers in the various stops we made that a number of African people were amazed at the transition of power from George Bush to Bill Clinton. In one country, the USIA representatives called in several local citizens to watch President Clinton's inauguration on TV. This transition is amazing to many people in Africa, because none of their leaders ever give up power.

That is what is happening in Nigeria. General Babingida just will not give up power. We should use our AID figures to influence democratic change as President Clinton has done. I commend President Clinton for his action. We also should threaten to use our influence with the international monetary organizations and elsewhere to insist on democracy in these countries.

But my great concern is that many countries in Africa currently are going backwards rather than forwards in terms of democratization. I wish that were not my assessment. But what is happening in Nigeria is another example of why that is so.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 843. An act to withdraw certain lands located in the Coronado National Forest from the mining and mineral leasing laws of the United States, and for other purposes.

TIME TO MOVE FORWARD ON PRESIDENT'S ECONOMIC PLAN

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, hopefully during this next week the Congress will be taking up the deficit reduction and economic growth plan, and the issue is whether we stay where we are and have been mired for the last 12 years or whether we bring change to this country.

Spending cuts are at least $1 for every tax increase. In other tax increases, at least 70 percent of those fall on those making over $200,000, and for those middle-income people the most tax burden they would see is an increase of $1 a week.

And yes, there are going to be lots of people telling us why they are against it. They are the same people who have been against change for the last 15 years. They are the same people who put off doing anything for at least a decade. They are the same people who say they are opposed to taxes, but do not tell you they are covering so that they do not have to put tax increases on the wealthy.

They are the same people who want to go after additional cuts out of the program that affect middle-income and low-income people and the same crowd finally that has brought us the worst economic growth record in the last 4 years.

The country wants change, Mr. Speaker, and indeed this plan, according to the Department of the Treasury, in my State alone would generate 23,000 new jobs as a cumulative result of this tax plan.

The choice is clear, Mr. Speaker, we have got to move forward.

WHO IS REALLY AGAINST FLOOD RELIEF?

(Mr. ARMEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, last Thursday the House voted not to pass a rule which would have allowed the debate and possible passage of emergency supplemental aid to the flood-ravaged people of middle America.

The reason the House voted to reject that rule was that within it was a special self-enacting provision that would have provided millions of dollars to teenagers up to 30 years old in Los Angeles, so that they could have a stipend of $100 a week.

Two thousand miles away from the flood, Congresswoman WATERS had a special self-enacting measure put in the rule to take care of herself and her constituents. We rejected that.

Now I understand that the Rules Committee is going to bring the exact same rule back on behalf of Congresswoman WATERS.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, if you want to provide relief to the flood victims of America, you must first stem the waters.

THE FLOOD DISASTER SUPPLEMENTAL

(Mr. VOLKMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, it has been 5 days since we considered the flood disaster supplemental. Five days for the constituents of my district to wonder why their Government will make allowances for every disaster around the globe yet hold up disaster relief for thousands of Americans that desperately need help. I agree that we must cut spending, we must control the deficit, but it is not appropriate to bog down the disaster relief supplemental in an attempt to find a way to pay for it.

I commend the Speaker's decision to establish a task force to determine ways to pay for disaster assistance in the future. I agree that it is prudent and wise to prepare for the inevitable need for additional funds to help our citizens when they are stricken by disasters beyond their control, such as the floods in the Midwest.

Five days, Mr. Speaker, and the rains are still falling, the rivers are still rising and the damage is still piling up.

☐ This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., ☐ 1407 is 2:07 p.m.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

Five days and my constituents are wondering when the help will come.

Mr. Speaker, 17 of the 21 counties that I represent have been declared Federal disaster areas. I can not express the devastation that I have witnessed. The reports on the television give an impersonal view of the devastation caused by the floods. They show flooded fields, houses and businesses under water, but they fail to show how the lives of the flood victims have changed. Thousands can no longer go home at night after a days work because their houses are flooded. Many more are without clean drinking water and power. Bridges have been washed away and roads are still under water.

I say to my colleagues, if you could go there and see the looks on the faces of the men and women who are victims of this flood you would realize that 5 days has been too long. We need to pass the disaster supplemental today so that we can help the thousands of Americans who have been affected by the floods.

FLOOD RELIEF

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, let me say that it is outrageous to have Democrats come to the floor and complain about how long it is taking to get flood relief to the Midwest.

I promised Congressman GEPHARDT last Monday that we would help pass flood relief. We asked on Thursday to come back and pass flood relief. We asked again on Friday to pass flood relief. We are prepared today to pass flood relief.

But listen to what the President said yesterday about the Congress. He said "Let's vote. I don't have to win them all, but let's make decisions."

Now, I do not know why the President is saying to his Democratic leadership, "Let's vote," but I agree with him. The President is right. Let us vote on things like the extra money for Los Angeles to take care of one politician, which is being put on the flood relief bill on the backs of the Midwest. Let us vote on whether or not to pay for flood relief now or have our grandchildren pay for it eventually.

Let us vote on passing flood relief today. But no Democrat should come here and complain about the Democratic leadership decision that they would not bring the bill up, they would not pass it, because they want to make sure they took care of a member of their coalition from California on the backs of the people of the Midwest.

THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN MEANS JOBS

(Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, last week, as Republicans voted unanimously to block the consideration of emergency aid for the flood victims, and mounted a filibuster in the other body on the National Service bill, it became clear once again—they are the guardians of gridlock, willing to put the interests of millions of Americans behind the desire to play political games. You will hear from them why the President's economic plan won't work—while never presenting a viable plan of their own. You won't hear it from them, but the President's economic package is based on three basic concepts—deficit reduction, making the rich pay their fair share, and job creation.

Only an economy that puts people back to work will serve the American people. President Clinton has taken the bull by the horns and has built a plan that will create 8 million jobs over 4 years. In the first 5 months of this administration, 740,000 private sector jobs were created—a pace of 148,000 new jobs per month. That 148,000 per month compares to the Bush monthly average of only 21,000.

Interest rates and mortgage rates are at 20-year lows.

Mr. Speaker, President Clinton has presented his plan for economic growth—it's the only game in town and one that will work.

MISSTATEMENTS ON FLOOD RELIEF

(Mr. LINDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I do not know how long we are going to have to put up with these misstatements from the other side. We have just heard the gentleman in the well before me say that the Republicans voted unanimously against flood relief, when he knows full well that we did not get to vote on flood relief.

What we voted on was an outrageous rule that provided relief for Californians, and I will remind you again, 30-year-old teenage Californians.

We want to vote for flood relief. We were prepared to do it Thursday. We were prepared to do it Friday.

Bring the bill forth with a rule that allows that amendment for California to be in order and we will vote on it, but you do not get away with saying the Republicans voted unanimously against flood relief. That bill was not brought before us, because the Democrats and the leadership of the Democrat side did not want to bring the bill before us.

SHAME ON CONGRESS

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, two out of every three Americans are disgusted with Congress and believe that Congress is out of touch with the needs of the American people. Here, in my opinion, is one example:

Congress never asked where they were going to get the money for the Kurds, Congress never asked where they were going to get the money for Saudi Arabia, where they were going to get money for Russia, but Congress is now mired down in a disaster relief bill, in where we will get the money for Americans who are literally bobbing up and down in 50 feet of water in the Midwest.

Mr. Speaker, in a nutshell that describes why the American people are fed up with the Congress that is worried about everybody all over the world and has forgotten about its own people.

Shame on Congress, Mr. Speaker. Pass this disaster relief bill, and get off the technicalities.

BIG TAX INCREASE WILL HIT SMALL BUSINESS HARD

(Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, many of my Democrat colleagues have said that most small businesses will not be hit when they pass the largest tax increase in American history. They say that their tax increases will not harm small business—the job machine of America. Unfortunately, that just is not true.

According to business demographer David Birch, 5 to 10 percent of small firms are responsible for the vast majority of the new jobs created between 1987 and 1992. In fact the fastest growing 4 percent of all firms accounted for 70 percent of all new jobs created. These growth oriented, job-creating firms are the very firms that will be hit by the higher rates, and hit hard. The result: They will not be creating the volume of new jobs in the future that America so desperately needs.

The small business community is large and diverse. Yes, most small businesses will not pay increased taxes because they do not make much money—but neither do they create jobs. The statistics are clear: The minority of small businesses create the majority of new jobs in our society—4 percent create 70 percent of all new jobs. They will be hit—and hit hard.

Budget conferees have so far agreed to 195 billion dollars' worth of tax increases and just 5 billion dollars' worth of spending cuts. That is business as usual—more tax and spend—but, with a twist: A dagger at the heart of job growth and our future.

CLEARING THE WATERS

(Ms. WATERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker and Members, I have heard Member after Member from the other side of the aisle come and give information about what is going on with flood relief. Those same Members refuse to vote to help disaster victims on this country who are underwater. They said they were refusing to vote for them because they did not want to pay for it. They wanted to go and cut other programs in order to pay for it.

I say to my colleagues, "Now mind you, we haven't done this with any other disaster. All of a sudden they decided they wanted to use this disaster as budget reduction. When they discovered that the people back home didn't like that, didn't think that was fair, didn't think they should be used this way, then they decided that, aha, it's some language that MAXINE WATERS put in the bill that's the real problem."

Well, Mr. Speaker, that language is no problem. It is not language for California. It is for the entire Nation.

Mr. Speaker, it is already funded. It does not cost any money. It simply clarifies what was done in the budget conference committee.

So, I say to my colleagues, "Don't let the arguments that they are giving to you mean anything to you. The fact of the matter is they are either going to be for the flood victims or they are going to be against them."

WHY REPUBLICANS AND 45 DEMOCRATS VOTED "NO"

(Mr. HOKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HOKE. Mr. Speaker, here we go again, the same lies being repeated once more. The fact is that on Thursday and Friday of this week, the previous week——

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down with respect to the use of the word "lies."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the words.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, rather than delay the House, I will withdraw my request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The gentleman may proceed.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman was interrupted. I would suggest that the Chair give him his 1-minute to speak.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time did not come out. The gentleman may proceed with the time he had left.

Mr. HOKE. I thank the Chair.

Mr. Speaker, we are once again subjected to allegations that somehow the Members on this side of the aisle were more concerned with a pay-as-you-go provision than they were with the fact that there was appended to the rule a specific appropriation for $50 million that 45 Democrats and all of the Republicans voted against. And why was it that we voted against that?

Because it has absolutely nothing whatsoever to do with flood relief for the Midwest, and we continue to hear this repeated over and over, that the Republicans do not care about the people in the Midwest.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, the amendment that should have been put in order was a bipartisan amendment by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE] and by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY], a Democrat and a Republican, to pay-as-you-go. That was not in order. The problem was the $50 million of appropriations.

ADMINISTRATION'S BUDGET OFFERS HOPE OF ECONOMIC TURNAROUND, LOWER DEBT

(Mr. ENGEL asked ans was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, yesterday's lead editorial in the New York Times correctly noted that the budget conferees should not gut President Clinton's investment proposals.

A budget agreement that fails to include an enhanced earned income tax credit, empowerment zones, and other programs important to working families would not, as the Times said, "Be a budget that invests in the future and it would not be a victory for those who voted for an economic turnabout."

Our business leaders and opinion makers agree that we must produce a budget that not only slashes the Federal deficit, but also invests in the education and well-being of our people. We have been presented with an opportunity to pass just such a budget, and we must not let such an opportunity pass.

Our final budget plan can cut the deficit while also creating a climate where jobs will be generated and families will see a real chance to better their lives. The idea that these twin goals of deficit reduction and investment in people cannot be attained together is being put forth by the guardians of the status quo—the naysayers who are afraid to change and unwilling to build for the future.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the conferees to fight for the investment programs proposed by President Clinton and included in the House budget plan. If these programs are included in the final budget, we can proudly say that we helped restore hope for millions of Americans.

THE TRUTH WILL SET US FREE

(Ms. DUNN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, here it is. Once again in today's USA Today it says on A-1, "Sixty-five Percent Say Congress Is Failing," and there is another one in the same newspaper, "Congress on Low End of Approval Poll."

Failing. What a tragedy.

Mr. Speaker, I am a freshman, and I was elected to come here and serve in a bipartisan way to solve the people's problems. But look at what has happened just in the last week:

Mr. Speaker, this House has voted to cover up an investigation into the Democrat House post office and sandbag a flood disaster relief bill because one Member cannot resist providing 30-year-old teenagers a $100-a-week stipend for good grooming habits. Meanwhile, the Democrats are in a House-Senate conference committee debating over which, not whether, to raise taxes, energy tax, gas tax, all the while the economy is dragging down because people are already paying too many taxes.

Mr. Speaker, what I know for sure is that the American people are sick of it. For a change let us dump this Clinton tax plan. Let us dump the pork barrel spending in the flood relief program. Let us clean up this House of corruption and insider sleaze. Let us get on with the business of this Nation.

REINVENTING GOVERNMENT: MAKING THE WET SIDE OF NOAA WORK BETTER

(Mrs. UNSOELD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. UNSOELD. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced the Ocean and Coastal Management Improvement Act of 1993 in an effort to support the administration's initiative to make Government work better. My bill would transfer some of the wet programs of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA] from the Department of Commerce to the Department of the Interior and others to the new Department of Environmental Protection.

As clearly evidenced by its name, NOAA has two distinct, though not uncomplementary, functions. But in recent years the balance between the wet and dry sides of NOAA has been skewed by a troubling trend of increasing funding for satellite and weather functions at the expense of ocean, coastal, and fisheries programs.

The cumulative effect of the reductions of over $900 million in funding for these programs since the 1980's has left those functions strapped with a backlog of research, resource management, and monitoring needs.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that my bill will take the first step in achieving this reversal.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN MYTHS?

(Mr. HERGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, if you believe in Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny, and Peter Pan, then you believe that the Clinton tax plan will help small business.

Some of my Democratic colleagues actually tried to make that point last week. Despite the fact that the National Federation of Independent Business and the chamber of commerce vigorously oppose the Clinton plan, these Democratic Members came to floor and with a straight face said that higher taxes will actually help small business.

I guess their point was that not all small businesses will be hit by the 10-percent surtax or the capital gains tax increase. But just because all small business won't be wiped out by Clintonomics doesn't mean that any small businesses will be helped.

And indeed, the small businesses that will be hit the hardest by these taxes will be those we most need in this economy—the success stories that have created the bulk of new jobs.

Mr. Speaker, I won't say that I don't believe in Santa Claus or the Easter Bunny. But I will say that small business will be hit hard by the Clinton tax plan. And that's no myth.

THE NEED TO ENACT A CRIME BILL

(Mr. HOAGLAND asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, Time magazine has a cover story this week about the growing problem of crime in cities like Omaha.

It is easy to exaggerate the situation in Omaha. We are a fine community, and we are certainly not having the difficulties other impacted urban areas are having. But it is clearly time that the Clinton administration sent comprehensive crime legislation to Congress.

We need to pass the Brady bill, we need to pass the Safe Schools Act, and we need to keep assault weapons and sawed-off shotguns out of the hands of 18-year-olds, as we read about in Time magazine, in Omaha.

We have got to get these things done. The Clinton administration has largely been silent on the issue. I have written the Attorney General weeks ago asking for a crime bill. I am meeting with her Monday. We really need to get these issues behind us.

Mr. Speaker, in the last session our crime bill got caught up in partisan gridlock and delay. We cannot let that happen this year. We need to get a crime bill passed quickly.

SLAM THE DOOR ON TERRORISTS

(Ms. SNOWE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, on Friday I introduced a bill with the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCOLLUM] to slam the door on terrorists. My bill would restore our Government's ability to deny visas to known members of terrorist organizations.

This legislation was originally part of a bill I introduced 2 months ago, the Terrorist Interdiction Act of 1993. All the other provisions of that earlier bill passed the House as an amendment to the State Department authorization. But this provision is still awaiting action by the Judiciary Committee and I would urge the committee to include this provision in their immigration reform bill which may be marked up this week. In fact, the President is now unveiling his immigration package and I hope he would support this reform.

The bill I introduced Friday would correct a legislative mistake of breathtaking proportions. The Immigration Act of 1990 raised the threshold for denying visas to terrorists, so now the Government must prove an individual's direct involvement in a past terrorist act. Last Thursday, a State Department witness testified before the Foreign Affairs Committee on this problem. He stated that today, membership in a terrorist organization, or even a terrorist conviction abroad, is not sufficient to deny a visa request to come to the United States.

I urge the Judiciary Committee to take up my bill at the earliest possible opportunity. Each day of congressional inaction places American lives at risk. We cannot afford the price of apathy any longer.

THE WOMEN'S ECONOMIC EQUITY ACT

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to encourage my colleagues to sign on as original cosponsors to the Women's Economic Equity Act which will be introduced tomorrow.

Twenty-five years ago, I was a divorced, working mother with three small children and no child support, unable to survive on my salary of only $580 a month, I went on aid-for-dependent-children.

I am proud to have two bills included in the women's economic equity package, bills which will help women facing situations similar to mine.

One bill would increase child support collection, and a second bill, would strengthen the Job Training Partnership Act by making sure it trains women for jobs that pay a family wage.

Too often, Mr. Speaker, women lose out in our economy because they are most likely to be responsible for dependents as single parents.

Mr. Speaker, the Women's Economic Equity Act will make sure that women and their families succeed, not just survive, in this difficult economy.

HOW WILL GAS TAX AFFECT AMERICANS?

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, these were the words of our President, Bill Clinton, on February 22 of this year:

> For years, there have been those who say we ought to reduce the deficit by raising the gas tax a whole lot. That's fine if you live in the city and ride mass transit to work. It's not so good if you live in the country and drive yourself to work * * * So I rejected a big gas tax.

Mr. Speaker, but the endless search for new taxes apparently has led the President to change his mind about the effects of a large gas tax increase. Reports I have seen today indicate that the Clinton administration is looking to recommend a gas tax increase of almost 10 cents per gallon as part of the budget negotiations.

As the President and members of his administration are touring the country trying to convince Americans that massive tax increases will create millions of jobs, we should keep in mind the words of President Clinton in February 1993, when he rejected a big gas tax.

The huge new gas tax increase now being recommended by the administration will cost Americans millions of jobs and be the final nail in the coffin of a once promising recovery. The time has come for President Clinton to admit he cannot tax away the deficit and start over with a deficit reduction plan that cuts spending first.

DISASTER AID FOR MIDWEST FLOOD VICTIMS

(Mr. DURBIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, today we will consider the disaster aid bill for the Midwest flood victims. The major question on the floor of the House is whether one Republican Congressman will step forward and break the party-line position against the rule for flood disaster aid.

Let me tell the Members why I hope that one will. The pay-as-you-go approach to flood disaster is bad policy. We have never followed it in any previous disaster, and the reason, of course, is that we have no idea what this disaster will cost us, and we certainly cannot ask the innocent victims trying to survive to wait until we have a congressional debate about raising taxes or spending cuts before we send disaster aid.

Finally, pay-as-you-go is an insult to the people in the Midwest. They know full well that this standard has never been used for any previous disaster, and they know that 105 Republican Congressmen who voted against the flood disaster bill last week voted 2 years ago for aid to the Kurdish refugees, not asking at any point whether or not it was a pay-as-you-go plan and certainly not asking whether any of the Kurdish refugees were over the age of 18.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The Chair will announce that it will extend 1-minutes speeches by 1 on each side, making a total of 16 on each side.

HISTORY REINTERPRETED

(Mr. WALKER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, we are getting some interesting reinterpretations on history here. First of all, the Kurdish refugee money was paid for. It was paid for out of monies we got from our allies. So it was pay as you go. We are suggesting maybe on this one we ought to have pay as you go, too, and what we ought to do is round up some of the money from next year's appropriations bills. We can deal with this money right now, but what about the billions that are going to have to be spent next year? The Democrats have turned that down as an idea as well.

But let us talk about what Republicans are really disturbed about. We are disturbed because the Democrats have decided to put absolutely extraneous material in this bill that has nothing to do with the floods; namely, language to pay $100 a week to 30-year-old teenagers to keep themselves well-groomed. That is what the money is being put in the bill toward out in Los Angeles.

Mr. Speaker, if one thinks that is the kind of thing we ought to put on the backs of flood relief victims, then you are with the Democrats. If you believe we ought to devote it to flood relief and do only help for the victims, then we can bring up the appropriation bill without any rule. You do not need a rule to bring the appropriation bill to the floor and do real flood relief. The only reason why you need a rule is so that we can give $100 a week to 30-year-old teenagers.

TRIBUTE TO GEN. MATTHEW RIDGWAY

(Mr. REED asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute on the passing of a great American, Gen. Matthew Ridgway. General Ridgway was one of the most outstanding combat leaders of our military history. He graduated from West Point in 1917 and took the values of Duty, Honor, and Country through 38 years of service to this country as a commissioned officer. He organized the 82d Airborne Division and instilled in those troops the spirit that he had, unrelenting valor and tenacity. In Korea he reorganized the beleaguered 8th Army and led it to victory.

Mr. Speaker, he is a distinguished American, who has given his country much, and we today salute his memory.

In the words of the alma mater of West Point:

> And when our work is done, our course on Earth is run, may it be said well done, be thou at peace.

To General Ridgway, well done.

TAX AND SPEND LESS

(Mr. GRAMS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, President Clinton complained on national TV that he couldn't get flood relief passed because the Democrats don't control Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I support flood relief, but you can't tell me we can't find $3 billion to cut out of a $1.5 trillion budget in order to pay for this now and not pass the bill on to our children.

It is no excuse to say we have done this before; when you are $4 trillion in debt, it is time to do something different!

Yet, the majority of Democrats in this House are so addicted to spending that they refuse to make even the small cuts necessary to help desperate flood victims.

And if the Democrats, who have controlled this House for four decades, don't control Congress, who does?

Obviously, not Republicans. If we did, we would have made the cuts and passed flood relief last week. And, right now the conference committee would be haggling over spending cuts, not the largest tax increase in American history.

If there is gridlock in this country, it is not between Democrats and Republicans; it's between a Democrat President and Democrats in Congress who want to tax and spend more, and the American people who want to tax and spend less.

VOTE FOR RULE ON DISASTER SUPPLEMENTAL

(Mrs. MEEK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEEK. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Congress to vote for the rule on the disaster supplemental. It is time for these games to stop. The real deal is not so much the Maxine Waters amendment, but it is the offset that you keep hearing, cuts. It is the smoke and mirrors that the Republicans are trying to put in front of you.

So why do they not admit to the real deal? The real deal is they want to be sure that people in the Midwest are delayed in getting their support for the flooding. They want to wait until they can find a way to cut spending on the backs of these poor people. Our friends and neighbors in the Midwest are having their lives destroyed by these silly games that we are playing here.

Mr. Speaker, if these floods of July are not an emergency, I do not know what is. So you are just going to have some offset for them. You are only looking for spending cuts to rely on for this part? Are you going to change the rules just for them? I want to know why. There must be some reason.

Mr. Speaker, the people out there are at risk. I am asking that Members not worry so much about hiding behind a smoke and mirror for disturbed adults or adults who need help in this country. This Congress is going to find a way to respond to natural disasters, but do not delay helping in this disaster. The lives of our western neighbors are too important.

LET'S PASS ON THE GAS TAX

(Mr. BAKER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, the latest Democrat tax proposal is to increase the gas tax by 9 cents.

Mr. Speaker, increasing the gas tax encourages inflation, punishes the working class, hurts small business, slows economic growth, and increases the deficit. Otherwise it is a good idea.

In 1990 I supported a gas tax in California. Only this revenue was used to build rails and roads. It passed a vote of the people by only one-half of 1 percent, because the people did not feel we would spend their money wisely. Well, in California I think we fooled them.

Mr. Speaker, how do you think they feel about spending a 9-cent gas tax increase to increase Federal spending? Well, the Democrats apparently have decided inflicting this gas tax on ourselves will somehow be less painful than the Btu tax.

Unfortunately, that is not the case. When the cost of gas dramatically increases, the result will be the same. Economic disaster. Disaster for the airlines, the truckers, the commuters, farmers, rural America, and all business.

Mr. Speaker, a sharp increase in gas tax is not the way to go. I urge my Democrat colleagues, think twice about a new gas tax.

MOVE FORWARD TOGETHER FOR THE BETTER

(Mr. FLAKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to voice support for President Clinton's economic growth plan. Clearly, we as a nation have to come to grips with the reality that although we are in a major deficit situation, there is a great need on the part of many of our cities and many of our communities for this bill to pass. It is time for us to deal with the reality of the need to reduce the deficit, invest in people's lives, invest in communities, many of which have become a part of an existing Third World nation within the borders of this Nation, invest in our businesses, restore economic growth and vitality, and create high-skilled and high-wage jobs.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for us to stop playing games and get serious about the reality that many of our people are suffering. The longer we delay moving through this reconciliation process, the greater the pain will be for so many of our citizens. It is time for us to move forward. Let us move forward together for the better of all American citizens.

THE GANG THAT COULD NOT SHOOT STRAIGHT

(Mr. HUTCHINSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Speaker, yesterday President Clinton blamed the Congress for the delay and gridlock in holding up some of his programs. Well, the President needs to remember one thing: His party holds the majority in both the House and the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, when it came to disaster assistance, the leadership reminded me of the gang that could not shoot straight. Only a pork-laden special interest rule could have slowed down money to the hard hit Midwest, and that is exactly what the leadership gave us. The Waters language for the youth program in L.A. has nothing to do with the waters in the Midwest.

Mr. Speaker, there are two disasters that face this country. One, yes, is in the Midwest, and it deserves our attention. But the other disaster is the budget deficit that this country faces and the growth of the national debt. The clearest signal that we could send to America that we are serious about deficit reduction and that business will no longer be conducted as usual in this institution would be to pay for the disaster relief. We should provide the disaster relief quickly, but we should also provide the relief responsibly.

REPUBLICANS ARE WATERED DOWN IN EXCUSES

(Mr. TUCKER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, the previous speaker was correct, the Waters amendment has nothing to do with the waters in the Midwest, particularly as it relates to the cost of flood relief. The Waters amendment will not impinge upon, will not affect, and does not have a fiscal impact on the flood relief in the Midwest.

But what is the case, Mr. Speaker, is that the Republicans on the other side of the aisle are watered down in excuses. First of all, they have the excuse that they needed to cut, that they needed to find where they could have spending cuts in order to afford this flood relief.

So obviously, the people in the Midwest are not the only ones drowning in water. The Republicans are drowning in the waters of excuses, excuses to move forward and to help the people in the Midwest.

Mr. Speaker, it is time that this House comes clean and gets away from the flood of excuses and moves today to help Americans out.

It reminds me, Mr. Speaker, of the parable of the Good Samaritan. The people are laying on the side of the road. They are dying, and we are wondering about the cost to save them.

DEFICIT SPENDING

(Mr. DICKEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, the flood of deficit spending continues to rise. What is being argued is that the mistakes of the past would justify making mistakes in the present.

I am a freshman. I am not a part of the mistakes of the past and do not want to be a part of the problems of the present.

We can cut spending to pay for this disaster relief bill. Why do we not? I do not know. Why do we not even try? I do not know the answer.

But because I do not know the answer does not mean that I am going to ignore my business experience or my principles and vote for the disaster relief bill, even though I am compassionate with the people who are suffering. We can all sacrifice together, if we cut spending, and not pass this debt on to our children.

ANOTHER MEANING OF "GRIDLOCK"

(Mr. SCHUMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, this is the front page of New York's hometown newspaper, the Daily News. It says: "Georgia Pol Rips City Over Gas Tax. Blames it on New York."

They're at it again. President Ford once told New York to drop dead and now the minority whip blames New York for, of all things, the gas tax.

According to the Daily News, the House minority whip from Georgia "blames the proposed 9-cent-a-gallon gas tax on cities like New York, where most people ride subways and buses."

First, I would like to congratulate Mr. GINGRICH for knocking Donald Trump and Marla Maples off the front page.

Second, I would like the distinguished minority leader to ponder this question: If no one drives in New York, why does it take 2 hours to drive across midtown during rush hour?

It seems the latest Republican strategy to kill the largest deficit reduction plan in history is to turn one region of the country against another. In this case the villain is big cities like New York and, I guess Atlanta—both of which have subway systems that cost $1.25 a ride.

The term gridlock began in New York to describe a traffic jam so bad that no one can move.

Now gridlock is a subject that the minority whip from Georgia should know something about.

ENTITLEMENTS

(Mr. COLLINS of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. COLLINS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, several conservative Democrats voted for the Clinton deficit plan on the promise that entitlements will be capped.

Will such promise be fulfilled?

I do not think so.

Look at the bill.

There has been no change in the criteria qualifying recipients for entitlement benefits. Until such criteria is changed there will be no reduction in the number of people qualifying for entitlement funds.

In fact the bill contains increases in entitlement funding.

Food stamp funding is increased by over $7 billion.

The earned income tax credit will be increased by $28 billion under the House provision. The EITC has the potential to be one of the most expensive entitlements in the budget. Under the House version 42 percent of working families will qualify for the EITC.

Mr. Speaker, those who bought the entitlement cap proposal bought a "pig in a poke" from a man from Arkansas, home of the Razorbacks.

THIS IS THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE

(Mr. APPLEGATE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, what is going on in the people's House. This is the U.S. House of Representatives. It is not the European house of representatives. It is not the Central American house of representatives. It is not the southeastern house of representatives, and it is not the middle eastern house of representatives.

It is American, and it is paid for by the American taxpayers, many who are drowning in the flood waters of middle America.

They are losing their homes, their businesses, their farms and, yes, their lives. And we are talking about technicalities and procedures.

Flood victims do not care one iota about technicalities and procedures. They want and they should expect their Government to come to their help, ASAP, today, and not a day later.

DISASTER RELIEF

(Mr. PORTMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the President labeled Republicans as obstructionists and practitioners of gridlock because of last week's vote to defeat the rule on the disaster assistance bill. He held Republicans responsible for standing in the way of disaster relief to flood victims in the Midwest.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not believe there is one person in this Congress, from either political party, who is not desperate to provide badly needed aid to the courageous flood victims in the Midwest. Most of my congressional district borders on the Ohio River, which has flooded communities along its banks many times in the past, so I am especially sensitive to the heartbreaking scenes we see on the news each night.

All we are asking for is the opportunity to try and pass a clean bill: Legislation without extraneous spending that will provide immediate assistance to flood victims on a pay-as-you-go basis. Instead, our only option will be to vote for more spending to be heaped on top of an already massive Federal debt with interest payments growing daily. The only option will be to vote for totally unrelated provision to authorize payments of $100 a week to inner-city youths up to 1,000 miles from the floods.

I understand that today we are to once again consider the same fiscally irresponsible rule that the Republicans and Democrats in the House wisely defeated last week.

By playing on the emotions of the public over the past 4 days, the leadership must feel that it is in a position to politically embarrass those in the House who are trying to do what the people have sent us here to do—to spend their tax dollars in a responsible way. Therefore, unless we are given the option to remove extraneous spending from the bill and to find a way to pay for the disaster relief, I will be forced again to oppose the rule. I am not happy about this. My colleagues and I deserve the right to deal with this disaster in the Midwest in a fiscally responsible way. I hope my colleagues will stick to their convictions today—vote no—and force the leadership to give us the option we deserve.

HOW THE MINORITY EMBARRASSED ITSELF

(Mr. LEVIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I have been listening to the attacks by the minority on the floor today. What is striking is how negative a posture they have adopted. Throw a monkey wrench into the works, even if it is flood relief.

We are not trying to embarrass anybody. They have embarrassed themselves.

I ask, if it were President Bush asking for flood relief today, where would the minority be? Now it is attack the President on reconciliation, even if the minority have not presented a realistic alternative.

I feel good about what we are trying to do here today, from flood relief to deficit reduction. I am convinced the minority, with their negative approach at all costs, is out of step with the longing of the American people for constructive action on flood relief, deficit reduction and other serious issues facing this country.

RELIGIOUS RESTRICTIONS IN RUSSIA

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, on July 14, the Russian Parliament turned back the clock on reform and religious tolerance when it passed a new law on religion which, if signed by President Yeltsin, would severely restrict the activities of believers.

Article 14 of the proposed law bans independent activity by foreign religious organizations and all individuals who are not Russian citizens.

The new legislation is discriminatory and would severely restrict access to religious ideas and materials and will limit the free expression of religion. Requiring individuals to be accredited by the state—read that controlled by the state—will put clergy and missionaries under government control. That is the way it was done during the heyday of the Communist dictatorship. Such a policy has no place in a modern democracy.

Mr. Speaker, the fate of this antireligious legislation is now in the hands of Boris Yeltsin. I ask my colleagues to please join a number of us today in sending a letter to President Yeltsin, asking that he reject this legislation. Senators RICHARD LUGAR, PAUL SIMON, the gentleman from California [Mr. LANTOS], the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], and I have signed. And respectfully ask you to join us.

Religious freedom is a fundamental human right that should not be weakened, or abridged, anywhere in the world.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR RELIEF FROM THE MAJOR, WIDESPREAD FLOODING IN THE MIDWEST ACT OF 1993

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 226 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 226

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2667) making emergency supplemental appropriations for relief from the major, widespread flooding in the Midwest for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and the amendments made in order by this resolution and shall not exceed ninety minutes equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule and shall be considered as read. The modification to the bill printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole. All points of order against the bill, as modified, are waived. No amendment to the bill, as modified, shall be in order except the amendment printed in part 2 of the report. The amendment printed in part 2 of the report may be offered only by the named proponent or a designee, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and shall not be subject to amendment. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill, as modified, to the House with such amendment as may have been adopted. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendment thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against House Resolution 226.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, it is a longstanding practice of parliamentary law in this House that an amendment once rejected cannot be considered in identical form to the same bill.

I cite Cannon's Precedents, volume 8, section 2834, and I quote: "It is not in order to offer an amendment identical with one previously disagreed to."

And, quoting from Deschler's Precedents, volume 9, section 35, "It is not in order to offer an amendment identical to one previously rejected."

And finally, from Procedure in the House, 97th Congress, section 33.1, and again I quote: "It is not in order to offer an amendment identical to one previously rejected. An amendment once rejected cannot be re-offered in identical form."

Mr. Speaker, the pending resolution, House Resolution 226, provides, and I quote: "The modification to the bill printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole."

The so-called modification printed in part 1 of the Rules Committee report on House Resolution 226 proposes to insert at the appropriate place a new section entitled, "Youth Fair Chance Program."

On Thursday, July 22, 1993, the House rejected House Resolution 220, which provided on page 2, beginning at line 10, the following: "The modification to the bill printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole."

And part 1 of the report to accompany that resolution contains an identical modification to that contained in the report on this resolution.

The report on House Resolution 220 proposed to insert at the appropriate place a new section entitled, "Youth Fair Chance Program."

A careful examination of both reports will reveal that the modifications considered to be adopted in both the House and in the Committee of the Whole are identical—word-for-word.

This device of having an amendment considered as adopted upon the adoption of the rule is called a self-executing provision. At what point is the modification considered to be adopted? The rule makes clear that it is considered to be adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole, and not the reverse.

We are now in the House, and the adoption of the so-called modification takes place first in the House when we adopted this rule. Then it is considered as adopted in the Committee of the Whole, when the House resolves into Committee. And finally, the language of the rule presumably also extends to the final adoption of the modification when the bill is reported back to the House when it is reported from the Committee of the Whole.

But the Chair can hardly argue that this rule does not first adopt the modification in the House when the rule is adopted, since the order of adoption is quite clear—first in the House, then in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Speaker, in further support of this, I would cite the ruling of the Chair of February 24, 1993, on a similar point of order brought against the rule on the unemployment compensation bill.

At page H807, the Chair indicated that, and I quote, "the amendments are not adopted until such time as the rule is adopted." In other words, Mr. Speaker, the amendments are considered as adopted in the House upon adoption of the rule.

By the same token, when House Resolution 220 was rejected by the House last Thursday, the identical amendment to that being offered in this rule, was considered as rejected in the House. And the point of order lies against considering the same amendment once rejected.

I therefore urge the Chair to follow the logic of its previous ruling regarding the effect of the adoption of a rule by the House by upholding my point of order that this amendment has been previously rejected by the rejection of the prior rule on this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] wish to be heard?

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I ask to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] makes a point of order that it would be inappropriate to consider legislation identical to that previously rejected by the House, and I have to congratulate the gentleman. He makes a clever argument when he suggests that because H.R. 220, last week in its entirety, included a self-executing provision that would have considered the Youth Fair Chance Act provision adopted had that rule passed. However, Mr. Speaker, that amendment was not, in fact, rejected by this House of Representatives. What failed to pass was H.R. 220 in its entirety, and in fact H.R. 220 included many other provisions besides the Youth Fair Chance Opportunity Act. The legislation that is being considered here today is not identical to the resolution previously reported from the Committee on Rules.

It is, in fact, true that some of the provisions are similar, however, Mr. Speaker, it is important to note that the general debate time, for instance, has been extended from 60 to 90 minutes, and this is a substantially different proposition. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would urge you to, in fact, be consistent with previous rulings and to reject this point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Are there other Members who wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] is a good friend, and we respect him, but what he just said is that the only difference between this resolution before us now, this rule and the previous one, is the fact that they have extended debate by 30 minutes. That is the only difference between these two rules.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it stands to reason there is no significant difference. It is the identical amendment, the identical rule, that was before this body before, and the Chair should uphold my point of order.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, one of the major purposes of the Committee on Rules is to award time, of course time that has to be approved by this entire body, and it is, in fact, what we consider to be a significant difference, to differentiate significantly in the amount of time that is to be awarded on the floor of the House of Representatives. So, the addition of 30 additional minutes for debate on what we consider to be a very significant and substantive matter is, in fact, a significant difference from one rule to the next.

Mr. Speaker, this is not an identical rule to what was considered last week.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Are there other Members wishing to be heard on the point of order propounded by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON]?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, there is a longstanding parliamentary tradition and practice in the House that one cannot do indirectly that which they were not permitted to do directly. That is precisely what the majority is attempting to do in this particular rule.

In this instance, if they were attempting to do this directly, there is no doubt that the Chair would have to rule that this amendment was not in order, having been previously rejected from the House. The indirect nature of this amendment should not preclude the Chair from ruling that this amendment is not eligible for consideration on the House floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). Are there any other Members wishing to be heard on this point of order?

If not, the Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

The resolution under consideration involves more than the self-executing adoption of the modification printed in the accompanying report. The pending resolution waives all points of order against provisions in the bill as modified and provides a different parameter of general debate from that contained in House Resolution 220. Thus House Resolution 226 constitutes a different proposition from House Resolution 220 as a special order of business.

The rule is more than the self-executing provision within it. It is the entire resolution, and the entire resolution, by virtue of having a different parameter of debate, is sufficiently different.

Therefore, the gentleman's point of order is overruled.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, do I understand that the Chair is saying that the language of the rule that states that the modification is, "considered as adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole," really means the opposite, that it is first considered adopted in the Committee of the Whole and then in the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is not commenting on that. The Chair is commenting on the gentleman from New York's point and saying that there is a sufficient difference so that his point of order is not well taken.

Mr. WALKER. A further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

How does the Chair explain the inconsistency of the Chair's ruling with regard to the specific language of the rule?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would say that this is a different resolution, with a different time of debate, which is a change of a substantive nature in the resolution before the House.

Mr. WALKER. I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALKER. So, if it is the ruling of the Chair that the amendment or modification is not adopted upon the adoption of this rule in the House, could the Chair please enlighten the House as to what exact point in our proceedings the modification is considered to be adopted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is not ruling on that point, and that is not a point before the Chair at this time. The Chair has already made its ruling based upon the reason that it gave.

Mr. WALKER. Well, I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WALKER. Is it the ruling of the Chair that the modification is not considered to be adopted until the Committee of the Whole begins to consider the bill for amendment under the 5-minute rule? Could a point of order or germaneness of legislating on the grounds of appropriations grounds be raised against the modification following general debate and just prior to the modification's announced adoption since the rule does not waive points of order against the modification?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would point out that all points of order against the bill, as modified, are waived.

Mr. WALKER. Well, the rule does not waive points of order against the modification, so my question is: Before we get to that point, can we, in fact, raise a point of order against the amendment on the grounds of either germaneness or legislating on an appropriations bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot comment on what the ruling might be in the Committee of the Whole. The Chair can only comment on the matter that is before it, and, as the Chair has already stated all points of order against consideration of the bill and against the bill, as modified, are waived.

Mr. WALKER. A further parliamentary inquiry.

Would a point of order lie against the bill before we go into the Committee of the Whole against the modification?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would comment on that at that point, if the gentleman chooses to raise that.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry, if I might.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SOLOMON. The big contention here, of course, is the self-executed, so-called Waters amendment into the rule, and can the Chair inform the membership as to what point a point of order might lie against striking that amendment from the rule?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is not aware of any point of order that can be raised. The Chair has already read from the rule stating that all points of order against the bill, as modified, are waived.

Mr. SOLOMON. Well, Mr. Speaker, what we are driving at in the parliamentary inquiries is whether or not, let us say in a motion to recommit we wanted to strike the self-executed provision of the so-called Waters amendment, whether or not a point of order would lie against that kind of recommital.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the gentleman would suspend for just a moment, the Chair cannot rule at this point on what may come before the House in the motion to recommit. That would have to be raised at that time.

Mr. SOLOMON. That is certainly confusing to the membership because a lot will depend on whether or not the Waters amendment in the form of a self-executed amendment could be included in a motion to recommit.

□ 1330

The membership is entitled to know whether or not a point of order would lie against that kind of a motion. Perhaps the Parliamentarian could answer the question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The gentleman's questions are hypothetical and not properly raised at this time.

Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] have a further parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. WALKER. I do, Mr. Speaker.

The Chair has ruled that what the rules say is opposite from what they mean.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point, please.

Mr. WALKER. My question is, at what point are the rights of the Members to their point of order protected in this process?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman may raise a point of order obviously at any time. The question is whether or not it is properly raised at that time. The Chair has already responded to the point of order of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and has said that the Chair cannot rule at this time on a point of order that he may raise later.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

I think the Chair just said a moment ago that he knows of no time that the Members' right is protected to raise a legitimate point of order. So, therefore, I am asking the Chair a specific question: When is the time, or has the Chair specifically ruled that in this case there are no times when the Members can legitimately raise a point of order on this matter?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has not so ruled but has pointed out language in the rule that waives all points of order.

Mr. SOLOMON. I have a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York will state it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, during the debate on the rule would the Chair be able to answer that question so that the Members are informed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will allow debate to proceed on the rule unless there are other points of order to be raised at this time.

Mr. WALKER. I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his inquiry.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, throughout the rule, if we raise this as a point of order, will that be regarded as a legitimate point of order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The rule states that all points of order against the bill, as modified, are waived. The Chair is not going to rule in advance.

Mr. WALKER. The real question I would say, Mr. Speaker, is, at what point is the modification actually before the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot make hypothetical rulings on points of order not yet raised.

Mr. WALKER. I am not asking for a hypothetical ruling. I am asking for a ruling by the Chair on this: At what point is the modification before the House? It is a parliamentary inquiry with regard to a matter pending before the House. At what point is that modification before the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will read the language from the rule, stating as follows: "The modification to the bill printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole." That is upon the adoption of the resolution. "The bill, as modified, shall be considered as read. All points of order against the bill, as modified, are waived."

Mr. WALKER. I have another parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

Then, based upon what the Chair has said, the matter is before the House at the present time, and so the modification is presently before the House, based upon the language the Chair has just read. Does that mean a point of order with regard to germaneness and legislating on an appropriation bill is presently a point of order that can be raised against the amendment, based upon the Chair's own ruling?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. At this point the Chair would say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the point of order cannot be raised against the modification. It can only be raised in the manner that the gentleman from New York has already raised it, and the Chair has ruled on that.

Mr. WALKER. I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. Speaker, the Chair now needs to go back and answer the question. The Chair quoted me something which indicated the modification is before the House now. The Chair now says that is not the case.

When is the modification before the House and subject to a point of order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has already stated it cannot rule upon hypothetical points.

Mr. WALKER. This is not a hypothetical point, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman should raise that if he thinks he should in another form when the House is in consideration of that.

Mr. WALKER. I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

We are not dealing in hypotheticals. We have a matter which is pending before the House. It is a part of the language before the House, a ruling that the Chair just quoted to me, and I am asking, at what point is that modification that the Chair just quoted to me from the rule before the House for a Member to legitimately raise points of order that are in my opinion legitimately to be brought against the amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would read from a ruling on February 24, 1993 by Speaker pro tempore MAZZOLI, stating, and I quote to the gentleman:

> The point of order under this rule does not apply to a special order reported from the Committee on Rules self-executing the adoption in the House to a reported bill of an amendment containing an appropriation, since the amendment is not separately before the House during consideration of a special order.

As the Chair said, that is a ruling of February 24 of this year by then Speaker pro tempore MAZZOLI.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 226 provides for the consideration of H.R. 2667, the disaster assistance supplemental appropriations bill.

The rule provides for 90 minutes of general debate to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations.

The modification printed in part one of the report accompanying the rule shall be considered as adopted in the House and in the Committee of the Whole.

All points of order against the bill as modified and against its consideration are waived, including rule XXI, clause 2.

The resolution also makes in order the amendment printed in part 2 of the report, debatable for 20 minutes and not subject to amendment. And, finally, one motion to recommit is made in order.

Mr. Speaker, it is extraordinarily sad for me to stand here today because last week we, as a great legislative body, could not agree to the simple premise that tens of thousands, and perhaps hundreds of thousands, of American citizens in the Midwest are desperately in need of our help, and they need it now.

They are in the midst of a 100-year flood, the most devastating wreckage many of us have seen in our lifetimes, and we have not yet been able to accord them the same immediate compassionate response that we did to the victims of Hurricanes Andrew and Hugo, the Loma Prieta earthquake, and the Kurdish refugees.

When I was home in Kansas City last weekend, I was asked, "What in the world is the Congress doing? What makes us worth so much less than all the others who got aid seemingly without question? Isn't this a disaster?"

And Mr. Speaker, I could not answer that question. I literally had no answer why the House could not have approved this emergency aid package. But there is no doubt as to the extent of this disaster.

Mr. Speaker, St. Joseph, MO, has been without tap water for days and probably will not have any till next Saturday.

Currently there are heavy thunderstorms in Nebraska and Iowa, from Mason City to Waterloo. Water shortages exist in Tarkio, Lexington, Waverly, and in dozens more cities.

Levees are failing—at Perryville, MO, and near Quincy, IL, flooding thousands of acres of land. And once again floodwaters are surging in Kansas City, with the river expected to crest at about 11 feet above flood stage.

I talked to my parents just a little while ago, Mr. Speaker, and it is reflected by this headline in USA-Today that Kansas City is the next flood test.

The river is 1 foot from the top of the Kansas City levee and is expected to top it soon.

Mr. Speaker, it is not the people of Kansas City or the people of the Midwest who are facing a test. They have met every challenge. It is this Congress that is facing a test, and so far we have failed it.

The rising waters are threatening homes, businesses, and possibly the water supplies of a number of cities.

Downriver from Kansas City in St. Louis, St. Genevieve, Festus, and other cities, people are still adding several feet of sandbags to levees, trying to hold back an expected 2 more feet of rising river in the next cresting.

Cities in our area are completely under water, cities like Parkville, like Missouri City and Cedar City—highways have been washed away or flooded throughout the stricken States. Railroads are under water and service has been interrupted.

Levasy, Bonner Springs, Des Moines, Quincy, Jefferson City, Riverside, Lemay—I could go on and on, Mr. Speaker, reading a litany of the cities of the Midwest. These are not just cities and names of places, these are people, friends, family, and neighbors who are suffering and desperately need the assistance of this body. And, Mr. Speaker, they need it now.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I regret that the Rules Committee has chosen to ignore the clear wishes of a House majority by reporting this nearly identical rule to the one rejected by the House last Thursday.

The only difference between this rule and the one rejected is that general debate time will now be 90 minutes instead of 1 hour as the previous rule provided.

But the defeat of the previous rule was not over the issue of how much general debate time there should be. The defeat was over the issue of what additional amendments should be allowed.

And this rule makes no change in the amendment process. It self-executes the same nongermane amendment as the previous rule, and makes in order for a vote just one amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER], the same as the previous rule.

What the House was saying in defeating the previous rule was not that it wanted to kill the disaster relief bill. Only a fool would make that kind of an assertion since an overwhelming majority of this House favors providing that relief immediately.

What the House was saying was that we should at least be able to consider one or two additional amendments that were offered in the Rules Committee to provide for financing that disaster relief.

That is not an unreasonable request. We were only asking that at least one of those two major amendments should be considered for just an additional 20 minutes of debate—the same amount of time that is accorded the Volkmer amendment.

By reporting this nearly identical rule, the Rules Committee is ignoring and violating one of the oldest rules of this House found in section 43 of Jefferson's Manual.

That rule states that once a measure has been rejected by the House, "another of the same substance shall not be brought in again the same session."

This rule, in substance, has already been rejected by the House. And yet it is again being brought in the same session instead of a new rule that reflects the wishes of a bipartisan House majority that the amendment process be opened up just a little.

Mr. Speaker, why is the majority leadership so adamant against not even allowing us to consider the Nussle-Penny self-financing amendment, or the Slattery amendment that would also pay for this relief?

The answer, we are told, is that we have always done it another way in the past, and that such an amendment might delay the bill in conference.

The latter argument reveals the real fears of the majority leadership, and that is that such an amendment might pass. If that weren't the concern, then there would be no validity to the argument since the amendment wouldn't make it to conference.

To deny an amendment in the Rules Committee because it is feared it might pass is the height of political arrogance by a few since it defies the wishes of a majority. And majority rule is what our system is supposed to be all about.

At the same time the majority leadership was insisting that a self-financing amendment might delay the conference on this bill, the majority leadership continued to insist on self-executing into the bill another amendment that has nothing to do with Midwest flood relief—a provision that relates to a youth jobs demonstration program that extends the definition of a teenager to age 30 and provides stipends of $100 a week in another part of the country.

Ironically, it was an identical provision that ran into opposition from the other body in the conference on the ministimulus supplemental last month. And yet the majority claims that this is a mere technical amendment that was inadvertently left out of the other bill.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the amendment ran into opposition in the other body on substantive grounds and was intentionally, not inadvertently, watered down. Do we really want to risk further delays in this bill over such a nongermane matter? I seriously doubt it.

Mr. Speaker, I have attempted both last week and this to keep the debate on these rules on a high plane, discussing the procedural problems involved, and the substantive alternatives, without engaging in personalities or motives.

But I must say I resent those on the other side who attempt to depict those who have raised legitimate procedural and substantive concerns as somehow being against aiding flood victims.

That is sheer nonsense, and it detracts from the dignity and integrity of this body and the sincere intentions of its Members.

Let us all admit that there are legitimate arguments on both sides of the issue of whether disaster relief should be paid for or should be allowed to add to the deficit—and that those arguments deserve to be debated on this floor.

Let us admit, as the White House has proudly proclaimed of its own deficit reduction efforts, that change is coming—that the mood of the administration, the Congress, and the American people has become more serious about resolving our deficit problem.

Mr. Speaker, I think my colleagues are aware of my efforts last Thursday and Friday to resolve this issue immediately, either through a more equitable rule, or by bringing the bill to the floor under unanimous consent, which our Republican leader had agreed to.

Both of those efforts were rejected by the leadership on the other side. I think either proposal for consideration could have produced a disaster relief law before the weekend was out.

I will again urge my colleagues to reject this rule because it is no different than the one previously rejected.

I am willing, if this rule is defeated, to renew my call for the unanimous-consent agreement the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] was prepared to offer last Friday.

It would not have completely pleased everyone on either side of the issue, since it would simply call for consideration of a clean bill, without extraneous issues, in the House, without amendments except for one motion to recommit.

For those who still feel strongly that the bill should be self-financing, you can either vote against the bill or accept assurances from the leadership that a task force will be formed to address the matter of financing future emergency disaster assistance.

But, as a matter of basic principle over bringing an nearly identical rule to the floor as the one rejected, I would strongly urge a "no" vote on this rule so that we can renew that unanimous consent request for a clean bill.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, obviously, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and I and many other Members have very strong feelings about not only this legislation, but about the rule that will allow us to proceed to consideration of the flood disaster relief bill.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York and I have discussed these procedural differences over a period of a number of days now, and I do want to commend the gentleman for being willing to maintain an argument that gets above personalities and above mischaracterizations of the motives of other Members.

Mr. Speaker, I will in fact admit to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] that there is a legitimate difference of agreement as to the procedure that ought to be followed. But I think one thing that is very clear to the Members here and to the people who are watching is that if this rule is passed, we will then be able to immediately proceed to the consideration of the flood disaster relief bill.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think the people in Kansas City, St. Louis, Genevieve, and elsewhere understand or care two bits worth about the procedural differences in the Congress. Let us understand at this point that the most important thing we can do is provide aid to the people that desperately need it, and the way in which we can proceed to do this is to pass this rule.

Now, there does seem to be a substantive question that has been raised about the youth fairness program, and I want to take this opportunity to clear up any misunderstandings or misinterpretations there may be about this program. No funds, I repeat, no funds from this appropriations bill will go to that program. Funds for the program were appropriated earlier this year when the entire House of Representatives by a vote on this floor passed this program.

It is not a Los Angeles-wide program. It is a nationwide program, a competitive grants program for both rural and urban communities. It is modeled after a successful program initiated by former Secretary of Labor Elizabeth Dole designed for hard to reach individuals, perhaps older than the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] would like to apply this program to, but still a laudable goal, to reach unskilled dropouts, or at least it seems so to me.

As has been mentioned before, the Youth Fair Chance Program has been approved by the House several times. The majority whip has explained that this problem came out of the conference, that they had been led to believe that, in fact, this language had been included in the previous supplemental. And whether by design or by mistake, and we prefer to believe that this mistake was unintentional, this is needed to correct the deficiency.

Opponents of the substance of this provision will have the opportunity to vote against it. The motion to recommit can strike this provision.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHEAT. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I would just say to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT], there seems to be some contention about whether or not the minority would have the right to have, as their motion to recommit, the striking of the self-executed provision which is the so-called Waters amendment. I was trying to propound that parliamentary inquiry to the Speaker, and he said he could not give me an answer on a hypothetical inquiry.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, let me suggest to the gentleman, I listened very carefully to the discussion that he was having with the Speaker. Let me suggest to the gentleman a way by which he can accomplish what he wants to accomplish, at least in terms of having a vote on this floor for the matter.

In order to recommit this bill to the committee, without the so-called Waters language, the instructions should also include a modification to the bill of some other kind, however slight, that would exceed the scope of the Waters amendment. In that way, the gentleman could, in fact, have a vote on the Waters amendment that he is, in fact, looking for.

And while I would not encourage Members to vote for the gentleman's motion to recommit, it would give us the opportunity to settle the question strictly on the amendment to which the gentleman objects.

Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. WYNN].

Mr. WYNN. Mr. Speaker, we sometimes like to say that there are two things that we should not watch being made: legislation and sausage. Unfortunately, on this occasion, I do hope people are watching. I hope people are watching all over America, because it gives them a good opportunity to see where the real gridlock lies.

I am rising today in support of this rule, because I do think we need to pass emergency disaster relief aid and we need to pass it now.

Let me tell Members, the people do not care about perks, and they do not care where we park. They care about action, and they care about results. And they want to know, can we deliver the goods when people need it. And they need it now.

The issue here is not whether we ought to be fiscally responsible and whether we ought to pay for our debts. That is not the issue at all.

The fact of the matter is, historically, in cases of emergency relief, we have not dealt with the budget question. We have dealt with the emergency.

In the case of Hurricane Andrew, in the case of Hurricane Iniki, in the case of Typhoon Omar, in the case of SBA relief, we have always said, put the emergency first and then deal with the budget discussions.

The folks on the other side want to change the rules of the game. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that if we asked the American in the Midwest that is paddling toward his living room or watching his business go down the drain whether he wants us to sit here today and have a budget discussion or a parliamentary discussion or whether he wants us to pass disaster aid, I submit he would say, "I want disaster aid."

Mr. Speaker, I believe in fiscal responsibility. I believe in paying our bills.

We have an opportunity to do that at a later date, but the issue is whether we respond today to the legitimate needs of people who are suffering in the Midwest.

I strongly urge all of my colleagues to support this rule so we can show the American people that, in fact, this is not a Congress of gridlock. This is a Congress of action.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, we keep hearing a lot about gridlock and President Clinton, and now this gentleman in the well says that we Republicans are blocking something from passing. We only have 176 Members. They have 259. That is an 83-vote majority. If they cannot pass their bill, something must be wrong with their bill. That is why so many Democrats are voting with us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes and 30 seconds to the minority whip, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding time to me.

Let me say first, Mr. Speaker, that I want to pass emergency aid to the Midwest flood victims today. I wanted to pass emergency aid last Thursday or last Friday.

I called the Democratic majority leader 8 days ago and offered to help pass emergency aid to flood victims.

We could have gotten a unanimous 100-percent Republican vote for the rule with just two changes. There was a bipartisan majority, Democrats and Republicans, who last Thursday rejected this rule, bipartisan, Democrats and Republicans.

They voted against this rule, because they wanted to force a vote on paying for the relief. That is, our generation, not our grandchildren, should pay for it, and to give credit where it is due on a bipartisan basis.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE] had found the $3 billion in offsets to pay for it. They had done the work.

And second, there was a real desire to force a vote on the so-called Waters amendment.

I would just say to my good friend from Kansas City, if we look at page 2 of their bill, line 12, "the modification to the bill printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules," I think he would have to concede there is nothing in this provision which helps the flood victims. There is nothing in this provision which relates to the Missouri or the Mississippi.

In fact, the Waters amendment is being floated on the flood waters of the Midwest. Why? Because in a free-standing up or down vote, it would not survive the debate. It could not get 218 votes or at least, I assume, that is what the Democratic leadership believes. Because it will not allow it to come to a free debate, a free vote, to have a chance to see whether or not on its own merit it would survive.

Members say, "Oh, that is parliamentary wrangling. That is just the legislative process as usual." Well, I agree with that.

I thought the vote of 1992 said, no more deficit as usual, no more Congress as usual, no more messing around as usual. Get serious about saving our grandchildren from the debt. Get serious about saving our children from the deficit and be honest with the American people about what you are doing.

If any of my colleagues can stand with a straight face and explain to me that in Kansas City or Des Moines, in St. Louis, in Dubuque, in any part of the floodwaters that they are in any way going to be helped by this provision, that it is a significant part of any emergency relief, I would reconsider.

But the truth is, they cannot say that. They know why it was put in there. It was put in there for a California reason.

There are no floods in southern California this week. It has nothing to do with flood relief, and I think that it is a disgrace to the congressional process that we are hiding this down here.

Let me also say, if this rule goes down, and I hope it will, then on our side of the aisle, we are committed to working with the Democratic leadership today to bring up a good rule today. We will help pass it today. We will give it the solid Republican support today.

We want to help the people of the Midwest, but we do not want to help the people of the Midwest at their expense so the real help goes to the politicians of California. I think that is wrong.

Mr. WHEAT Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The gentleman from Georgia has raised a number of questions. I hope he will listen to the answers.

On one hand, those from the other side of the aisle complain that we are doing something significant and substantive with the Waters amendment. and in fact, we are, because we are including legislative language to allow this provision to be implemented. But the gentleman knows that there is no money in this bill for the Youth Fair Chance Program.

Not a dime of this bill is going to anyone except the flood disaster victims. The gentleman then suggests that this provision could not stand a vote on the floor, when the gentleman knows full well that this provision has already been voted on on the floor of the House of Representatives and has passed this body by a vote of 251 to 176. The House has time and time again affirmed its support for this provision and for this program.

The language that is included here, while not including any funds, merely allows this program to be implemented, after it was left out of a previous supplemental bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS], who will discuss this national program.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased and proud to be part of this debate. I want the American people to pay close attention. I want the American people to understand who initiates good law, who maintains good law, and who is standing in the way, blocking the door for relief for flood victims.

We have people who need our help: Americans, working men and women who through no fault of their own find themselves in great distress. They are under water. Their lands are flooded. Their houses are flooded. We have people who would take this flood and would try to explain to the American people that somehow, some technical language caused by the lady from California is keeping them from voting relief for victims who need it.

These are the same people who have voted disaster relief whenever it has been needed since they have been elected. They did not stop when their States or when their communities were in trouble. They did not stop when any communities were in trouble across this country in the past. All of a sudden, while this great disaster is upon us, they have decided that they simply cannot help these victims because there is some technical amendment caused by the lady from California.

Let me just say this and explain to the American people, they started out wrong. They started out to use this issue as a deficit reduction situation. They wanted us to cut a lot of other programs in order to pay for it in ways that they have never done before. The people back home said, "Cut it out. It does not make good sense. We do not like what you are doing. Send us the money. We need help."

Because they got caught playing political games, they then turned toward the lady from California, because they thought they could divide and polarize this country and make people believe that the lady from California was doing something special for somebody in Los Angeles. The fact of the matter is, the technical correction that is in this bill, that is done time in and time out, the way we do business here, is a technical correction that helps everybody. Every community in this country benefits from my technical correction.

This is not a program that redefines who is a teenager. This is a program that says to the rural community, to the inner cities, to the farm communities, If you have some hardcore teenagers out there between the ages of 17 and 30 who may have dropped out of school, that are causing trouble, that need to be mainstreamed, that you can get them some help, get them enrolled in vocational education, give them a little support so they can have lunch money, give them a little support so they can get their clothes clean.

We passed that already. There is no money in this bill. That was funded already. There is no money in this bill, only technical language that triggers it and allows it to happen.

You cannot fool the people on this one. You are either for the flood victims or you are against them. If you are for them, you are going to vote for this rule. If you want to hold it up and you want to go home another weekend and explain to them that you did not care enough about them, to get past this nonsense, then you try it, because the American people will not stand for it.

In closing, let me just say to my colleagues, we on this side of the aisle are for the flood victims. We are going to vote for the rule. We are going to vote to make sure that we get to the debate, so we can say to the American people and to those people in the Midwest, those people under water, "We are with you. We, too, are Americans who want to see you have your fair share."

Those who do not want to do it, they have the opportunity to vote it up or down.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, if the gentlewoman's amendment were simply technical, the Senate would not have rejected the amendment. The Senate did reject the amendment. If it is included in this disaster relief bill, the Senate will refuse to act on the bill and there will be no disaster aid.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], a member of the committee.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, this rule is outrageous and it is cynical in the extreme. It is almost exactly the same rule that was defeated last week. It means that the Committee on Rules did not accommodate the majority and their objections to that rule; it rather twisted some arms. It will be interesting to see who changes their votes.

The gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS] represents that this is some kind of technical amendment. Let me assure the House that this is simply not so. This is a provision that was included in the last supplemental by using a self-executing rule. It was then sent to the conference, and the conferees specifically decided this should not be part of the final conference report. It was specifically and thoughtfully rejected, rejected by the conferees.

Let me say also I object to the rule because there are no offsets. There is no recognition how this is going to be paid for. The rule, in fact, prevents an amendment to pay for disaster assistance. Why? Why can we not have offsetting spending reductions, Mr. Speaker? Why can we not have Penny-Nussle be in order?

In fact, I would think most Americans would agree that if we are to help others in an emergency, we ought also to pay for it. We might, for example, raise the gasoline tax by 3 cents for a year. It is a disaster that affects the entire country. Why do we not make a connection between the benefits given and the costs and the method of paying for them?

It is not really a question, Mr. Speaker, of whether to pay for disaster relief. We all agree it is a high priority. It is a necessity. The question really, Mr. Speaker, is when. We can pay for it today and cost ourselves $3 billion, or we can add it to the deficit and finance it. If we finance it over a 10-year period, the cost will be $5 billion to $8 billion. If we finance it over a 30-year period, the cost will be $13 billion to $52 billion.

The Members on the other side say it is outrageous that we are debating whether to pay for disaster assistance; this is an emergency, money should be no object.

However, no matter how we vote today, the American people will eventually have to pay for it. The question is, is it $3 billion today or $52 billion tomorrow. It seems to me responsibility ought to lead us to address that question and pay the $3 billion now.

The Committee on Rules, very frankly, Mr. Speaker, does not get it. They have held up a relief bill with unrelated provisions that have no business in this bill whatsoever. They have refused to consider the lowest cost option and paying as you go, paying now.

I urge the Members to reject this thoughtless, outrageous, cynical rule and give the Committee on Rules the further chance to get it right. It can be done today. Get relief for those who need it now, and let us get on with doing this responsibly.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GOSS].

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this rule.

Mr. Speaker, when the House voted to defeat the first rule for flood relief, it took the Democrat leadership by some surprise. In a House they have controlled with an iron hand for four decades, the Democrats do not have much experience with losing votes. So last week's 216-to-205 vote caused quite a stir—a stir many of us hoped would lead immediately to a better rule.

Unfortunately, but not surprisingly, those hopes have not materialized. Instead of changing the rule, the Democrat leadership is changing the vote. Instead of prompt relief for the victims, they get smoke and mirrors. Instead of receiving the message from the membership that it is a bad rule, the Democrat leadership apparently resorted to strong-arming Members and letting pressure build over the weekend to change enough votes to get their their way and their bad rule.

As a result, today we have essentially the same rule we defeated last week—minus any fiscal responsibility and still inexplicably wedded to a totally unrelated provision to pay $100 stipends for 30-year-old teenagers in Los Angeles. No brave new change here—same old business as usual.

The Democrat leadership has held on like a dog with a bone to this extraneous provision—even at the risk of delaying relief to the flood victims in the Midwest. It is no wonder some Members and the media are openly speculating about what dealmaking is going on behind the scenes of the Democrat leadership.

Mr. Speaker, a bipartisan trio representing flood victims nonetheless recognized that our Government is deeply in debt and that we have got to face the costs of flood relief in the context of our already debilitating national debt payments.

These Members asked and answered the question of how to pay for this flood relief bill—either from this year's budget or next—to avoid heaping additional debt onto our children and grandchildren. Twice they pleaded with the Democrat majority on the Rules Committee to allow the full House to debate their ideas and twice they were turned down.

I think it is fair to graphically compare the 1993 flood in the Mississippi River Valley to the Federal debt—both are swallowing up our livelihood. The vote on this rule cannot stop the flood, but it can reduce the national debt. Yet one of my colleagues on the Rules Committee went so far in avoiding specifics of how to pay for this $3 billion bill that he told Messrs. PENNY, SLATTERY, and NUSSLE to "Just go away and let us help you."

It is a quote almost as memorable as "Hello, I'm from the Government and I'm here to help you." We all have compassion for the flood victims—and we will help them. Helping people who have been hit by a natural disaster is one of our Government's greatest obligations.

But years of ignoring the costs of our actions, emergency and pseudoemergency, have sapped our resources. Administration spokesman Leon Panetta has stated that we cannot really afford to fully help these flood victims and that probably applies to other victims of other natural disasters yet to come—unless we change our patterns of spending more money than we have.

I am willing to cut spending in other Government accounts to ensure that we can help the flood victims. I know many of my colleagues feel the same way—and we should at least be allowed to have that debate on the House floor.

Vote "no" on this rule and maybe then the Democrat leadership will get the message. The flood victims will also get relief because we can be back here today with a rule that will work.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The Chair would announce that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] has 14½ minutes remaining and the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] has 15½ minutes remaining.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HEFNER].

Mr. HEFNER. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to get into the argument about the amendment of the gentlewoman from California because I think it is a smokescreen. Let me just point out a couple of things.

Back here we had probably one of the best debates that ever took place on this floor when we were debating the Persian Gulf initiative. We did not say, "How are we going to have the offsets to pay for the Persian Gulf initiative?" Some of us voted against the Persian Gulf initiative. There are people that would tell the Members that we have recouped most of the money, the money we expended from the Persian Gulf. That is not true.

When President Bush went down to Florida, when they had the terrible hurricane there, they changed the formula on the hurricane relief from what we had on Hugo in North Carolina and South Carolina. We changed the formula from the States to the people that were getting the relief there, changed the formula.

We did not come in here and say, "How are you going to pay for this?" or "When are you going to pay for this?"

When we went to Somalia and we saw these pitiful individuals starving to death, we did not, in this well, say "We are going to have some offsets to pay for this relief in Somalia." When President Bush asked for it, we did it.

These people I saw on television this weekend, these children out filling these sandbags, it just rends your heart when you see these children trying to save their homes and help their communities. We are standing here in the well using a smokescreen about the amendment from the gentlewoman from California, where there is no money, and we are standing here and saying, "How are we going to pay for it in the future?"

We did not ask how we were going to pay for the Persian Gulf initiative. We did not ask how we were going to pay for the Somalia initiative. We said to the Egyptians, "We are going to forgive the $7 billion that you owe us." We did not say, "How are we going to offset that?" We thought there was a need and we addressed the need.

People in the Midwest are hurting. They are hurting, and they are hurting very badly. It makes little difference to them where we are going to have these offsets.

I want to mention one more thing. There are 44 people in this House, and some of them are Democrats, there are 44 people in this House that said, "We are not for anything." They did not vote for the Kasich budget.

□ 1410

They did not vote for the Republican budget. They did not vote for the Democratic budget. They did not vote for anything. They do not stand for anything.

So to these 44 I would say you do not have a stake in this argument because you do not stand for anything.

To me the people in the Midwest are hurting, and they are hurting bad. And they are our friends, they are citizens of this country, and we owe it to them to come to their aid in this dire circumstance. And it is hypocritical for us to throw up smoke screens and not do it.

I urge Members to vote for this rule.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], our deputy minority whip.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply say to the gentleman from North Carolina who just spoke, some of us did insist that those things be paid for, and in fact, the Persian Gulf war was paid for. So I am not certain just exactly what the hypocrisy is that he is talking about.

Mr. HEFNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. No, I do not yield. I did not ask the gentleman to yield.

I wanted to talk about the amendment.

The fact is the Waters amendment was discussed on the floor the last time we had this out. I know because I discussed it. The idea that the gentleman would suggest that there is hypocrisy, or there is a smokescreen here, this is something we have focused on from the outset. We have said this is an idea that ought not be included in a flood relief bill.

The fact is that this amendment is driving this process. The gentleman from North Carolina, who serves on the Appropriations Committee, knows you can bring that appropriation bill to the floor without the rule. There is no need for the rule. It can come to the floor without a rule immediately. There is no need for this rule.

The only reason why the rule exists is for one purpose and one purpose alone. That is to pass into law the provision that gives a $100 a week stipend to 30-year-old teenagers to keep themselves well groomed. That is the only reason why the rule is being passed. It has nothing to do with flood relief. There is no flood relief provision that cannot be brought to the floor directly and without a rule.

So, we are dealing with a matter here that is extraneous, that is unneeded, and is completely superfluous. And I am surprised to hear Democrats get up and say time and time again that that is what they are for. They are for taking that flood relief bill and making it into a Christmas tree with this particular amendment on it that does nothing for flood victims and does only things for people in Los Angeles. I have a hard time understanding that, and it seems to me that the American people are going to have a hard time understanding it.

I found a number of my constituents this weekend who want to do everything they can to help the people across this country who are in a desperate situation to find the aid that they do need. But they do not want to do it if we are going to Christmas tree it with things like the Waters amendment.

So I would suggest to the House the way to make certain that we do not have the Waters amendment in this bill is to turn down this rule.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Missouri [Ms. DANNER].

Ms. DANNER. Mr. Speaker, there is a very well-known poem, "Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink." In my district in Missouri that is not a poem, it is a true story.

I have literally over 100,000 people with no water to drink. I have people without electricity. I have people whose homes are flooded to the roof. This is not a flood that has come up quickly and will recede quickly, but it is one that has come up slowly and is staying there, and it is raining in northwest Missouri today.

There is another well-known phrase, "Never change horses in the middle of the stream." As a freshman Member of Congress, that is what I hear Members talking about. You had the opportunity after all the natural disasters you have faced over these years, whether it was Hugo, or Andrew, or I could go on and on, to introduce legislation to offset catastrophes, but you have not done it. Why in the world are Members wanting to do it right now in the midst of this catastrophe?

Please let us pass this rule. Then let us address what is very truly an issue that we should address, which is pay for these catastrophes. But let us do it ahead of time, because we know that there will be future earthquakes in California, there will be hurricanes in Florida, there will be floods other places, there will be fires, there will be many natural disasters we need to pay for.

But let us do it at the appropriate time. That time is not now.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY], who has an amendment that we all would like to support.

Mr. FINGERHUT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PENNY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. FINGERHUT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I wanted to say to the gentleman, because there have been so many mischaracterizations of Members' motives in this House in the press that I wanted to say that this Member voted against the rule last time and is going to do so today because we want to see an amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY], and we congratulate him on it, and we urge Members to bring it to the floor for a vote.

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, a "no" vote on the rule today is not a vote against disaster aid. Most Democrats and Republicans alike support assistance to the residents of the flood-ravaged Midwest, and most will vote for this aid on final passage.

The dispute is not about providing aid, but rather about paying for it. A "no" vote on the rule today will not delay disaster payments. It is important to stress that disaster aid money is already in the pipeline. This aid package simply makes available additional funds for FEMA, SBA, and other agencies, funds that will soon be required. There is no doubt that these additional amounts will be appropriated in plenty of time to keep aid flowing.

President Clinton said yesterday, "Let's vote. I don't have to win them all, but let's make decisions." The President is correct. We should vote and move on.

The dispute is caused by those who want to deny a vote on an amendment to honestly finance this aid package. We were sent here to cast votes and to make decisions. The rule before us today is designed to deny a vote and to avoid a decision.

That is not leadership. That is politics as usual. The American taxpayers deserve better.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, thousands of my neighbors in the heartland are suffering, and we need to respond. We need to respond today, and we need to respond decisively. And this Member wants to do that.

Today we have the opportunity to respond in a compassionate way but also in a fiscally responsible way. All this Member is suggesting is that we have an opportunity to vote up or down on a simple amendment, and that is to cut the discretionary budget next year across the board by 1 percent to pay for the first $3 billion package of disaster assistance requested. That is all this Member is requesting.

Beyond that, I think it is important for us to address this question of the Youth Fair Chance Program. No one in this body, I hope, will vote against this rule because of the language involving the Youth Fair Chance Program. I support the Youth Fair Chance Program. I support the language that the gentlewoman from California is urging us to include in this measure. Not one dime will be diverted from disaster assistance to the Youth Fair Chance Program.

So let us eliminate that smoke screen. Let us move quickly today. Let us not let the sun set on this proposition until we have passed it out of this House, and until this body has had the opportunity to vote on one simple amendment, and that is to cut by 1 percent discretionary spending next year across the board to pay for the first $3 billion.

I know in the past we have not done this. And I, frankly, in the past voted for things that I wish I would not have voted for on an emergency basis. But the people last fall said one thing: We want change. We want you to do things differently.

So if we did it wrong with the Kurds, if we did it wrong with the Persian Gulf, if we did it wrong with Hurricane Hugo or the earthquake or the droughts in the past, let us change the way we are doing business. Let us stop right now what we have been doing in the past, and let us vote on one amendment to pay for this $3 billion in disaster assistance. We can do it today. We can pass this measure out of the House, and we can respond to the victims of this terrible disaster in a compassionate and fiscally responsible manner.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, let the record show that the last three speakers were all Democrats joining we Republicans in a bipartisan effort to try and pay for this disaster aid.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. I thank my friend from Glens Falls for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, as has been pointed out by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, this really comes down to one very simple and basic question: What is a bigger national priority, helping victims of a massive natural disaster or fully funding every single program in our discretionary budget?

It seem to me you have a very simple choice here. We should move in the direction of the Penny-Nussle amendment. Why? My State has benefited from aid here when we have suffered from devastating earthquakes in the past, and I hope we will be able to rely on this Congress again when we face them in the future.

But the fact of the matter is we cannot continue moving down that route without dealing with the deficit crisis that exists right here.

People in the Midwest want us to do both things. Like my friend from Kansas City, my parents are there, I talked to them, and they said, "David, get this aid package through, but don't do it by continuing to add to the Federal deficit."

I want to say this is a red-herring we have heard from our friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN], on the Kurdish question which Mr. SLATTERY just raised. He claimed that those of us who voted to finance aid to Kurdish refugees were in fact adding to the deficit. It was not. That humanitarian aid was funded from the interest earned on the Desert Storm cooperation account, funded by our allies. It did not add to the deficit.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman form Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], the majority whip.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, throughout the Midwest swollen rivers are closing in, ravaging homes and farms. The rains keep coming.

Yet, the Republicans in the House continue to stall.

They voted for emergency relief for the Kurds, for the people of Bangladesh, for every other disaster that has come along.

Now when the people of eight flood-stricken States need their help, where are they?

Refusing to vote for this rule because we declare the raging rivers of the Midwest an emergency. If this isn't an emergency, if this isn't a disaster, what is?

Just ask the people of Missouri, the people of Illinois, the people of Iowa, is this an emergency?

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle have mentioned the Waters amendment.

Let me speak clearly to this issue. The Waters amendment is simply a technical correction to allow the implementation of a job training program that has already been approved by the House.

There is no money in this bill for this job training program, just simple authorizing language that we were told was in the last supplemental, that the vast majority of this House believed was already in law.

Every dime in this bill will go to flood victims.

This job training program is not limited to Los Angeles; any region of the country can qualify for this program.

I am outraged at some of the charges I have heard levied against this rule. If you don't like the job training language, you will have a chance to vote against it later.

But do not give us this weak excuse.

The flooded areas of this country need our help now; this is an emergency.

Throughout the towns of the Midwest we have seen acts of heroism, of cooperation, people working hand in hand to fight this raging natural disaster.

It is time for the Members of this House to join in, to help alleviate the pain and suffering afflicting our fellow constituents.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT].

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I will support H.R. 2667, and I hope that on final passage, we will have an unanimous vote in favor of providing this disaster assistance. But, I will vote "no" once again, on the rule before us now.

Last week, the House defeated a nearly identical rule, which was before us because we wanted the chance to at least consider a few amendments on reordering our spending priorities, in light of Mother Nature's decision to make weather history in the Midwest. And a great many of us did not think it was appropriate to force this House to greatly expand a program in Los Angeles, on the backs of the flood and weather victims hundreds of miles away.

In the short time since, the only things that have changed are that the flood waters are still rising and we have probably lost more points on the public approval meter.

Mr. Speaker, it is true, as the gentleman from Illinois stated, that we have recently declared a bookkeeping emergency for Hurricane Andrew, for the L.A. riots, for the flooding in Chicago, and even for certain relief efforts overseas. But that bookkeeping change did not wipe out the spending. We still spent the money, and we still added in real terms, to the deficit.

Nebraska has joined those States where it just will not stop raining. We have had hundred-mile-an-hour winds that flattened homes, businesses, crops, and power facilities. Roads and bridges are under water, or on their way to St. Louis. I guess 7 years of praying for rain has finally added up.

But I believe the Midwest is experiencing enough misery, without the added frustration of having their elected representatives once again refuse to even try to get things right back here. It is often said that, "if it's not one thing it's another—today it seems to be both.

We will get emergency aid out to the disaster victims in the Midwest. It is an immediate and real priority. So why can't we at least have the opportunity to shift it to where it is needed now, and needed so very desperately.

Mr. Speaker, I urge a vote against the rule and for a chance to show Americans that we really do care—that we care deeply about their current dire situation.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MORAN].

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, cutting 1 percent in the discretionary programs in this budget function does not sound like any big deal. But with 2 months left in the fiscal year, this is what it means: It is a big deal, it would take $115 million from the FBI. That means that you would have every FBI employee furloughed for 16 days. It would take $29 million from the U.S. attorney's office, resulting in a furlough of 9 days for U.S. attorneys, including those investigating the House post office scandal. It would take $9 million from the U.S. Marshals Service.

Mr. Speaker, this is a big deal, and it is not something that this budget can tolerate.

GENERAL REASON TO OPPOSE NUSSLE AMENDMENT

Federal employees are being singled out as the only taxpayers required to offset the cost of this supplemental.

For example, the Nussle amendment would result in a 16-day furlough of all FBI employees.

Is it fair to offset the cost of the flood by taking away the pay of our dedicated and hardworking Federal employees.

Why should the families of Federal employees be the only families who suffer from pay cuts to pay for this supplemental.

Simple fairness requires that all taxpayers and not just Federal employees bear the cost of this supplemental.

IMPACT OF NUSSLE AMENDMENT ON LAW ENFORCEMENT

The Nussle amendment would rescind an estimated $115 million from amounts previously appropriated to the FBI.

With only 2 months left in fiscal year 1993, a reduction of this magnitude would require a furlough of all FBI personnel for 16 days.

This cut would require FBI agents investigating the bombing of the World Trade Center to take an unpaid, 3-week vacation right in the middle of that investigation.

The Nussle amendment rescinds an estimated $28.9 million from amounts previously appropriated to the U.S. attorneys, resulting in a furlough of all U.S. attorney personnel for 9 days.

U.S. attorneys across the country would have to suspend the prosecution of numerous criminal trials with the real possibility of criminals being released due to violations of the Speedy Trial Act.

The U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia would have to delay the investigation and prosecution involving the House post office. If you are in favor of delaying this investigation, vote for this amendment.

The Nussle amendment rescinds $9 million from the U.S. marshals.

The resulting 12 days of furloughs would suspend the marshals efforts to apprehend fugitive felons and delay court hearings.

The Nussle amendment would rescind an estimated $72.4 million from amounts previously appropriated to construct new prisons.

This is not a paper cut. The Justice Department estimates that this rescission will eliminate at least 2 major prison facilities.

The loss of two or more prisons may create unacceptable overcrowding in the prisons resulting in the early release of convicted felons or the release of illegal aliens from detention.

The Nussle amendment would rescind an estimated $1.3 million from amounts previously appropriated for the U.S. trustees.

If you are in favor of furloughing trustees for over a week, and further delaying the backlog of bankruptcy cases, vote for this amendment.

The Nussle amendment would rescind an estimated $13.3 million from amounts previously appropriated for the various litigating divisions of the Justice Department, resulting in 12 days of furloughs.

If you are in favor of furloughing attorneys involved in critical prosecutions of major organized crime, vote for this amendment.

If you are in favor of furloughing attorneys involved in the enforcement of our environmental laws, vote for this amendment.

Justice delayed is justice denied.

Oppose the Nussle amendment.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EWING].

Mr. EWING. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this rule, but in support of the disaster aid.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of flood relief. I am fully committed to providing relief to the victims of the flood in the midwest, and in my home State of Illinois. I have visited flood-ravaged areas in Illinois, and this is a matter that requires the immediate attention of Congress. Unfortunately the Democrats in Congress have severely distorted the position of Republicans on this issue.

Most Americans don't realize that each bill considered by the House comes with a set of rules detailing the manner in which the bill will be considered and what amendments may be offered. Last Friday, a majority of the Members in the House—171 Republicans and 45 Democrats—voted against the rule on the flood relief bill because it denied Members an opportunity to vote on an amendment which would pay for the relief instead of adding the cost to the deficit. In this time of serious budgetary problems, we felt that an amendment to pay the bill for flood relief should at least be allowed to be voted on.

The Democratic leadership in the House refused to follow the desire of the majority in the House and allow a vote on that amendment. It would have taken only 15 minutes to complete this additional vote. Instead of resolving this dispute, the Democrats voted to go home for the weekend and play politics. They delayed the flood relief bill intentionally so they could try to embarrass Republicans in their districts over the weekend.

If a vote on the amendment to pay for the relief is defeated, I will vote for flood relief and I know almost all of my colleagues will too. All I want is the chance to vote to pay the bill.

On a side note, I am also upset that the House leadership used this vote on flood relief as a chance to pass a project of one of their party members entirely unrelated to flood relief. When it became clear Congress would need to appropriate money, we were told the bill would be kept clean and free of nonflood-related items. However, attached to the flood bill rule is a provision which would allow certain teenagers—up to the age of 30—to obtain a $100 a week stipend through a jobs program. This has nothing to do with the flood and should not be in the bill.

It's about time the American people got straight answers and honest work from their representatives. The American people are sick and tired of a Congress that won't do the people's work, and frankly so am I. Let's defeat this rule, again. Let's have a vote on an amendment to pay the bill for flood relief. Then let's pass the appropriation and do something to help the victims of flooding.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. ZELIFF].

Mr. ZELIFF. Mr. Speaker, no one disputes the urgent need for flood relief. Let me repeat this point very slowly so everyone can understand: No one, on either side of the aisle, disputes the urgent need to provide assistance to help the victims of the flood in the Midwest.

There is clear dispute, however, over whether we should pay for the aid or simply push the cost off onto the backs of our children and grandchildren.

Unfortunately, there seems to be a mindset which pervades this institution, Mr. Speaker, a mindset which prevents the leadership in the House from even considering ways to pay for new spending. We witnessed this mindset earlier this year during the debate over extended unemployment benefits. Very few Members questioned the need for extended benefits, but I and many of my colleagues objected to the fact that they were not paid for. This mindset to spend now and pay later is a sickness, Mr. Speaker, and for many of my Democrat friends the sickness is terminal.

We have heard frequently over the course of this debate that we have passed previous emergency spending bills for domestic and foreign policy needs and did so without spending offsets. This is true, but I question whether this justifies further deficit spending at a time when we simply cannot afford to do so.

If we are left with no choice but to raise the deficit to help the flood victims, Mr. Speaker, I will be willing to do so. The fact is, however, we do have a choice and we should be given the opportunity to vote on it.

But wait a minute, Mr. Speaker, I almost forgot. We are not just voting to help flood victims, we are also voting to pay 30-year-old youths in Los Angeles $100 a week. How can my Democratic colleagues honestly argue the desperate need for this package of flood assistance and at the same time include this boondoggle in the bill. The rule rejected by the House last Thursday would have allowed us to take this nongermane amendment out of the disaster relief bill. This vote incensed Democrats as well as Republicans.

The aid needs to be provided and done so quickly, but we should at least try to offset the new spending by cuts in other programs. For the sake of fiscal responsibility, what is wrong with providing offsets to pay for it. Why can we not put this question to a vote? Up or down and then get on with it.

If we are really serious about deficit reduction and the economic future of our country we should at least be given the opportunity to find ways to pay for all new spending programs, including emergency spending bills.

We all talk about reform and the need for change. Let us vote "no" on this rule and allow us to deal with a legitimate aid bill. Let us work the will of the House.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CAMP].

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, we have two disasters in the Nation today—one is a natural disaster and the other is manmade. The flood in the Midwest is a natural disaster and helping people get back on their feet is the right thing to do. I lived through the devastating floods which struck mid-Michigan in 1986. And, I recognize the emotional and financial disaster a flood can bring to people's lives. Like others in this Chamber, I support assistance to help the families, farmers, and businesses get their lives back in order.

The manmade disaster is the budget deficit. It looms over our heads and the heads of future generations who will actually pay the bill.

We need the chance to do something about both disasters today. We can help flood-stricken victims in the Midwest and be responsible ensuring we can pay for the next disaster that comes down the road.

Republicans and many Democrats have joined together saying we need to allow amendments to be offered on the floor of the House that will offer spending cuts in other Government programs to pay for the disaster assistance. We have also said that other types of spending unrelated to the disaster should not be included in the bill.

Unfortunately, the Democrat leadership has failed on both counts. They will not even allow discussion and a vote to help find spending cuts in considering the disaster bill. They will not allow discussion and a vote to delete spending in the bill that is unrelated to the disaster. This rule subverts the very ability to debate ideas and vote on them—hallmarks of our Democracy.

Mr. Speaker, in the 1992 election, people across America told Congress, let us change business as usual by paying for spending and not creating new spending programs—especially loading up truly emergency spending like a Christmas tree with nondisaster spending.

Mr. Speaker, we should provide disaster assistance to these innocent flood victims, but not increase the deficit by borrowing the money on the backs of future generations.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANZULLO].

Mr. MANZULLO. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, today we have the opportunity to cast a vote for the victims of the horrible Midwest floods. Let me make this absolutely clear: I will vote for flood relief and I encourage my colleagues to do the same.

But this debate is not about whether to help the victims of the flood. This is a debate about priorities that Congress must face.

This has been brought to focus because of the overwhelming need of the flood victims. When I see the faces of those people in my district who are facing this loss, I have to look them in the eye and say that I did whatever was necessary to cut spending so that there would be money to spend on a true national crisis—the floods of the Midwest.

Most Americans have lost confidence in Congress, and I do not blame them. They see the need for relief for the flood victims. yet, they also see the reluctance of Congress to cut other programs that we simply cannot afford.

Mr. Speaker, some of my constituents do not have a roof over their head. Yet, Congress spent $500,000 to renovate Lawrence Welk's home even after the American people repudiated it.

Roads are buckled and destroyed. Yet, Congress will spend $450,000 on repairing a bike path in northern Virginia. Common sense says you do not spend money on bike paths when disaster strikes.

Railroad tracks are underwater. Yet, Congress will spend $18 million for an enclosed Senate subway system.

Many people cannot receive mail. Post offices are flooded in many towns in the Midwest. Yet, Congress will spend $40 million on free postage on itself.

In Sunday's Washington Post, we discovered that Congress spends $100,000 to train beagles in Hawaii to sniff out brown tree snakes. Congress also created seven—yes seven—different and redundant homeless programs.

And, yesterday's hearing before the Government Operations Committee revealed that the Defense Department squandered almost $16 million on unneeded computer equipment.

Can't Congress even come up with one spending cut to pay for disaster relief?

Since becoming a member of this body last January, I voted to cut spending 85 times that would have saved over $54 billion. Unfortunately, the majority in this House voted against most of these spending cuts. Imagine the help we could give to the flood victims if we used just a fraction of that money.

And that is not the worst of it. Not only does Congress dodge the tough spending choices but it expands the size and scope of the Federal Government. Just yesterday, this body voted to spend $1 billion on establishing a new computer network system. We will also debate a new program called national service to promote voluntarism that could cost ultimately tens of billions of dollars.

The people don't want new programs: They want a Congress that cuts programs and waste, that will do away with the excesses of a bloated bureaucracy.

Mr. Speaker, my congressional district is under water. The cries of the flood victims are loud and clear: Our homes are damaged, our livelihoods are destroyed. Our businesses are suffering. Our farms are devastated.

That's why this Nation has to reorder its priorities. Common sense dictates it. The flood victims demand it.

And that is why I am voting for flood relief.

□ 1430

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California [Mr. TUCKER].

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, we are concerned about the flood victims today. The prayers for the rain have been answered, but now the prayers for congressional responsibility must be answered.

If my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are concerned about cutting costs, then they will move with all expediency to pass this rule and to pass this bill, because every second, every minute, every day that we delay, the cost in lives, the cost of putting more money out to recover and relieve these flood victims is escalating. So now we must pass this rule and we must pass this bill, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MCINNIS], a distinguished freshman Member of this body.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I do thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

I think it is about time we tell the American people procedurally exactly what is going on, and let me give you an example.

We have here a bill to assist the flood victims in this country. There is nobody in this country who does not have sympathy for the flood victims. All of us feel the sorrow, but what was successfully maneuvered by the other side was, gee, this is the only thing in that bill.

Well, let us talk about the other things. What do we have in this hand? In this hand, we have a Los Angeles jobs bill. Do not let them tell you it is for rural America. I am from rural America, and even if it was for rural America, we will give it up. It is not for rural America. It is for Los Angeles, CA.

What has happened here is that procedurally they have put the jobs bill for Los Angeles, CA, and they have tucked it in, tucked it inside the bill for emergency relief for the flood victims, even though it has absolutely nothing to do with the flood victims bill.

What we are asking here today is let us separate the two.

Do you know why they do not want to separate the two? Because the Los Angeles job bill could never stand on its own. So they want to play coattail on the tragedy of the people who are the flood victims of the country, and they are doing it very successfully by putting the blame on those who have the courage to stand up and say, "Don't put this nonessential bill into this flood victims bill. Don't take advantage of those people's misery and the disasters that have fallen upon them. Make it stand on its own merits." That is where the courage is in this body.

Let us all assist the flood victims, but let us do what the American people are saying that we should do in the U.S. Congress, and that is stand up and be honest with them and do not coattail. Do not put in Christmas trees. Keep the issues apart.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, very briefly and very quickly for those at home and in this Chamber, the so-called Waters amendment does not have any additional funds in this bill and the technical language applies to a program that is nationwide, not for Los Angeles.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, let me tell you why so many of us from flooded areas resent this debate about pay-as-you-go.

First, it is not an easy concept. The gentleman from Georgia said, "We'll stick around all afternoon if we have to, to resolve this pay-as-you-go."

Well, let me just tell you, when you lay off every FBI agent for 16 days, all the U.S. attorneys for 9 days, all the U.S. marshals for 12 days, and close down the Customs Service for 2 months in order to pay for this disaster, you are going to have a lot of debate on this floor. It will go on for weeks, and that is not fair to the flood victims.

Let me tell you something further. Heavyweight champion Joe Lewis used to say of his opponents, "They can run, but they can't hide."

Last week we could not get a single Republican vote to bring flood disaster assistance to the floor. I hope it changes today.

We know that 2 years ago 105 Republicans who voted against the rule for flood disaster assistance voted for disaster assistance for the Kurdish refugees.

And let me tell you something else. Two months ago on this floor we had a vote on paying for the defense costs to help the starving people in Somalia. One hundred twenty-eight Republicans who would not vote to bring the flood disaster bill to the floor voted to pay and increase the deficit for the cost of Somalian assistance, and they included the following five Members who have already spoken today:

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

The gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], and in my own home State, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANZULLO].

But I want to tell you this, Mr. Speaker. We understand in the Midwest there are some Members of Congress who would say yes to Mideast help, but no to Midwest help.

There are some Members of Congress who would say let us try to help Somalia, but let us not try to help some Americans.

We need a helping hand in the Midwest. We are not looking for your sympathy. We want some assistance to get back on our feet and we should not have to be embroiled in this partisan debate and see this kind of gridlock at the expense of needy people.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that up until that point we had tried to keep politics out of this.

FEMA just called and said that no aid is being held up whatsoever. So why do we not get the record straight.

Mr. Reischauer says in answer to my good friend, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT], that this amendment, the Waters amendment, will expand the potential eligible population for the Youth Fair Chance Program and will result in requests for additional appropriation amounts.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE].

Mr. WHEAT. Would the gentleman read the line in that letter, the previous sentence in that letter?

Mr. SOLOMON. The gentleman can read it on his own time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The gentleman from New York has the time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE], a very reputable Member of this House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE] is recognized for 3½ minutes.

Mr. NUSSLE. Mr. Speaker, a statement has been made that our constituents do not understand the actions of this body over the course of its deliberations these past few days. We should not be surprised by that fact, but rather be challenged as our Nation's Representatives to enlighten and explain our actions.

They may not understand our rules, yet those rules should be followed if adopted by the majority of its Members. If a rule is struck down because a majority has worked its will and based its decision on fundamental principles, then that dedication to that fundamental principle should not be swayed and should not be changed because of the passage of hours and days or the harassment by the majority, the minority, or the media.

Disaster aid is necessary and fundamental to the many victims I represent. Paying for that disaster is also necessary and fundamental to the future victims of deficits that cannot speak.

Thomas Jefferson once said:

> The question whether one generation has the right to bind another by a deficit it imposes is a question of such consequence as to place it among the fundamental principles of our government. We should consider ourselves unauthorized to saddle posterity with our debts and normally bound to pay for them ourselves.

The people's House has an obligation to be fair and have open debate on the fundamental principles that bind our Nation and keep it strong. To suggest it is playing politics or delaying action to first believe in principles and then to pursue those and preserve those principles is to pervert our democratic process.

We can be both compassionate and responsible and we can rule orderly.

Vote against this rule. Come up with a rule that provides for open and fair debate on the fundamental principles that bind this Nation, protect your principles from a minority that does not respect those principles.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, I have sat through the whole debate, and I am perplexed and frustrated with the trend of the discussion.

The bulk of the moneys utilized in this legislation will go to help agriculture. We have paid for it already. In the past 12 years the Committee on Agriculture has reduced expenditures by $52 billion. We are asking here for $3 billion. We have given $4 billion every year for the past 4 years, and I say to those who stand here and say we have to be fiscally responsible, we have to find out where the money has to come from:

We gave you the money. It's already there.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The gentleman from New York has 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, after the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] moves the rule, I intend to reserve a point of order against the modification printed in part 1, and I hope that I will be recognized for that purpose.

I urge a "no" vote on this rule so we can bring this bill to the floor on a unanimous-consent request so that Members can vote up or down on this legislation.

Mr. WHEAT. Does the gentleman from New York yield back the balance of his time?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] is intending to sum up, I would yield back the balance of my time, which is 10 seconds.

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of closing debate on this rule, I yield all time remaining to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], the distinguished majority leader.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT] is recognized for 2¼ minutes.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, Members of the House, I urge Members to vote for this rule. What we are seeing in the Midwest today is not an emergency, it is not even a tragedy. It is, Mr. Speaker, a total catastrophe, and it is not over because the water-soaked levees have just begun to break up and down the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. Twelve thousand people in Missouri are out of their houses and 20,000 people in Missouri alone are out of their jobs.

When we put an emergency provision into the Budget Act in 1990, Mr. Speaker, we did it because we realized there could be unforeseen circumstances that would require immediate action, and that is what we did for Hugo, a billion dollars. That is what we did for California's earthquake, $3 billion. And that is what we did for the hurricane in Florida, $9 billion.

Now we are going through a budget right now, and we are figuring out $500 billion of deficit reduction over the next 5 years. It is that setting in which we should consider and decide deficit reduction. But when we have unforeseen emergencies and circumstances that demand immediate action, we do not stop everything and go through a budget process. We do that in the reconciliation bill. We do that in the regular budget process, make those decisions, make those decisions in the proper context.

But not today, Mr. Speaker, not when people are out of their houses, not when people are unemployed, not when people are fighting day and night, putting up sandbags to save their lives; let us not have a budget discussion. Let us have an emergency discussion. Let us pass this rule and pass this bill. Let us pull this Congress together and pull this country behind the people that are out there fighting for their lives in the Mississippi Valley today.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise with disappointment to oppose H.R. 2667. I could not agree more with my colleagues who have spoken about the need for Congress to respond to the terrible suffering and damage caused by this flood. I do not in any way dispute the need for action by the Federal Government in response to this terrible tragedy. The Federal Government should provide assistance to people affected by unexpected natural disasters of this magnitude. But I must object to those who argue that we must declare an emergency—must deficit spend once again—to provide the money for it. I simply cannot believe that every dime of the Government's $1.5 trillion budget is absolutely vital and there is not room to cut spending to pay for this bill.

I sincerely regret that the Rules Committee declined to allow TIM PENNY and JIM NUSSLE to offer their amendment to offset the cost of this package by making specific cuts in existing spending programs despite the fact that the House expressed its will that this amendment should be considered when we defeated the rule last Thursday. Members may or may not agree with the specific cuts that were included in the Penny-Nussle amendment, but we should all be able to agree that there is room in our $1.5 trillion budget to pay for this bill. We must begin to resist the temptation to always duck the hard choices to pay for unexpected costs by declaring emergencies.

I am disappointed that many Members on the other side of the aisle have focused on the relatively minor issue of the Waters amendment, instead of the much more significant issue of whether or not this House will begin to pay for spending. I have stated my support for the concept behind the Youth Fair Chance Program in the past, and continue to believe that it is an idea worth pursuing. I must say, however, that in general I do not feel appropriations bills are the correct place for authorizing language and more specifically, an appropriations bill which intends to provide assistance for flood affected areas is not the appropriate place to consider this unrelated authorization change. I do want to stress that my vote against the rule last Thursday and my opposition to this rule is founded not on the Youth Fair Chance Program, but is based on the fact that the rule does not allow this House to even consider paying for the spending in the bill.

Last Thursday, the House voted to take a small step in changing business as usual, stepping in the direction of a balanced budget by defeating the rule that would have allowed us to spend $2.7 billion that we don't have. We must start setting priorities and making the tough choices that will pay for items we decide are priorities. Obviously, this natural disaster constitutes a priority. That means it also constitutes spending which we should pay for.

Perhaps the most exasperating argument I have heard during this debate is the one which states: Because we have a long history of fiscal irresponsibility—of not paying for our spending—we have an obligation to continue that fiscal irresponsibility. To those people I must ask, When is the right time to begin acting responsibly? The responsible action for us today is to rush support to the unfortunate flood victims with dollars achieved through cuts elsewhere. We will never achieve the balanced budget which Americans want if we continue to fund every good cause without considering where the money is coming from.

I urge my colleagues to take one small step toward a balanced budget by voting against this rule until the House is allowed to consider amendments paying for these urgent concerns. I urge my colleagues to embrace full responsibility, to lead and protect this country in the way our constituents elected us to lead.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT].

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve a point of order against the modification printed in part 1 of the report of the Committee on Rules and will raise it immediately after the vote on the rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] will appear in the RECORD.

The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the grounds that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 224, nays 205, not voting 6, as follows:

□ 1505

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Derrick for, with Mr. McDade against.

Mr. Moakley for, with Mr. Packard against.

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I renew my point of order against the modification printed in part 1 of the Committee on Rules report on the grounds that it is not germane and in violation of clause 7, rule XVI and constitutes legislating in an appropriations bill in violation of clause 2, rule XXI.

Mr. Speaker, a point of order was reserved prior to adoption of the rule, since, apparently, that is the point at which the modification was first to be in the House. I have offered this before the bill is called up, since I am aware that all points of order are waived against the bill, as modified, but no points of order are waived in the rule against the modification.

I would insist on my point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], chairman of the committee, wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Speaker, the bill is, obviously, protected by the rule just adopted. For instance, on page 3, Mr. Speaker, it provides in part as follows: "All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived."

In addition, further, "All points of order against the bill, as modified, are waived."

Mr. Speaker, the point raised by my friend, the gentleman from New York, is not a valid point of order.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

My parliamentary inquiry is that prior to consideration of the rule which makes this bill in order, the Chair had said it was unable to render a decision on whether or not a point of order could be raised against this modification, which is the so-called Waters amendment.

Is the Chair now in a position to be able to tell us whether or not a point of order would stand against the motion to recommit that would include striking the Waters amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WISE). The Chair is ready to proceed to address the gentleman's point of order, and will address much of the gentleman's parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SOLOMON. I stand ready to listen, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order on a recommittal motion would have to be made when that motion is offered.

Referring to the gentleman's point of order, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] makes a point of order that a certain provision in the bill, as modified, constitutes, as the chairman understands it, a nongermane amendment and is legislation on a general appropriations bill.

The provision in question is the new section inserted in the bill by operation of House Resolution 226, the special order providing for its consideration. Thus, the bill is now pending consideration in that modified form. Moreover, House Resolution 226 waives all points of order against the bill, as modified. Consequently, the point of order made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] has been waived.

Once again, the Chair would refer the gentleman in this question and others that have been raised to the decision on February 24, 1993, by Speaker pro tempore MAZZOLI.

In response to a parliamentary inquiry regarding the effect of adoption of a special order of business self-executing the adoption of an amendment which, if separately considered, might constitute a violation of a rule of the House, Speaker pro tempore MAZZOLI responded that "Once the bill—as so modified—is called up * * * because the rule which has by that time been adopted has in it waivers of points of order, that point of order could not be raised."

Therefore, the gentleman's point of order is not sustained.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. SOLOMON. I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman may state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, my interpretation of what the Chair just told the body is that on the motion to recommit containing a motion to strike the Waters amendment, the point of order has been waived against that and we would, then, be allowed to offer that without a point of order standing against it.

I would ask, is that what the Speaker just stated?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will reserve that decision until that time arrives, should it arrive.

Mr. WALKER. I have a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, at what point in the process which just ensued was it appropriate to raise a point of order against the amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not appropriate after the rule has been adopted.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, the point of order was reserved before that in the course of the rule, and it was reserved as the debate began.

My parliamentary inquiry is, at what point during that process was it in fact appropriate to raise a point of order similar to the one that the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] just propounded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order against the rule was properly raised when the rule was called up, and the Chair ruled on that point of order. The point of order now is not appropriate for the reasons that the Chair has already stated.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, as a further parliamentary inquiry, I am not certain that the Chair is understanding we are talking about the language in the modification. I recognize that the Chair ruled on the rule and the point of order on the rule. I am not asking about a point of order on the modification.

When was the appropriate time for a Member to raise a point of order with regard to the nongermane legislating in an appropriations modification?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] is aware that the rule that was adopted waives all points of order.

Mr. WALKER. The gentleman is aware of that. The Chair is not answering the gentleman's question.

I am asking the Chair for a specific time when it was appropriate to raise the point of order, since it was not raised in the rule and the gentleman is now saying that it is not appropriate after the rule. I am asking the Chair when the appropriate time to raise that point of order was.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Once again, the Chair ruled on the point of order that the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] raised, and he raised it at an appropriate time the first time, when the rule was called up. The rule was adopted. That rule now waives all points of order. That should dispose of this question.

Other matters that may come before the Chair would have to be brought up at the appropriate time.

Mr. WALKER. I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The Chair at that time ruled against the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] in part because his point of order was not timely. Now the Chair is saying that it is going to further rule that this is not timely.

The question that I have is, what is the appropriate time? The Chair did rule on the point of order at that point, but part of the ruling against the point of order was that it did not occur timely.

The inquiry of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is now, what is the time frame in which this modification can be in fact challenged by a point of order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is not aware of such a time, under the circumstances and the precedents.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the Chair.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill, H.R. 2667, and that I may include tabular and extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 226 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2667.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2667) making emergency supplemental appropriations for relief from the major, widespread flooding in the Midwest for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes, with Mr. WILLIAMS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] will be recognized for 45 minutes, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] will be recognized for 45 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER].

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, today we bring to the floor H.R. 2667, the emergency supplemental appropriations bill providing relief from the flooding in the Upper Mississippi River Basin.

This flooding is unprecedented. Record stages have occurred all along the Upper Mississippi River. Other Mississippi River Basin communities, like Des Moines, have suffered extensively. Thousands of people need help and they need help now.

The Committee on Appropriations has acted promptly in response to this situation. Last Tuesday the committee reported out the $2.98 billion emergency supplemental bill. This was after we received a request from the President the previous Wednesday, July 14.

That request was further updated late Monday night just before our markup Tuesday morning. The subcommittees had to quickly hold meetings with administration officials. Some modifications to the request were made, but the bill before the House is nearly the same as the President's request. Even though damage estimates are still being developed, we need to provide relief now as the President has requested. Existing funds are rapidly being exhausted.

Some major items in the bill are: $1.15 billion for Commodity Credit Corporation crop loss payments, $815 million for FEMA disaster relief, $300 million of Small Business Administration disaster loans, $150 million for repair to levees and structures by the Corps of Engineers, $100 million for highway repairs by the Federal Highway Administration, $100 million for HOME housing programs, $100 million for Economic Development Administration assistance, $54 million for public health facility repairs and disease control, and $43.5 million for displaced worker employment opportunities.

All funding in this bill is declared an emergency requirement and is exempt from the 1990 Budget Act allocation restrictions. Emergency requirement designations in cases like this have always been used. This procedure was developed for exactly the situation we are in. It responds to our people. We're doing it right, and we are doing it quickly.

Mr. Chairman, when the President made his request he asked we move this bill quickly. I strongly urge adoption of this bill today so that relief from the devastation from this flood will not be interrupted.

☐ 1520

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose this legislation, and that is not an easy thing to do. We all have sympathy with those who are suffering on the river banks in the Midwest. I know something about it. I have lived in the floodplain along the Wabash River for all of my life. Three weeks ago I lost my river bottom farm to the river. I have insurance because I know I have a high risk, and I realize that a lot of people do not have insurance, and I am not taking issue with that or criticizing them for not having it.

But if we are not going to start to offset spending and be concerned about how we are going to pay for these things, when do we start? It is always down the road sometime. So we may kid ourselves today and say oh, it does not cost us anything today because it is off budget, and it is not going to be counted. But it does add to the national debt. All of these things continue to add to the national debt, and in the future that deficit is going to deny us some very high-priority items where we might say there is a real emergency some time in the future, or something we would like to have.

The argument has been made on the rule today that we can justify this by the fact that it has never been done before. Well never before have we had the national debt that we have today, and there comes some time when we have to start responding.

I can recall not too many years ago New York City leaders said do not worry about the national debt, we just owe it to ourselves. But the creditors finally said enough, and we had to bail them out.

Who is going to bail out the taxpayers of this country if we continue to just push off the day of responsibility?

So I regret that I must oppose this bill. Last Thursday we tried to bring the bill back immediately with offsets. To those who said this is gridlock, this is delay, I say that is not true. We tried to bring that bill back last week with an offset, and yes, offsets hurt too. But we are hurting the American taxpayers every day if we continue this practice of ignoring the responsibility of who is going to pay for it.

I do not think there would be a vote against this bill if it was offset and if we take out the legislation in this bill.

Incidentally, I just checked the RECORD a while ago on some of the arguments we have had critical of appropriations bills because we legislated, we authorized programs that were not authorized by law. I looked at some of the names who have taken the well and argued against legislation on an appropriations bill, and you know every one of them voted for this one because it does contain legislation, something that has nothing to do with the floods. It authorizes programs. They say it is not really an authorization, it just kind of makes it clear what the intent of Congress was, but it is legislation if it is intent.

So what do we do as taxpayers, as homeowners, as family members responsible for our family or our business if we have an emergency in the family? Can we run down to the bank every day and borrow more and more money because we have an emergency? We have to make adjustments as a family or as a business. And Government has to recognize that we must do the same thing.

So, regretfully today I must say that I oppose this bill. I would like to vote for it. If we have the offset taken care of, and if we know how we are going to pay for it I will support this for the farmers who need it in the Midwest, and for the people who lost their homes, and the infrastructure that must be repaired. I would vote for it if we could take out the legislation providing for the Youth Fair Chance Program somewhere in the country. If we were to take those two items out I could support this. But I regret that the way it is presented today with those two items in it that I must oppose the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH], chairman of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Mr. Chairman, last Saturday and Sunday I was in the district in Iowa where the flooding was the worst at that particular time. It happened to be down around Hamburg, IA, and several other areas in southwest Iowa. They had been fighting flood waters for 10 or 12 days, day and night. In the daytime the weather would look good, the sun would come out, some of the moisture evaporates into the air. At night it cools off, and the same moisture comes back down, sometimes as a downpour. It has been doing that for days.

The head of NOAA was in my office just yesterday, and he told me that they do not know of another time when we have had quite this phenomena we have today. We are getting moisture in the upper Midwest from the gulf, but the usual source is from the Southwest. The high in the Southeast will not permit the moisture from the gulf to move east where it should go in the normal pattern. It is a very sad situation.

Volunteers are coming in. They are working night and day. Volunteers are coming from other States. Busloads of people from Minneapolis came to Iowa. Some boys from Colorado used their savings and bought gas and came to Des Moines, IA, to help some people. Volunteers are coming in from Tennessee, Florida, and from other States. It is a great exhibition of what the American people can and will do when they know that people need help. And instead of looting or trying to take advantage of the situation, they are coming in and helping. We are not witnessing looting out there or excuses for breaking the law.

It is disheartening to hear that Congress under those conditions has not moved a bill. It is disheartening, whether there is enough money in the pipeline for next week or not, it is disheartening to be cleaning up a basement, and then to hear on the radio that Congress is tied up in some kind of an argument they have never had before. That is disheartening, and it should not occur.

We heard it said, and I have heard it around here a number of times, "why don't those people move out of the floodplain?" That is the common thing we hear from people upstream who dump the water on the people in the floodplain. When most of those people built their houses it was not so subject to flooding, or at least they were very seldom flooded and subject to less damage. But when those upstream rush more water downstream and into the floodplain, the floods come up to higher levels than they ever came up to before. It is not unusual for the ones who do not want to build the levees for the towns to be the same ones upstream who are causing the trouble. And then they say "why don't those people move out of the floodplain."

It is not that simple. Those downstream need some help, and we need to do more to stop increasing the problem by the upstream people. And when this is over, we should have a good task force appointed to look at what people are doing upstream from those who are downstream. That is where a lot of this problem is coming from, and there are things that we can do.

We talk about building large dams upstream, which we have done, but some people then are opposed to that and it consumes so much time under current procedures. But we could use the watershed program under the Agriculture Department to construct smaller structures which would hold the water back when there is flooding downstream. Here is what happened in 1986, 1987, 1988, and 1989: the administration asked for no funds for the watershed program, zero funds in the watershed program for the smaller structures.

In 1986, the administration even wanted to rescind the amount in the fund after it had been appropriated. This is another one of those farm programs some people include in their farm bashing as if it were a subsidy for individuals when, in fact, it helps urban areas and is a way to partially offset the extra runoff caused by building parking lots, houses, and commercial buildings and running the water rapidly through a storm sewer to the river.

We appropriated from $176 million to $190 million but they wanted no funds. In every year for the last 10 years the administrations have asked for less funds than were needed and have been appropriated.

The same thing goes for the water retention programs that are on individual farms, including terraces and ponds. Too many who oppose large structures by saying we should stop the water in tributaries, they oppose the programs needed to construct the structures upstream.

In addition to that, when they build new housing developments, developers could either impound some water in a water basin on the development property or else be required to rent or buy a share in an upstream structure of some kind to hold back the amount of water they add to the fast runoff which will cause a problem downstream.

We help developers build storm sewers so that they can rush the water from the property into the river just as fast as it can go and get it there at the very time it should not be there. In so many cases, the upstream people are the ones pouring water on top of the people downstream. We ought to do something about that.

We had objections here that we do not have any offsets to pay for this disaster. Let me remind you that we just scrubbed all the accounts in the Government to finance a supplemental jobs and development bill about a month ago for a supplemental. We scrubbed the various accounts to get that money. That was the money that could have been used for partial offsets.

In addition to that, we had a fund of several billion dollars for disasters and it was eliminated a couple of years ago in the Credit Reform Act. It is distressing to me to see that the people—I did not vote for it—but some of the people who are so anxious now to say we need a fund voted to eliminate the fund when we had one.

We should decide: Does the Congress want a special fund or not? Some people seem to always want something different than what we have, whatever that is. That is what is going on here.

Some people apparently think inconsistency is a virtue around here, too.

A week ago Thursday when I was responsible for a bill on the floor there was an amendment in the motion to recommit to increase the FBI by $19 billion. It was defeated. Last Thursday, 1 week later, 106 Members who had voted for the increase of the $19 million that they did not secure, voted to cut the FBI by $115 million as an offset.

Now how inconsistent can one be? It is time, Mr. Chairman, to get down to business, to appropriate this money and quit playing games. The primary purpose of this Government ought to be to help people in a disaster and in emergencies whether the emergency comes from without or within. Let us pass this bill voted up and get it over to the Senate.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LIGHTFOOT].

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in very strong support of this legislation. At this very moment rain is still falling in Iowa, flood warnings are still in effect in many areas. This has really been the story since clear back in February when the ice started to break up on the Mississippi, and it continues to go on. Twenty percent or more of the crops never made it to the field, others have been lost. Thousands of families have been displaced from their homes and are without drinking water; businesses continue to be closed down and they are losing thousands of dollars each day. Public facilities are badly damaged and unusable. The water in some areas is not expected to recede until who knows when.

I want to express my deepest thanks to my colleagues and the staff on the Committee on Appropriations for reacting so quickly in drafting and moving this urgently needed legislation.

I have been gratified as well by the tremendous outpouring of cooperation and emergency assistance offered by individuals and organizations to assist the people of Iowa. I would like personally to thank them.

Just this weekend I had an opportunity to unload foodstuffs from the State of Vermont that were sent into Ames, IA. There are many more out there who are doing the same.

We spent a lot of hours out in this flood area. We live in it, my folks live in it, I live in it, and I guess the thing that was so difficult to do this past weekend in talking with people, many of whom have had less than 2 or 3 hours' sleep for the past few months, have been out fighting the levees and the sandbags, trying to move their families out, trying to save what little is left.

It was difficult to look those people in the eye and have to tell them that the reason that we were not able to vote on this package last week is because the Democratic leadership in this House decided to stick a provision back in which has been kicked out by the Senate once before and will be again, in order to make political hay. Because last week as the vote was taken the State Democratic Party had its press-release machine in action putting out press releases in our districts calling us by name saying that we had no feelings for the people in our districts.

Now how damned hypocritical can you get?

We had an agreement in the Appropriations Committee with Mr. NATCHER and we all honored it because we respect BILL NATCHER, that no amendments would be offered. I had some amendments that I wanted to offer to specify specific levees that needed to be repaired, to help us on specific issues in farm country not addressed in this bill.

In deference to and respect for Mr. NATCHER, all of us, Republicans and Democrats alike, refused to offer any amendments because we wanted a nice, clean bill to be passed in the House, that could be passed in the Senate and could put the money back in the pipeline.

When it got to the Committee on Rules, politics reared its ugly head and we stuck in—we did not, the leadership stuck in—this provision for Los Angeles which some of the most liberal Members of the Senate struck out of this package once before and will strike out once again. I cannot help but think it is nothing but cold, hard politics in order to try to defeat people in the upcoming election at the expense of people who are suffering from one of the biggest natural disasters in our Nation's history.

What is it going to cost? Nobody really knows. The $3 billion roughly that is in this package, we can easily consume that in the State of Iowa. There are additional millions of dollars that will not be paid for by insurance or by anyone else. My home is flooded in the basement and we are not covered by insurance because we live on a hill. My folks' farm is 90 percent under water as are most of my relatives and friends. Some of them have flood insurance, and some don't. But the whole problem that we have, I think, is keeping that basic infrastructure together which creates jobs and will get our country back on its feet because the effects of this flood will be felt from coast to coast for many months to come. It is time to quit playing politics and pass this emergency appropriation.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], the chairman of the Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development.

Mr. BEVILL. I thank the chairman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this emergency supplemental appropriations bill which will provide urgently needed assistance to our citizens who have been devastated by the flooding in the Midwest. Chapter III of the bill provides funding for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers which falls under the jurisdiction of my Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development.

The funds provided in the bill for the Corps of Engineers include a total of $120 million for the flood control and coastal emergencies account. Of the total, $100 million has been designated by the President as an emergency requirement pursuant to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 as amended. The remaining funds, $20 million, will be made available contingent upon submission by the President of a later budget request designated as an emergency requirement.

These funds represent the Corps of Engineers' estimate at this time of the funds that will be needed for the repair and restoration of levees, dikes, water-control structures, and similar facilities damaged by the sustained flooding on the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers and their tributaries. This work will be accomplished under the authority of Public Law 84-99, as amended.

The Corps of Engineers has advised our panel that over 700 levees have been breached or overtopped during this flood. If those flood-control facilities are not repaired, the citizens of the Midwest will continue to be exposed to the threat of flooding from events much smaller than the one we are addressing with this bill.

The bill also includes $30 million, which has been designated by the President as an emergency requirement, for the Corps of Engineers to make repairs to federally operated and maintained projects that have been damaged by the flooding in the Mississippi River basin. These funds will be used to restore locks and dams which have been flooded to operating condition; repair damages to flood control projects; and perform dredging of navigation channels. It is essential to the economy of the Nation that the locks and dams be restored to operating condition and the navigation channels be cleared as soon as possible.

Mr. Chairman, in spite of the terrible flooding that has occurred in the Midwest, the system of flood control projects that has been constructed by the Corps of Engineers in the upper Mississippi River basin has worked well. Of the 275 federally constructed levees in the flood area, only a few have been overtopped or breached. The levees that were overtopped simply were not designed for an event of this magnitude. The levees were also not designed to hold water for such an extended period of time. In contrast to that, over 700 non-Federal levees have been either breached or overtopped. In addition, Corps of Engineers reservoirs on tributary streams have stored runoff and reduced stages at a number of locations including Des Moines, IA, and St. Louis, MO.

Preliminary estimates are that Corps of Engineers flood control projects have prevented over $5 billion in damages during this flood event. The damages prevented by Corps of Engineers flood control projects in this single event exceed the total Federal investment in all flood control works, including construction and operation and maintenance, in the States of Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, and Missouri.

Mr. Chairman, the funds we have invested and continue to invest in flood control works is a sound investment for our Nation.

I want to pay tribute to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that has been helping our Nation for 200 years. They have never built a dam that has failed. Of course, a few levees have failed because nobody anticipated that the flooding would continue for such an extended period of time.

So Mr. Chairman, I urge the House to pass this legislation. Let us get these people some help. They are in trouble. They are suffering. We have helped foreign countries without any hesitation. Let us help our own people. Let us get this money on the way to them.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS].

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I commend the Appropriations Committee for their prompt action in regard to this supplemental. Despite all the feuding and fussing we have had in regard to how to pay for this, I urge my colleagues now to put aside our partisan bickering and get on with the business at hand. We have human tragedy unfolding in the heartland that deserves immediate attention.

This weekend Senator DOLE and I traveled the flood area in Kansas. The Midwest is experiencing the worst flooding on record. We have flood water in areas where we have never seen water. I have at least 30 to 40 counties in my district where the 1993 winter wheat crop stands ready to be harvested but farmers are unable to get into the fields because of rain, soggy soil, and now flooding.

While the attention of the national news media in recent days has been focused on the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, I call my colleagues' attention to the situation in Kansas, and the rivers and tributaries flowing into the mighty Mississippi. We are entering our fourth week of rain. The reservoirs built after the last great flood of 1951 are full and it continues to rain. We have whole communities isolated because roads are closed. We have water supply systems being shut down because of surface water flooding into the wells. We have communities where the sewer treatment systems are under water, adding further contamination. We have miles of agricultural levees that have been wiped out that will need to be rebuilt to protect cropland from future floods.

Given the magnitude of the human tragedy we are experiencing, I appreciate President Clinton's and Secretary Espy's swift action. But I do want to set the record straight on the level of assistance that is being offered here. Press accounts of the Secretary's and President's comments have alluded to the fact that farmers will receive 50 cents on the dollar. That is not accurate.

With the President's proration factor of 50.04 percent that the Appropriations Committee has included in this bill, the farmer will receive only 19 to 20 percent of his actual dollar loss. By recommending that the basic disaster payment formula be cut in half, the President's proposal, as far as I am concerned, is inadequate to meet the minimum needs of farmers hit by this disaster.

I would also like to warn my colleagues that the bill we have under consideration has an August 1 cutoff date for disaster assistance. It requires that before any assistance can be forthcoming after August 1, the President will have to declare a disaster for each specific area.

Now, it is inevitable that if this provision becomes final law, an individual farmer who suffered frost damage in Maine in March will be able to apply for disaster assistance, but another farmer in Texas who is hit by hail in September will have to hope that his individual loss will get a Presidential disaster designation before he can apply.

Hopefully, these two problems will be addressed before this legislation hits the President's desk for signature.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished chairman of the full committee for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2667, the emergency supplemental appropriations bill for relief from flooding in the Midwest. Chapter VI provides $970 million in emergency funds requested by the administration for HUD, FEMA, and the Commission on National and Community Service.

The $970 million consists of: $815 million for FEMA's disaster relief fund, $100 million for HUD's HOME investment partnerships program, $53 million for HUD's community development grants program, and $2 million for the Commission on National and Community Service.

On July 16, the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee held meetings with both the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Deputy Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. At these briefings, we discussed the disastrous floods in the Midwest and their consequences. It appears that the magnitude and severity of the damage caused by the flooding is increasing. The true extent of the damage will not be known until the waters recede. Additional funds may be required when the full extent of the damage is known.

To enable HUD, FEMA, and the Commission on National and Community Service to provide assistance at the earliest possible time, the bill includes the requested amounts for each of the three agencies under the jurisdiction of the VA-HUD Subcommittee. Also, as requested, the HUD and the Commission on National and Community Service funds are available only for use in areas affected by the flooding.

All of the funds are being provided as a direct appropriation. None of the funds are on a contingency basis. The administration indicates it has no objection to providing these funds by direct appropriation and declaring the entire amounts of each as emergency requirements.

There is one matter that I would like to bring to the Members' attention. A provision is included in the community development grants paragraph permitting the use of funds only to repair facilities damaged and to continue services interrupted by flooding that are essential to public health and safety. This provision should eliminate any concern regarding the uses of CDBG funding. The language will ensure that no funds are used for activities such as repairing swimming pools or golf courses.

Mr. Chairman, I urge Members to support H.R. 2667.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR], a member of the subcommittee.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman, I would like to engage the chairman of the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee in a colloquy on the issue of flood insurance.

Mr. STOKES. I would be happy to engage in a colloquy with the gentlewoman from Ohio.

Ms. KAPTUR. I first want to express my support for this supplemental appropriations bill that provides emergency funding for victims of the flooding in the Midwest. This is truly a devastating situation and one that demands compassion and good judgment to assist the residents in the affected States immediately, and even more importantly, to minimize risk to them and their properties in the years to come.

Several questions must be raised in order to minimize the harm to people and communities in the case of future disasters.

Too often development has continued and been allowed by States and localities and by financial institutions in areas that are susceptible to flooding. The way the current system works, local governments are expected to enforce flood plain management regulations, but often, despite current policies, local governments do not enforce the regulations.

Where is proper land use enforcement as we watch our fellow citizens suffer? How many times must our people suffer before something new is done?

In fact, the current system will allow for policyholders to rebuild in many of the same areas where the flooding has occurred. We must ask why. According to data provided by the Federal Insurance Administration, during the period from 1980 through the end of 1989, the National Flood Insurance Program paid about 75,000 losses involving more than 30,500 repetitive loss buildings, as the August 2, 1993, issue of Newsweek magazine advises us and advises those receiving disaster grants that in the future they should be required to buy policies. Banks could be penalized for not enforcing insurance requirements, and Washington also needs to establish more incentives for communities to raze flood-vulnerable buildings. Careful and forward-thinking land-use planning must be encouraged at the local level with proper land-use planning. There would be less likelihood that structures would be built on a flood plain. Our Federal dollars must be used to end the suffering that these people are having in the midwestern part of our country, and we ought to move to more responsible behavior in the years ahead.

Mr. STOKES. I agree with the gentlewoman from Ohio that we need to work to provide more accountability on the local level to enforce flood plain management regulations as well as encouraging better land use planning. I would urge the gentlewoman from Ohio to work with the authorizing committee on legislation to reform the flood insurance program.

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank the gentleman from Ohio for his comments. I do plan to work with the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs on this issue.

Mr. Chairman, I insert for the RECORD the Newsweek article entitled "On the Disaster Dole."

ON THE DISASTER DOLE

ENVIRONMENT: IS THE NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM THROWING MONEY DOWN THE DRAIN?

Oliver Ready of Grafton, IL, guided his flatboat down Water Street and paused at his two-story frame house, where the Mississippi River now inhabits the first floor. When it recedes, he'll be in good shape. Ready has purchased federal flood insurance since 1975, and it's been a sweet deal. He's paid about $6,000 in premiums and collected $24,000 in payouts after floods in 1979, 1982, 1986 and last April. He expects $32,000 more for this disaster. Ready is happy to take the money, but he wonders about a government program that rewards people for living in places that are frequently underwater. "You wouldn't run a business like this," says Ready, a 53-year-old fish-market owner. "If every three or four years you had to spend $10,000 to repair a business, you'd wise up and say, 'To hell with this location'."

Imagine a car-insurance policy that didn't raise your rates after an accident. Or a life-insurance policy that charged the same whether you were 25 years old or 70. That's the idea behind the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP), where property near rivers or in vulnerable coastal areas is restored by the government again and again. "Repetitive loss" cases like Ready's amount to only 3 percent of all claims. But they account for more than a third of total payouts. Since 1974 the NFIP has paid nearly $2 billion to 63,000 flood-damaged properties. "Taxpayers have bought some of these people refrigerators and chainsaws 10 times over," says Tom Szilasi, building commissioner in St. Charles County, MO., across the river from Grafton.

Although the NFIP has done well by many Midwesterners, most of the payouts actually go to the coasts, where beachfront homes are regularly inundated by storms. Federal flood insurance is effectively an entitlement for "some of the wealthiest homeowners in America," says Rep. Joe Kennedy, who is drafting legislation to tighten up the program. A 1991 measure passed the House but stalled in the Senate after banking, real-estate and home-building lobbies mobilized. Calamities this year might provide new impetus for reform. A punishing hurricane season this fall, combined with claims from the Mississippi flood (expected to reach about $50 million), could send the NFIP—already $18 million in the red—deeper into deficit.

Solid base: Federally subsidized flood insurance began in 1968 as a sound idea. It was a natural niche for government to fill. Private carriers won't offer it, they say, because the only buyers would be those at the worst risk. In exchange for low-cost policies, communities established rigorous building codes for new construction in flood-prone areas, limiting damage when the waters rise. That part of the program has worked. Federal officials say premiums from structures built in flood plains since 1974 have produced a net gain of $248 million for the NFIP. But Congress, reluctant to alienate property owners with older buildings in flood plains, "grandfathered" the structures. As long as flood damage is less than 50 percent of the property's market value, they are eligible for subsidized insurance. (Structures with more than 50 percent damage must be moved to higher ground, brought up to federal standards or razed.) With the average flood claim totaling $10,500, NFIP continually bails out the same older, poorly built properties.

That's certainly the case in tiny Grafton (population: 918), which hugs the bottom of a bluff just above the Mississippi's edge about 40 miles northwest of St. Louis. Kathy Rulo, 37, and her husband, Ron, are filing their fourth flood-insurance claim since buying their home in 1978. "I think the government has paid for our house about two times," she says. In St. Charles County north of St. Louis, one homeowner received 18 separate NFIP payments before this year's two floods. Insurance is remarkably easy to get. Flood-plain residents can rush to an agent at the last minute and buy a federally guaranteed policy. After that, the building need only remain dry for five days to qualify for reimbursement. Lowell Skeens, 77, a retired Grafton boatbuilder, says he bought insurance for his one-story house on July 2, when high crests were forecast. On July 11, floodwaters reached his door.

Compounding the problem are property owners who buy no flood insurance at all. Many simply choose to collect federal bailout grants of up to $11,900. Banks are also culprits. The NFIP requires mortgage lenders to insist that borrowers have flood insurance. But the provision is routinely ignored. Although most homeowners do purchase a policy, many later let premium payments lapse. When mortgages are sold to other lending institutions, there is no mechanism for tracking compliance. Lax enforcement allows 250,000 policyholders to drop out of the NFIP each year.

Critics say several changes would help. Those receiving disaster grants should be required to buy policies. Banks could be penalized for not enforcing insurance requirements. Washington also needs to establish more incentives for communities to raze flood-vulnerable buildings. It's not Oliver Ready's fault. But if Congress again ducks reform, he and thousands of other property owners will continue to benefit from a leaky federal program. "They set the rules," Ready says. "We didn't."

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON].

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the measure before the House. I do so with a variety of emotions.

First of all, Mr. Chairman, I am glad we are now where we are and that this bill is before the House. I regret the nongermane issues that have been an impediment to our consideration of this measure prior to this time, but that is in the past, and let us go forward.

We are going to be dealing with this natural disaster in the Midwest, I am afraid, for a long time to come. I do not believe that this is the single measure that will be necessary to meet the needs of the devastation that is occurring in the Midwest. I believe that the flood in the area in which it exists, that no one now alive has seen such devastation. There may have been greater floods on the North American continent at some point in our history, but I do not believe that anyone now alive has seen what is now occurring in the Mississippi and Missouri River basins.

Mr. Chairman, this measure deserves the strong support of the House. I speak as one who has voted for relief for the victims of Andrew and Hugo and the San Francisco disaster several years ago, and I want to point out to the House that the Midwest, Missouri, is a natural-disaster-prone region. We have a lot of floods. We have a lot of tornadoes. We have earthquakes. But this is worse than anything that I have seen.

Mr. Chairman, it is entirely appropriate that the House is considering this measure at this time, and I urge my colleagues to give it their strongest support. I wish I could tell my colleagues that I thought this one measure was going to be all we are going to have to be talking about in the course of this year as we come to grips with this problem, but I am afraid that it is not. But this bill is a good first start, and I say to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], I want to thank you and your committee for the outstanding job that you have done, as you in particular, Mr. NATCHER, always do. Thank you very much.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Missouri [Ms. DANNER].

Ms. DANNER. Mr. Chairman, by truck, by car, by boat, by fire truck—I have traveled extensively in my district—and I have the tetanus shot to prove it.

In addition, I have flown, both by plane and helicopter, over my district, the 6th District of Missouri, several times—and when I did, I looked down on what appeared to be an ocean with treetops protruding here and there.

St. Joseph, MO, has joined the company of Des Moines, IA, as the entire town faces the next 7 to 10 days without water and the threat of a massive power outage.

I saw thousands of acres of farmland covered by waters that have risen relentlessly—taking with them homes, property, and, unfortunately, lives. And the rains have not stopped. As a matter of fact, rains continue to fall today in the Midwest.

The situation is desperate, the call for assistance is urgent and our swift action on this flood disaster bill is imperative.

The flood assistance bill recognizes that, as bad as the situation is at present, the most difficult times are ahead of us. Only when the rains stop and the water begins to recede will the true extent of the damage be known.

The problems of long-term recovery will confront the entire Midwest, not just those in flood plains.

Mr. Chairman, the help we request is for the people of the 6th district, as well as those throughout the entire Midwest who have thought of their communities first and themselves second. And I would be remiss if I did not mention the good samaritans throughout our country who have contributed their time, their money, and their prayers to help us.

I urge swift consideration and passage of H.R. 2667.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] for yielding this time to me.

In 1972, Mr. Chairman, the people of central Pennsylvania suffered tremendous flood damage as a result of the then notorious storm Agnes, and 3 years later almost a duplicate of that event occurred also devastating the area influenced by the Susquehanna River in Pennsylvania, and, looking back on those disasters, I have a measure, of course, of empathy and sympathy for the people in the Mississippi and Missouri areas, and I know that in looking back to 1972 and 1975 that the Members of Congress up and down the Mississippi and Missouri did rally to the help of the Susquehanna Valley people in the votes that were subsequently taken on the floor of the House. For those reasons alone, Mr. Chairman, I want to and intend to support this piece of legislation. We are all one country, and each one of us is susceptible at some point or another to having to take back to our people a measure of relief that comes as a benefit from the remainder of Congress.

My trouble, my problem, comes from that extraneous material that I wish had not been entered into this debate. It really is worrisome. I wish we could have voted up or down on this aid for flood victims.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, of the $2.9 billion included in this bill, approximately $1.2 billion is allocated from the Agriculture Department. Many people have seen the inundation of farms across the Midwest. I think there is a general misunderstanding as to what responsibility the Federal Government will shoulder in this disaster, and it has a lot to do with the fact there were very complicated formulas by which farmers are compensated when they face such a disaster.

One of the threshold questions that people might ask is why is the Federal Government paying any farmer anything? Well, first, from the viewpoint of our overall economy, many Americans are unaware of the fact that 17 percent of our gross national product in America, 17 percent of the value of all the goods and services in America, emerge from the agricultural sector.

As my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] has said, many people overlook the critical economic importance of agriculture to the economy of this great Nation that we live in. We are blessed with great soil and great resources, and only on rare occasions do we see any disasters of this magnitude.

But our Federal Government, speaking for the entire Nation, steps up to help those agricultural producers who, because of the vagaries of weather, may find themselves totally decimated in any given crop year.

I would like to explain ever so briefly the approaches that are being used to help farmers in order to clear up any misunderstanding people might have as to what is available to a farmer who has suffered losses because of the flooding disaster or the drought disaster in the East or the wind disasters in Kansas and Nebraska.

In the first instance, for any farmer to qualify for any type of Federal disaster he must have lost between 35 and 40 percent of the value of his crop. So we are not talking about farmers who are just touched by this calamity, but in fact those who have seen real devastation and real losses.

Now, once that threshold requirement is reached, the amount that the farmer receives from the Federal Government depends entirely on his status. If a farmer is out farming somewhere in America, in the Mississippi Valley, for example, and said at the outset, "I am a rugged individualist. I do not need the Federal Government. Just give me my tractor and land and leave me alone," that farmer is going to have a pretty tough time of it, if in fact this disaster has touched his farm. As a matter of fact, it would be very difficult for that farmer to receive from our Government more than 15 percent of the value of his crop from disaster payments. That farmer is going to have a tough time even surviving under these circumstances.

Take the second farmer who said, "I am going to sign up for the Federal Government program. I will set aside certain acreage, I will comply with the requirements of the Federal law, and I want to, in this disaster, turn to the Federal Government and ask for a helping hand."

If that farmer has faced that kind of a circumstance, he is likely to recover about 22 percent of the value of his crop. Again, not a large sum in comparison to what the loss happens to be.

But now let us move to the next and final category. Assume we have a farmer who has signed up for the Government program and also bought crop insurance. This farmer looked ahead and said, "I don't know what is over the horizon, but I am going to prepare myself for this loss. I will be in the Government program. I will buy insurance."

Now, for that farmer the circumstance is much different. That farmer, because he has paid into the crop insurance program and because he signed up with the Federal Government, can see up to 85 percent of the value of his crop coming back.

In other words, we are rewarding and encouraging farmers to do the right thing, to sign up for our programs and also for crop insurance.

The crop insurance program itself is going to be very helpful to many farmers in that respect. But no farmer is going to get back everything he has lost, not should he. The President made clear from the outset that the Federal Government could not pay for all the losses that will be incurred in this disaster. But we are going to give a helping hand to producers who really have seen devastation in their areas.

Let me say at this point I want to salute the administration. President Clinton, Vice President GORE, Secretary Espy, Secretary Pena, and so many others have been visible in Illinois, my home State, and the surrounding flooded area. I cannot tell you how much it means to these people who have seen this kind of calamity occur to their business, their home, and their farm, to see the highest elected officials in the land not only visit, take a look from a helicopter, but to come time and again and ask how they can help. That kind of moral encouragement is needed. I want to salute the administration, and I say I am glad today we finally have come to the point where we are considering this bill to move forward with disaster aid.

Finally, if you will allow me a moment here to share with you a few personal experiences in my own district. This last Sunday we lost the second largest levee in the United States of America, the Sny Island levee, which is south of Quincy, IL. Because of the flooding, because of the pressure on the levees, the Sny has given way, and on Sunday, 40,000 agricultural acres were inundated and three small towns were literally wiped off the map.

Mr. Chairman, I worked on the sandbag lines this past Saturday. I worked between two retired farmers who had driven 100 miles to fill sandbags. One was 81 years old and one was 70 years old. They were out helping, sitting next to an unemployed young man, sleeping in his car overnight, and spending his days filling sandbags. Children, church groups, the National Guard. People visiting the city of St. Louis conventions are coming out to the sandbag lines. It really is a wonderful feeling of community in the Midwest as we rally to try to help one another.

What we are doing today with this disaster assistance is the definition of what Government is all about. When we cannot handle it as individuals, families, and communities, we come together in a larger group as a Nation, as a Government, to provide a helping hand.

Mr. Chairman, I encourage all my colleagues to vote in support of this disaster supplemental.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER].

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, this Member rises in support of this supplemental appropriation; I wish I could do so without reservation. Unfortunately I cannot. We find ourselves today once again having to appropriate additional funds to come to the assistance of the victims of nature's harsh treatment. While this Member certainly supports cutting existing expenditures wherever possible to aid in funding this measure, we must treat victims of the flooding and storms in the Midwest in the same generous fashion that we treated the victims of Hurricane Hugo in South Carolina, Hurricane Andrew in Florida, the San Francisco Bay area earthquake, and Typhoon Iniki in Hawaii, even if offsets are not available. Certainly we must provide the same level of compassion, the same funding formulas and the same availability of assistance to victims of this crisis as we have to victims of Hurricanes Andrew and Hugo, the San Francisco Bay area earthquake, Typhoon Iniki in Hawaii, and other recent natural disasters.

Mr. Chairman, this Member has toured the areas of his State affected by flooding and wind damage. The damage this Member witnessed confirmed his impression that this is the broadest violent storm-related damage that has struck eastern Nebraska in his lifetime.

Damage to crops, infrastructure, and personal property is the most severe and wide-ranging anyone in the State anyone alive can remember.

In Nebraska, 35 counties have been affected, and it is expected that at least 18 of the 25 counties in this Member's district will be designated Federal disaster areas. Infrastructure damage includes an incredible number of bridges and roads washed away and extremely costly damage to power lines throughout the area. Much property damage cannot even be assessed until flood waters recede and total crop losses won't be known until after the fall harvest.

As severe and damaging as the devastating flooding has been throughout the Midwest, the wind damage experienced in Nebraska has been equally devastating. This Member witnessed damage from windstorms that can only be compared to that inflicted by a hurricane. It would be important and appropriate that this measure includes assistance for wind damaged areas. In some areas of the legislation, like the funds for housing and the CBDG funds, it does not—aid is restricted to flood damage. The wind damage related to these torrential rains are excluded.

Mr. Chairman, I am sure that President Clinton intended that constituents of mine and people living in Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska, affected by these winds would be treated fairly, the same way as they are treated in areas damaged by hurricanes and typhoons in Florida, South Carolina, and Hawaii. But they are not treated equitably the way this legislation is drafted.

I would say to Secretary Cisneros, one of your people has committed a blunder when they eliminated the contingency request they excluded the possibility of helping people with wind-related problems, regarding the HUD program portion of this bill. They have sent up inadequate legislation. They have made an error. It is understandable that they may also have failed to include coverage for wind damage, but then at least they have the duty to admit the seemed error or oversight and help a Member of Congress in his attempt to assure equitable treatment for people of three States. Now someone in HUD is too blockheaded to admit they made an error, and the result is that people in my district and in those three States will not be treated equitably, as they are in other areas.

I tried to make a corrective amendment made in order through the Committee on Rules, but, of course, the Committee on Rules brought us a rule just exactly like the one we the House rejected last week. They expressed sympathy—indeed on both sides of the aisle, but sympathy is not enough to help a Member correct an important error or oversight in the bill drafted in the administrative.

In reality, a mistake was made, and no one at this stage is giving this Member any opportunity to correct it. The HUD people had better take a look at the basic errors in the legislation that caused this in the first place. Secondly, they ought to realize that people are just as damaged by 125-mile-per-hour winds as they are by flooding. The damage to an individual's farm, to his home, to school buildings, to the community's assets, is just as devastating.

Mr. Chairman, I would hope that since we cannot get justice for my constituents in this House, we will at least have it in the other body.

Mr. Chairman, it is vital that adequate funding be made available to assist Midwesterners in recovering from these devastating storms. Crises like these bring out the best in Midwesterners. The pioneer spirit of neighbor helping neighbor is still very much alive in this part of the country. Everyone has come together to work through this emergency, just as they have provided assistance to victims of other disasters in other parts of the country in the past. Mr. Chairman, just as the Federal Government has provided aid to victims of those other disasters, we must do so now for these citizens. This Member urges passage of this measure but regrets deeply that he was blocked from providing fully equitable treatment for Nebraskans who suffered severe damage as a result of the same storm system that brought the early big flooding in Nebraska.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would advise Members that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] has 16 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] has 27 minutes remaining.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished Chairman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, first let me commend and congratulate the Members of the appropriations subcommittee and the Committee on Appropriations as they help farmers. They have also addressed the issue of farm workers and seasonal workers who, when the farmers suffer, the farm worker also suffers. I appreciate their sensitivity and interest in this endeavor.

Second, Mr. Chairman, as I said on the debate on the rule, I am perplexed and frustrated. This debate should not be occurring. When anyone would ask where is the money coming from, I have stated that we on the Committee on Agriculture have cut expenses by $52 billion in the past 12 years.

But I think it would be insulting to ask who will pay for this. The only people who pay in our Government are the taxpayers. And the taxpayers of Iowa, the taxpayers of Missouri, the taxpayers of Kansas, the taxpayers of Illinois, they have already paid.

This next quarter there will be enough money to cover this bill from income tax advances from the people of Iowa. I think it is an insult for anyone to stand here and say, but who will pay for it. The people who always pay, the taxpayers who pay in every quarter, who pay every April.

Let me say that I think it is doubly insulting, if we take a person who is drowning and someone asks, throw the rope to him, throw the rope to him, and we ask, but who is going to pay for the rope, when someone is drowning.

Mr. Chairman, it is an insult to the taxpayers of this area who now ask for our assistance.

Finally, let me say, Mr. Chairman, I had in my area a very minuscule but nonetheless 750 houses under water. I saw the victims talking to the Red Cross, eyes down, face down, almost ashamed to be there, as if they had been the ones guilty of this God-given catastrophe, God-sent catastrophe.

We cannot let that happen. They are looking to us for assistance.

I keep repeating, I am perplexed. I am frustrated, and I think it is insulting to ask who is going to pay for it to the taxpayers who now are asking for a little relief of the money they have paid through the years.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I guess I come at it from a different perspective than my distinguished chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. Every American family, in an ideal situation, would reallocate resources in their family budget at a time of emergency. Frankly, I think the Government ought to do the same thing. But like every American family, if they do not have those resources on hand, they use the credit card. And so we will use the credit card today. I guess that is better than doing nothing at all.

I come from Wisconsin, one of those two States that was at the forefront of the disaster we have experienced in the Midwest over the past few weeks. It was on Father's Day, when I called home to my father to wish him a happy Father's Day, that he said, "I think you have got some problems in your district you need to be made aware of and you need to call the county emergency government people and begin offering your assistance."

That was the beginning of this experience. Before I go further, let me say thank you to the distinguished chairman of the committee and to all of our colleagues on the Committee on Appropriations for working in a timely and constructive fashion to bring this forward.

We in Wisconsin have, to date, calculated over $920 million in Federal disaster that ought to be eligible for assistance as a result of the flood and the rains. I give Members that number, because I think it is important to understand that we are passing a $3 billion bill, so if we attempted to make Wisconsin whole, then we were certainly blessed compared to some of our colleagues downstream. We would use up one-third of the funds.

That ought to make it clear to everyone, no one here will be made whole. The tragedy is, and I think it is important today, that we send a signal, unfortunately, that nobody in this country is going to be made whole as a result of this.

As the chairman of the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and related agencies of the Committee on Appropriations said, most farmers are going to get only 20 cents on the dollar, roughly. We, in Wisconsin, where we use our crops for our own feed, we have roughly a 4-to-5 percent sign up for flood insurance. So flood insurance is not even a viable program in Wisconsin and not an option here.

Mr. Chairman, I do rise in support of this legislation. I encourage its passage, and I forewarn my colleagues in the future, there are a lot of problems yet to be resolved on this flood that we will have to come back and address.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOUGHTON].

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Chairman, very briefly, I am for this legislation. I do not think this is any secret. Most of us are for it.

I happen to believe that we should not try to pay for it. We do not ask people to pay for an emergency in a family, if they have a fire, have a flood. I tell Members why. I was in the terrible flood in 1972, the whole community around. This was from Hurricane Agnes. We suffered greatly, and one of the things that pulled us up was the willingness of the Government to throw all caution to the winds and come in with all their ability to help finance and help support all of us who were in desperate need.

I am in support of this. I think we are doing exactly the right thing.

I urge my fellow Congressmen and Congresswomen to support 2667.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT].

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this necessary legislation for flood disaster relief. In particular, I want to state my support for the appropriation of $21 million in contingency funding to help repair and return to service vital local and regional rail lines that have been damaged in the Midwest flooding.

The Transportation and Hazardous Materials Subcommittee has received extensive information from the Interstate Commerce Commission and from the carrier associations themselves as to the severity of the problem and the urgent need for financial assistance. The local and regional railroads in the flooded areas are major transportation arteries for the region, and these funds will be particularly important in the effort to clean up and rebuild the region when the floods recede.

These funds will be administered by the Department of Transportation through the Federal Railroad Administration. The measure also directs the Secretary to take into consideration as funds are made available to the railroads, the extent to which the individual States may have available unexpended local rail freight assistance funds or available repaid loan funds.

I commend the Appropriations Committee for bringing this matter to the floor. I support it; I support the funds that are to be allocated to help rebuild the regional rail infrastructure, which will be so important to the restoration of the Midwest economy. I urge my colleagues to support this emergency appropriation.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I will not take up as much as 4 minutes, I hope. I did have a 10-minute speech here, praising the committee, the House, and my colleagues for their effort on behalf of the people who have gone through this horrible circumstance in middle America.

But instead of giving that speech, I frankly want to use a piece of my time in a colloquy with my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Could we spend just a moment or two here together? My chairman, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES], and I spent a good deal of time working on our piece of this that has to do with the HOME and CDBG side. We made every effort to get the money out there to people as quickly as possible.

I could not help but be struck by the remarks of my colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], as he expressed concern about people who were harmed severely by this same storm. I share his feeling that perhaps our language was of a form that people who were damaged by wind, would be excluded.

That clearly was not my intention, and I do not believe it was the intention of my chairman.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, first let me say, the gentleman is absolutely correct. The gentleman has been extremely cooperative in terms of giving leadership on our subcommittee in terms of trying to meet the problems related to this disaster.

I appreciate very much the type of cooperation we have had from the gentleman.

I did listen intently to the comments of our colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], on the floor. The type of problem that he has brought to the attention of our colleagues today is something both the gentleman and I have discussed in the same sense that our intention is to try to get relief for the people who have been affected by the flood and not limit it by virtue of restrictive language as such.

There is a problem in terms of the current language, but I would certainly be willing to work with the gentleman to see in what manner, when we go to conference, we can try and alleviate the problem brought to our attention.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate your response.

I would suggest that as we go to conference with Senator MIKULSKI and her committee and working with Senator KERREY, that we ought to be able to find a way to make certain that the people who receive direct damage as a result of this storm system, it is our intent to help those people where we can. It seems to me we can solve any technical problem that might have taken place as a result of language that did not reflect the agreement that the gentleman and I have shared.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the flood disaster supplemental.

This supplemental exemplifies the very best about the appropriations process. I want to thank Chairman STOKES for his efforts in putting together the FEMA and HUD portions of the bill. I am deeply impressed by the amount of effort that the Appropriations Committee devoted to making Government and our process truly responsive to those in need.

Those of us from California have seen this type of emergency response before when the committee and this House reached out to help us deal with the aftermath of the Loma Prieta earthquake. It would be a blessing indeed, if the dollars that we are providing today work as effectively and as quickly as in the Loma Prieta example.

I suspect that this is only the downpayment on responding to flood emergencies. While I am pleased with the initial response of both Congress and frontline agencies such as FEMA, I will be watching carefully to see that these monies are not only timely, but truly effective in meeting the urgent needs in the Midwest.

Nature's latest handiwork and the daily film from our news media have clearly illustrated the devastating effects that these floods have had on the people and land of the Midwest. But the cameras and videotape have also captured that uniquely American trait of pulling through and working together when times are at their toughest. The American people need a Federal response that is as effective, direct and compassionate as that which they have seen from the thousands of volunteers who have set everything else in their lives aside to address the Mississippi's latest and mightiest challenge.

The flood waters of the Mississippi and its many tributaries cover eight different States. Many of the hardest hit cities and towns are still under water and rain continues in many areas. The lives of millions of Americans have been affected by this flooding.

I want to compliment the many Federal agencies and especially the Red Cross for their work and rapid response to the disaster. FEMA has been leading the Federal flood response effort and should be recognized for quickly accommodating unforeseen circumstances, and avoiding delays with disaster assistance. In past disasters, FEMA has been criticized for its lack of preparedness, however with this disaster they have done a thorough job initially.

This $2.9 billion supplemental will bring much needed support to the impacted areas. Eight hundred fifteen million dollars will be distributed through FEMA's disaster relief fund. This FEMA money will provide individual assistance to disaster victims which will cover the costs for temporary housing assistance for up to 18 months, including rental assistance, mortgage payments, and manufactured housing. Direct family assistance grants will be distributed to meet urgent needs for up to a maximum of $11,900 per family plus additional home repair grants. There will also be public assistance programs for 75 percent Federal and 25 percent State/local share contribution, to cover costs of debris removal, and repair and renovation of any public owned building or facility.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, now is the time to move this package to the President's desk. Let's show the American people and particularly those in the Midwest that the Federal Government can address a major challenge and be a valued neighbor.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I read this language very carefully, and I find no language in there that makes anyone ineligible, that made anyone ineligible before the bill was written, so it perplexes me a little bit. It seems to me what the gentleman did was restore the money for anybody and everybody that is eligible under the disaster assistance laws in existence at the time this bill was written.

I would ask the gentleman, is that not correct?

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman, I think what the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] is referencing is in terms of the speech made on the floor by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], in that the language used in the bill with reference to flood damage——

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Floods and other disasters.

Mr. STOKES. If the gentleman will yield further, that is precisely what the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS] and I think we were talking about, and other disasters. However, the language in the bill does make reference just to flood damage. It does not make reference to wind damage, while we realize that is a part of the whole flood problem.

Mr. LEWIS of California. If I may respond to my colleague, the gentleman from Iowa, it is our intention to make certain that technically the language does not exclude specific people with windstorm damage related to the flood disaster. Indeed, there is great concern that we may have done that in a technical way. We want to overcome it if we can.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEWIS of California. I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], so he may enter into this dialog.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I want to sincerely thank both the chairman and ranking member for their comments and the concern and sentiments they have just expressed. I want to say to my colleague from Iowa, who is my neighbor, we have adjacent districts—if I could have the attention of my colleague from Iowa [Mr. SMITH], to say that the first provisions of the bill that are FEMA-related and are agriculture-related specify coverage of damage by flood, hail, and other natural disasters. No problem there.

However, the latter sections of the bill restrict it strictly to flood damage. At least two of those programs, housing and CDBG, are very relevant to the disaster needs of parts of my district and other parts of the three States affected by this uniquely strong and damaging wave.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, we are committed to try to overcome those difficulties in conference.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Chairman, I first want to thank the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN] and all ranking members for bringing this legislation to the floor in such a timely fashion. Even though we may have disagreed on how and when it should be paid for, we certainly do not disagree on the question of its need.

Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased to rise in support of this legislation, and I want to make one point clear. I think this has been lost in a lot of the rhetoric on the floor, and also with the network coverage and the newspaper coverage of this legislation.

The fact is that if we enact this legislation and put it on the President's desk by the time we adjourn on August 6, my constituents in Kansas, the farmers, the business people, the homeowners that are suffering as a result of this flood, will not have lost $1 in aid and we would not have been delayed in the delivery of that aid one minute if we pass this legislation by August 6.

It is very important for us to communicate to the public that we are acting in a timely fashion, decisively, and there is not going to be a delay in the delivery of emergency assistance in this country. I appreciate the opportunity to make that point.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, flood assistance, or any disaster assistance, should be more readily available in our own country than similar money that we have provided through foreign aid.

However, natural disaster assistance programs, like any other assistance programs paid for with taxpayers' dollars, must be given out, not only equitably but in a way that encourages self-reliance and individual effort. Too often we hear of the unfairness of government programs that reward those individuals who have acted less responsibly. Congress needs to carefully review the eligibility requirements. We need to review the FEMA standards, some of which are 25 years old. In the agricultural area, aid programs too often are lacking in coordination, and overall, we certainly need to review the efficiency of administration of these disaster assistance programs and establish standards.

Because of the crisis of the growing Federal debt, even disaster assistance programs ought to be funded responsibly. The hurricane season is upon us. If we have another incident similar to Andrew of last year, it can significantly jeopardize the Federal debt of this country that is already projected to reach $6.2 billion by 1998.

A family that has an emergency compensates by reducing expenditures in other areas. It is reasonable, for the Federal Government to react likewise and offset some or all of the Federal disaster assistance with spending cuts, or at the very least using uncommitted funds that have been identified and are available.

Even with expenditures of this serious nature, we cannot continue to operate with this credit card mentality that requires future generations to pay today's bills.

The Midwest flood and this country's mounting debt, are both disasters.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the Committee on Appropriations, as well as President Clinton, for their expeditious consideration of this flood disaster legislation on the same terms as our Nation responded to disasters in Florida, Hawaii, and other places around our country in recent years.

As I have had the opportunity in recent weeks to travel around South Dakota's flooded counties, the devastation is literally unprecedented. The Federal Reserve of Minneapolis has already indicated that the impact on the State of South Dakota is probably greater than other States, simply because of the heavy reliance in our State on the agricultural economy. We have homes that are damaged, we have crops that are flooded, we have still more crops that are unplanted because of the floods. We have businesses that are ruined, bridges down, we have dams that are burst, and we have roads that are damaged.

We know that no Federal program is going to make people whole, that only the hard work and the spirit of the people of South Dakota are going to do that. However, we have a bill before us that will go a long way towards providing at least that minimal help to help people help themselves to get back on their feet and get our economy going again.

I think we ought to look at this in the proper context in terms of the fiscal situation, that the agriculture budget has taken a $3 billion reduction in this year's budget bill on the heels of a $13 billion reduction in the 1990 farm program.

We have a $37 billion reduction in the deficit over what was projected earlier in the year. So while we need the task force that the Speaker, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] is talking about to find offsetting revenues, the fact is that we need to act now. The need is urgent.

I want to urge support for this badly needed legislation.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE], a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, last winter my State experienced some severe flooding. Watching what has happened on television, I would have to say it is not of the extent that we have seen in the Midwest, but I do know something about flooding. No one can disagree with the intent of this bill. We need assistance. We needed assistance then. We need assistance still today for some of the disaster victims of that flooding.

This assistance today or the assistance then ought not ever to be held hostage to big city political pork barrel politics, politics that distort the will of Congress from offering amendments that have been suggested before to pay for disastrous spending, and that is exactly what the bill we have does.

It also, of course, includes a provision that we have had some argument about already, the Youth Fair Chance Program, that expands the definition of youth to include people up to the age of 30.

The truth is this is a program that is little more than a big city political payoff, keep the handouts coming, keep the patronage coming, keep the incumbent political machine going.

This is the kind of provision that has no place in this bill, and I think causes the rancor that exists in this House, and unfortunately, the distaste that so many Americans have for what we do around this body.

The trick to the deception is one that we have seen before. It is not very complicated. Bring a bill that no one can be opposed to the floor, then put something in it that is not acceptable to almost anyone, but is included in the legislation, and then it can be protected by the bulk of the legislation.

Besides that particular pork barrel spending game, the bill comes to the floor with a rule, as we know, that has prevented us from considering whether there should be offsets to this spending. I think even the people in the Midwest have spoken on this subject. They believe while we have disasters, we ought to be paying for them.

There are, it seems to me, some unfortunate parallels between the floods and this Congress. Like the floods, Congress is inundating people in a flood of red ink; like the heroic efforts of flood victims building and reinforcing levees, people have tried to stop the congressional flood damage by electing new Members, passing term limits, and demanding reform; but like the rains, the Congress just keeps coming down on the American people. Perhaps the time has come to put a stop to this flood and dam up the Congress.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAZIO].

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I would like to enter into a colloquy with the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS], the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development in the Appropriations Committee.

As the gentleman knows, I had hoped to offer an amendment today to seek additional appropriations in the amount of $14 million for the Army Corps of Engineers construction general account, as authorized by the River and Harbor Act of 1960, to address flooding problems in my own district. While the Rules Committee declined to accept that amendment for consideration under this bill, I would like an opportunity to discuss the severity of the situation faced by my constituents.

I in no way want to diminish the tragedy faced in the Midwest by the severe flooding along the Mississippi, but I want to make clear the tremendous peril we face in my congressional district. Fire Island—part of New York's barrier island system—is the only thing protecting the south shore of Long Island from the pounding waves of the Atlantic. Two fierce storms of last winter caused tremendous damage to the barrier beaches of Fire Island, leading New York Governor Cuomo and former President Bush to declare the area a disaster, although these designations were not for the purposes of a BEA.

These storms not only resulted in the loss of some 90 homes, they left many areas on the island vulnerable to breaching during the next round of storms. If breaches occur in the barrier island, the Federal Government will undoubtedly be called in—just as they are now for the Midwest—to provide financial assistance. My message today is that an ounce of prevention now could protect us from literally billions of dollars in Federal outlays in the not-too-distant future.

Can I have the gentleman's assurance that you will work with this member to shore up Fire Island to protect both it and the south shore of Long Island from further damage?

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAZIO. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I gave the gentleman some bad advice. I told him that we were going to keep this bill clean, that we were not going to add anything other than for the Midwest floods, and now we find out that the Rules Committee has added legislation for another program, so I did not give the gentleman very good advice.

Yes, Members of the committee are aware of the gentleman's situation, and most Members have visited the area, though not since the most recent incident. Under next year's regular bill we will take a look at this Fire Island problem. We are very much aware of it, and the gentleman has spoken to us about it.

Mr. LAZIO. I want to make the gentleman aware of the imminent danger that Fire Island faces if there is a need for emergency measures to shore that up.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Some Members of the committee will take a look at it as soon as we get out of here.

Mr. LAZIO. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to take this time to thank the committee chairman for bringing this bill to the floor as rapidly as he has. I also want to thank the President for the high degree of attention he has given to this problem.

I happen to represent one of those districts where this flood started, as does the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON], and I very much appreciate the fact that we are finally, after about 4 or 5 days of posturing, finally getting this bill on the road. I think it ought to be understood that this is simply the first installment on what is going to have to be a much larger final payment when we assess all of the damage which has occurred in the Midwest because of the flood, and I simply want to say that I for one do not agree with the mindset of those who seem to suggest that if we are providing emergency assistance to the Kurdish emergency, or to the Somali emergency, that it is fine to make an exception if it is coming out of the defense budget, and it is fine to make an exception to our general budget rules. But, if it is for domestic needs, then we should not be making these exceptions. I do not happen to agree with that kind of thinking.

It simply seems to me that floods are an act of God, and if we can make exceptions to our congressional budget rules because of the actions of foreign dictators, or because of the actions of Presidents, justified actions, then it seems to me that we also can make exceptions for acts of God. Not to do so I think would be the height of human arrogance, and I appreciate the fact that the committee does not fall into that trap. And I intend to fully support the legislation before us today.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Given the partisan nature of some of the discussions earlier today, I think it particularly important as an Iowan whose district has been ravaged by this flood to express appreciation to the committee of jurisdiction, particularly Chairman NATCHER and Chairman SMITH, as well as our ranking members, JOHN MYERS and JOE MCDADE for the timely and compassionate nature of this legislative response, although I agree with the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] that it may entail more consideration later.

Also, as a Republican who opposes much of the macroeconomics of this administration, I would like to assert as strongly as I can that it is important to express appreciation to Presidents when they are right, or do well, and in this context I think President Clinton has to date responded very impressively to the flood crisis. Secretary Espy and James Lee Witt, the FEMA Director, have on a timely basis put in place a very extensive operation in the Midwest, and we on our side should give them their due and their credit.

To say that this aid is badly needed is to indulge in something that seldom happens around here, and that is understatement.

It is also not an understatement to suggest that people in the Midwest have responded impressively. And as we think about it, the way rich people, poor people, highland people, lowland people, Democrats and Republicans have worked together in responding to the flood stands as a pretty good model by which this Congress ought to proceed in the future on this kind of issue. I see no reason whatsoever why we should not take inspiration from those directly affected and address emergency issues of this nature in a spirit of greater comity and integrity.

This observation aside, I want to say particularly to the majority that is responsible for running this body, our procedural spat aside, you have done a very fine job in bringing a very compassionate approach in a very timely way, and we in the minority, and we in the Midwest are particularly grateful.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. POMEROY].

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding the time.

Last night volunteers worked throughout the night laying sandbags in my hometown of Valley City, ND. The actions of these concerned citizens reflect, as has happened so often throughout the Midwest, the very best in our national character, people coming together to help one another when they need it.

It is now time for us to come together and pass out today this desperately needed disaster relief. I know personally what it is like to get flooded. If you need to spend money to protect your property, or temporarily relocate your family you spend it. As the water recedes and the crisis ebbs, you rework your family budget to cover these unavoidable but unanticipated costs. This is precisely the action the House must take today, pass relief to those who so desperately need to know that help is on the way even while the rain keeps falling and the water keeps rising.

I implore Members to pass this measure this afternoon. The people of Valley City and millions of others throughout the water-ravaged Midwest on water-sloughed and water-logged farms are counting on you.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE].

Mr. NUSSLE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding the time. I just want to start off the way I started off a few days ago when we were talking about this issue during the rules debate, and that is by thanking Chairman NATCHER for his excellent presentation, for drafting this bill and making sure that the people in the Midwest receive the help that they deserve, and also thank the other chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee, the gentleman from my State, Iowa, Mr. SMITH, for his leadership and timeliness in bringing this matter to this floor.

The fact that we paused for a moment to discuss how to pay for it, the fact that we paused for a moment to discuss some pork-barrel politics is not to diminish the need, is not to diminish our support, is not to suggest that we are callous or not compassionate to the people that we represent, but it is to suggest that if we had the time—and we do have the time, given the statements of the President and the director of FEMA—if we have the time to discuss how to pay for it, that that is a responsible thing to do.

I thank the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH], we have talked many times about this issue. I think both of us are frustrated that, while we may disagree with this particular issue and how it was handled, that we do have to redouble our efforts together and with the rest of the Members of Congress to find a way to solve the disastrous way that the Federal Government sometimes deals with disasters, whether it be by establishing the fund, whether it is setting aside money from time to time, whether it is a way to pay for it in future disasters.

While we may not have been able to discuss it this time, we do need to discuss it before the next time, the next time it happens for Iowa or the next time it happens for any State.

I believe this bill needs to pass today, although we hear that the other body may not take up this matter until as late as next week. Maybe that is a concern to us, another delay; we need to get this off dead center and on to the Senate as quickly as possible.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CRANE].

Mr. CRANE. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 2667.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose H.R. 2667, the Flood Disaster Supplemental Appropriations bill, which provides Federal assistance for those areas devastated by the recent flooding. This is not an easy vote for me or any of those Members who will oppose this bill. Indeed, part of my district, Lake County, has been hit hard by the unending rain and has been named as a county eligible for Federal financial assistance.

However, as much as I would like to support this bill I cannot do so for a number of reasons. First of all, I adamantly object to the rule which was adopted to consider this legislation. The rule prohibited Members of the House to offer amendments to H.R. 2667, amendments which in my view were fiscally responsible and would improve the bill. We face a national debt of over $4 trillion, and I believe it is absolutely incumbent upon this Congress to make an effort to pay for this legislation.

Congressman JIM NUSSLE and Congressman PENNY, whose districts are both directly affected by the flooding, had hoped to offer a proposal to pay for H.R. 2667, and I believe that the House should have had the opportunity to vote on their amendment. My Democrat colleagues have stated that since the Congress has provided emergency relief funds in the past without providing offsetting spending reductions elsewhere, we should just continue this practice. Mr. Chairman, we need not compound the mistakes of the past. I would like to suggest to my colleagues that such a practice is precisely one which the voters attempted to eradicate from this Chamber in the last election.

Although the public may not be aware of the fact, the vast majority of rules that provide for consideration of legislation on the House floor either drastically limit or prohibit the ability of House Members to offer amendments. It is absolutely outrageous that in the people's House the people's Representatives are not able to offer amendments which they feel are in the best interest of their constituents.

Moreover, this legislation incorporates unnecessarily and against the normal rules of the House a provision which is totally unrelated to the issue at hand. The so-called Waters amendment violates the rules by legislating on an appropriations bill and is not in any way germane to the present debate. Funding for stipends intended for teenagers and young adults in Los Angeles has no relation to helping the flood ravaged victims along the Mississippi River and other parts of the Midwest. This emergency exists for the farm, business, and home owners in the Midwest, not teenagers in California. Why this language must be included in the legislation before us is beyond me, and its necessity at this time has never been adequately explained by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. Chairman, it is for these reasons that I intend to vote against H.R. 2667, and I would like to urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. TALENT].

Mr. TALENT. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I represent part of the St. Louis area. I have two counties suffering from the flood now, St. Louis and St. Charles Counties. St. Charles County is in a very unique position. It has the dubious distinction of being almost exactly in between the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers and right now suffering, uniquely, flooding from both sides; backwater flooding from the Mississippi River and headwater flooding from the Missouri River.

The Missouri River, in effect, is flooding over St. Charles County. It is a 7- or- 8-mile lake if you fly over it. It is truly a terrible, dreadful, awesome experience to see that.

There are two points I want to make to the House today, Mr. Chairman. First of all, the devastation in my district is similar to the devastation in other people's districts around the country; 7,000 people out of their homes, people desperately in need of shelter, food, people dislocated, people concerned about the future. Farmers having lost their crops, at a time in the growing season when it is impossible to replant and recover as would be if this flood had occurred in April or May.

But the volunteer effort in response, Mr. Chairman, is the silver lining in this terrible cloud.

Fifty thousand people in my district alone have volunteered to help out. They have sandbagged, they have served food, they have taken people into their homes. They are doing the best they can to deal with this terrible problem.

I think everybody recognizes that the response is basically going to have to be on the local and State levels.

The second point I want to make, Mr. Chairman, I want to make to the people who believe as I believe, that we should have paid for this disaster relief by saving from other areas rather than by borrowing money. I think it is appropriate for us to raise those issues. I would have preferred that we pass the flood relief bill and that we do it through savings.

Now we have the opportunity to pass the flood relief bill, and the only opportunity we have is to do it through borrowing. I think that is appropriate now, as it was appropriate to raise those issues, and it is appropriate to put those behind us. But people in the Midwest are waiting to see if the Federal Government and the Congress can unite in an effort and can support them in what they are trying to do to help themselves and their neighbors. It is more than just the money, more than just the loans to the farmers; it is important at this time as the people are laboring under week after week after week of strain that we show that we can pull together.

I urge people in the House, people on both sides of the aisle, those who have doubts, as I have and still have, about how we are funding this measure, to pull together and to pass this measure overwhelmingly and to provide support for the people who so desperately need it.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY].

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

First, I want to stand in strong support of this legislation, and I want to thank the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], for the efforts he made on behalf of so many victims of flood insurance and so many of the other programs that come under this jurisdiction. I thank him very much for the efforts he makes on behalf of the people of our country.

Mr. Chairman, there is all this wringing of hands and gnashing of teeth on the House floor here today about paying for this package.

Let me suggest to my colleagues a relatively simple response:

If more people had Federal flood insurance, there losses would be less, and so would the cost to the American taxpayer.

As chairman of the subcommittee with jurisdiction over the Flood Insurance Program, I am alarmed at the lack of participation in it.

The reality is that many communities do not sign up for this program even though it would protect its citizens. In the Midwest, only about 10 percent of the people who should be in the flood program are actually covered.

The reason is that it would require higher levees, elevated homes and buildings, and other measures that might cost money and obstruct scenic river views, but would, in the long run, save both money and heartache.

Never has it been more true that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

To those who would say we have no right to ask communities to take these measures, to require participation in the flood insurance programs I issue this challenge:

Look into the eyes of crying victims now and tell them they're better of for not having flood insurance.

At best, people eligible for the disaster relief we are passing today will get $11,000 grant and maybe an SBA loan.

If they had flood insurance, they'd be made whole.

Mr. Chairman, flood insurance means peace of mind for people living in flood areas. And it means that disaster packages like this might not have to be so large in the future. I look forward to working with you and others to extend the protections of the Flood Insurance Program to the good people of our country who need it.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLUG].

Mr. KLUG. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the supplemental appropriation bill. My district in Wisconsin, like most of the Midwest, has been clobbered. Corn and soybean and hay and mint crops have been wiped out, roads and bridges have been wiped out, roads and bridges have been washed away, and business districts severely damaged by the worst flooding in southern Wisconsin in more than a century.

Quite frankly, my constituents in Wisconsin need help, and they need it immediately. Small businesses need SBA funding, farmers need agricultural aid, communities like Darlington and Portage need FEMA assistance to pay substantial cleanup bills.

A flash flood in the community of Baraboo just 10 days ago will give you a sense of just how bad things are. Eight inches of rain in only an hour and a half triggered the first flash flood in that city's history. In less than an hour that flood caused more than $3 million in damage, swamping the city's water treatment plant, tearing out walls in a manufacturing plant, and causing so much damage in Devil's Lake State Park that it was closed down for the first time in anyone's memory.

Like many of my midwestern colleagues, I am disappointed we will not have a chance to fund this relief with cuts in other programs because it is not only a question of doing the right thing but it is a question of doing it the right way. That debate and that vote is behind us, so beginning today let us get a flood of aid heading toward the Midwest to replace the flood of water.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. SCHENK].

Ms. SCHENK. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2667.

Last Friday my mother had radiation surgery in California. When I arrived at her bedside late that night she looked up at me and instead of complaining about her pain she asked me if the Congress had done anything to help the flood victims that day. I had to tell her "No."

She said "Look, this country has always come together during national tragedies, disaster and war. Americans care about each other and we pay to help each other out."

She said she heard the Republicans talking about finding cuts to offset the aid.

My mother, who is a woman of great common sense, thought that we had all lost ours.

She recounted that during World War II for example the Government sold war bonds to finance our efforts. "Why," she asked, "don't we issue flood bonds?"

Well, I think that is a pretty good idea—too late, maybe for this tragedy, but perhaps an idea to look at the next time.

The point is that I believe that Americans such as my mother are willing to borrow to help their fellow citizens during this time of crisis and tragedy. I urge us to act and act quickly to pass H.R. 2667.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER].

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of passage of this emergency supplemental and salute our distinguished chairman for bringing this to the floor, but also I want to explain why I voted against the rule.

This is my third year serving Indiana in this body and this is at least the third emergency supplemental appropriations bill that has come before the House to assist victims of natural disasters. There is no question, Mr. Chairman, that this aid is desperately needed, and I will vote for this bill, but there is also little doubt that Congress needs to act responsibly and start a practice of paying for these necessary expenditures.

I salute the Speaker for starting a task force to study and act on this issue.

While it is important to pass this measure here today quickly so that flood victims can begin to rebuild their lives, perhaps we should be acting just as expeditiously to establish a framework to deal with these disasters in a manner that will not be disastrous to our Federal deficit.

There will always be a time when certain regions of our Nation desperately need our help, whether it is a drought in Indiana, a hurricane in Hawaii, or flooding in Missouri. We must begin to be proactive and plan for the unexpected natural disaster, because history has demonstrated that the unexpected is inevitable.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, unless one has experienced a flood, I do not think anyone really can realize the devastation that can come to a farmer, to a homeowner, to a business owner who has experienced a flood.

When river floodwaters get into a home, it is really ruined. The statement has been made that if we had flood insurance and the disaster payments, one could be made whole. That is impossible. Unless you have experienced having flooding in your home, you never know what it is like.

It is the consistency, after it dries, of face powder. It is everyplace.

Farmers who have lost their crops, their plans to send their children to college go down the river with the flood.

I expect I am the only one here who has ever waded through floodwaters up to my knees and up to my hips to shovel corn by hand for the pony pulling the wagon, so I do know something about a flood, but I also have some sympathy for the poor taxpayers and their children and grandchildren.

No one is trying to deny here the funds available for these needs, but we are also concerned about the taxpayers of the country who we just continually say, "Oh, yes, we are concerned about the taxpayer. We are concerned about doing something, but let's don't cut this year. We'll wait till next year."

All we are asking here is that we have the offsets. We all know that someday we are going to have to have those offsets. We are not going to be able continually to sweep them under the rug.

It has become an annual ritualism here, if not once or twice a year, for these emergencies. They are very real. I quite agree with them.

But the emergency to the American taxpayer today is very real, too.

What we are asking Congress to do is what every family has to experience sometime during their lifetimes when the emergency comes to the family. They have to somehow make adjustments in their budgets. Businesses have emergencies. The roof may go bad. Fire or water damage to a business comes that is uninsured. There is never enough insurance to cover a major loss, but there have to be adjustments in the way we live, in the way businesses are run.

We have to take out of one area of our planned budget to spend on the emergency. That is all we are asking to do, to help these people, but also help the taxpayers. There are more taxpayers than there are recipients on this. Think about the taxpayers. The day is coming someday when we will have to do it, but as we slow these things down we are just denying needed programs for the future.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GRAMS].

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding me this time.

I would like to engage in a colloquy with the chairman of our Banking Committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] for some brief statements on some of the concerns we have regarding the flooding in the Midwest.

Mr. Chairman, a number of lenders in my district have approached me with their concerns about the impact that current Federal banking regulations may have on their ability to restructure existing loans and make new credit available in federally declared disaster areas.

In particular, they raised concerns that under current law, they would be unable to restructure loans for those who could not meet their payments because of flooding in the Midwest, and would be forced in some cases to foreclose on people who were severely harmed by the flood.

To address this, I and a bipartisan group of Members including the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER] and also the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT] introduced H.R. 2661, a bill to provide some flexibility for lenders in areas affected by the flooding disaster. Unfortunately, today's rule does not permit us to attach that language to the bill we are considering today.

Mr. Chairman, I know that when the 1992 hurricane disasters occurred last year, under the gentleman's leadership, the House responded by passing legislation to facilitate recovery from the hurricane by providing greater flexibility for depository institutions and their regulators.

And it is my understanding that the gentleman has already been in contact with Federal banking regulators to see if existing law is sufficient to address the problems raised by this year's Midwest flood.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, the gentleman is correct. I have not only written, but we have been in personal contact with the regulators with respect to their reaction on the adequacy of the Depository Institutions Disaster Relief Act of 1992, and what we need now in view of the current situation. They are responding. So we are very much on top of that.

Mr. GRAMS. It is also my understanding that if existing law and regulatory actions do not cover the concerns raised by the lenders in the flooded areas, such as credit availability and restructuring of loans, that we will work together in the Banking Committee to try to address these problems further.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, yes. My understanding from the response we have gotten from the regulatory agencies is that they have issued guidelines already in specific response to the flood-affected areas. I believe those actions, coupled with last year's legislation, is sufficient for the moment. However, should specific additional actions be needed, as I have explained to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], I certainly will work with the gentleman and with his colleagues on that approach ahead.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WHEAT].

Mr. WHEAT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I do not believe I will need all the time.

Mr. Chairman, I wanted to respond to the colloquy that was held on the floor just a moment ago. I thank the chairman of the Banking Committee for his response.

There are a number of my constituents, as well as constituents in the Midwest generally, who have approached many of us on both sides of the aisle about the need and the opportunity that we could give them in Federal law to be flexible in attempting to restructure loans. While this will not take care of most of the problems that will be created by the flood, this will be one step to demonstrate to our constituents that we are in fact concerned about the problems that have been created and to provide one more tool whereby both the Congress and the regulatory agencies can be responsive to the problems that exist.

I appreciate the fact that the chairman will work with us on putting this language into law.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BARLOW].

Mr. BARLOW. Mr. Chairman, I just would like to comment briefly. I appreciate very much this colloquy.

I would ask the chairman of the Banking Committee, if we do find that the experience in south Florida with the relaxation of onerous guidelines, of paperwork and so forth is working down there in terms of taking care of the banking needs and banking situation, and now we take this up into the North Central States and find that this works well up there, if perhaps we could move across the country into the nondisaster areas in the months and years ahead and relieve our banking community from onerous paperwork.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Well, yes, of course, when we get into the definitions of what is onerous, let me remind the gentleman that we have just had a response, I was informing the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GRAMS], from the regulator, Mr. Ludwig of OCC, and they have issued the necessary guidelines under their powers and residual powers that we have given them in the statutes, and other than minor restoration of some of the points of the statutes we passed last year that have expired, the President has issued instructions without asking for legislation to do the very thing the gentleman is seeking.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2667.

As someone who has seen firsthand the personal tragedy caused by flooding, I can honestly say there can be nothing more devastating than the destruction of a wall of water inundating our homes, cities, and farms. It destroys indiscriminately. It takes years to rebuild. And, the honest truth is, Mr. Speaker, that the assistance we provide here is a Band-Aid when a tourniquet is often needed. We can provide some emergency assistance. We can help businesses rebuild somewhat. But it will be the sheer will and perseverance and character of these people in the upper Midwest that will make the minor assistance we provide here today the difference in whether they survive economically or perish.

This is important assistance. It must be provided. But we must keep what we do here in perspective and not oversell the extent to which this will make a difference in the lives of those who have suffered so in the last few weeks.

Not only do we feel a sense of urgency to help now, but questions arise as to what we could have done to prevent such massive devastation. And, ironically enough, the Federal Government has been taking preventative action for some time. And, despite the devastation we have witnessed in the past several weeks, preventative action that has worked more often than not.

Specifically, the existing Corps of Engineers facilities have performed relatively well. Only 20 Corps of Engineers Federal levees have been overtopped or breached while over 770 non-Federal levees have been similarly disabled.

The corps has also played an integral role in emergency flood fighting efforts. Since the flooding began, the corps has distributed some 25.6 million sandbags to local flood fighting crews.

At the same time that we seek to repair the damage of this flood, we must also focus our attention on preventing future losses because severe flooding is something we live with yearly.

Just over 60 percent of all Presidential disaster declarations over the last 25 years have been the result of severe storms and flooding.

Even today, the Flood Insurance Administration estimates that 21,000 communities throughout the country are prone to flooding and have inadequate protection.

Hundreds of billions of dollars in property is currently at risk.

Sacramento, CA, in my own part of the country, sits at the confluence of two great rivers—the Sacramento and the American Rivers. Much like Des Moines, some 300,000 people and $35 billion in property reside in the 100-year flood plain. In fact, even a 67-year storm would overtop many of Sacramento's levees, inundating parts of the city and county with anywhere from 5 to 25 feet of water.

And, as I said, Sacramento is not alone in its need for additional flood protection. There are communities in every corner of the Nation that are under protected and face very serious flood threats.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is spending about $1.5 to $1.7 billion a year to beef up flood protection nationwide.

But this tragic flood in the upper Midwest should be reminder to us all that we must invest more in the prevention of such natural disasters.

It's in the long-term interest of the taxpayers to do so. And it will allow us to fully meet a responsibility to our constituents that is in need of additional attention.

Our citizens have a right to be protected from such forces of nature just as they have a right to be protected from the weapons of a threatening army.

And, it is our responsibility as those who determine Federal priorities to find the resources to make these investments in prevention. I urge my colleagues to keep this in mind as we consider future investments in flood protection and similar public works projects.

I support the bill and I urge its adoption.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the much delayed emergency supplemental for the flood victims in the Midwest. I sympathize with the families who have lost their homes, farms, or businesses. I wish the Rules Committee would have allowed the Penny/Nussle amendment to cut the unobligated balances in 1993 accounts to pay for the emergency spending. We must get our deficit spending under control and if this country was not in debt we would not have to declare an emergency.

However, I don't want to forget a vital cog of the agriculture industry. Not only are farmers affected by this flood, but so are the migrant and seasonal farmworkers. These American workers have been devastated by the flooding. These workers are not permanent residents of the seven flooded States. They do not own farms or processing plants. These individuals are the backbone of agriculture that perform services like detassling corn, operating the combines and tractors, harvesting the fruits and vegetables, and packing and processing the commodities. In past disasters they have been stranded, overlooked, and forgotten. It is estimated that more than 15,000 farmworkers, in over 180 counties, in the seven States have been wiped out by the flood.

The life of a farmworker is that of hard work and dedication to make a decent living. After their children get out of school they board up their houses in south Texas, pack up all of their belongings in their cars and drive north to work along farms scattered on each side of the Mississippi River. They work small town to small town, family farm to family farm until they reach the Canadian border by the end of summer. The money they earn helps them through the winter, providing food, clothing, and shelter for their families. These laborers earn the majority of their annual income during the peak agricultural season which has been devastated by Mother Nature. This year will be a tough one for them due to the flood. The proud workers are only asking to be treated like other vital laborers to the Midwest region. The agriculture jobs have been swept away with the high water. These people are literally stranded without the resources and means to go home. I do not want to leave them stranded in their time of need.

Due to exemption under the law, farmworkers are not eligible for assistance under regular unemployment compensation. Also due to FEMA's restrictive definition of employment, many farmworkers are excluded from disaster unemployment compensation coverage because they have not actually started their farmwork at the time of the disaster. As a result, a farmworker cannot rely on the normal benefits for help in either the immediate or foreseeable future.

When the Appropriations Committee met last week, I raised this issue with my friend from Illinois, Mr. DURBIN, chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture. Mr. DURBIN agreed with me that language should be included in the conference report including migrant and seasonal farmworkers to provide assistance to them. Mr. PASTOR of Arizona, a member of the Agriculture Appropriations committee, and I drafted report language with the help of Mr. DURBIN that we hope the Secretary of Agriculture will utilize.

The report language states that the Secretary of Agriculture may designate up to $20 million for emergency and related assistance for low-income migrant and seasonal farmworkers. Priority will be given for relocation and related transportation assistance for affected farmworkers.

The 1990 farm bill authorized emergency assistance in the form of food, clothing, housing, medical, and other related assistance. By agreeing to this bill today, the House is asking the Secretary to help these farmworkers with assistance to get them back home.

This assistance will help provide transportation to the farmworkers to go home or to locate alternative agricultural or nonagricultural employment in other regions of the country. The bottom line is these American workers should not fall between the cracks and assistance should be provided by Secretary Espy to get these people home.

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 2667.

While some in this House obstruct and delay, there are Americans standing in knee deep water reinforcing levees that are the only protection for a lifetime's worth of work. We have a responsibility to help these brave and determined midwesterners. We have an obligation to let them know that relief is on the way. We have a duty to rise above partisan bickering and provide as much help as we can.

When Hurricane Andrew swept through Florida, there was no question whether Congress would pitch in and help the Americans struggling to recover from that disaster. When the Kurds in a far away land asked for our help, we delivered with bipartisan support for aid. The other side of the aisle didn't obstruct the aid in either of these cases, and they surely cannot gridlock this House now when so many Americans are counting on us. Have they no conscience?

Mr. Chairman, the part of Wisconsin that I represent has thankfully been untouched by the floods. But, as with the relief that went to Florida, I realize that a disaster of this magnitude could just as easily happen in my own district. Before voting, each of us should stop to consider the possibility that next time our constituents could be the ones waiting for Congress to help stop the suffering.

It is unbelievable that some would seek to finance this disaster by eliminating school lunches for our children and furloughing federal law enforcement officers. Let's prepare for the next disaster, but let's take care of these unfortunate people now.

Mr. Chairman, one Republican, Governor Thompson, has signaled Wisconsin's immediate need and support for this appropriation. Other members of his party must now share his good sense on this crisis. Let's do our job and get this relief to the Americans who so badly need it.

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support for H.R. 2667, the emergency supplemental appropriations bill for flood disaster relief. On behalf of my constituents, in Douglas, Johnson, and Wyandotte Counties—which were declared Federal disaster areas last Thursday—I urge my colleagues to support this bill so we can begin to alleviate the misery caused by the Midwest floods.

While the flooding Mississippi River has been the focus of our attention of late, today the Kansas River will crest at 55 feet—22 feet over flood stage—and converge into the crested Missouri River. Right now, it is too early to determine how extensive the damage will be. However, the flood is already having a real impact on the economy in the Kansas City area. All rail traffic through Kansas City, which is the second largest rail hub in the United States, has been halted, forcing rail traffic to be diverted through Montana or Texas.

In my district alone, Kansas City, KS, has been hard hit economically. The Santa Fe Railway has temporarily laid off 490 employees because of flood threats to its Kansas City, KS, rail yards. In addition, Colgate-Palmolive and Proctor and Gamble have begun idling their plants, affecting 850 employees.

Not only has this recurrent rainy weather pattern wrought destruction through flooding, it has harmed the Kansas wheat harvest. Wheat normally harvested in early July, still stands in the field because it is too wet for harvesting.

Mr. Chairman, Kansans are urgently waiting for the House to act. The Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Small Business Administration, and other Federal agencies have done a good job of establishing contact points and letting flood victims know of their services. It is now Congress' responsibility to ensure those who have sustained flood losses will have Federal disaster assistance available to them.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the modification printed in part 1 of House Report 103–189 is considered as adopted and the bill, as modified, is considered as having been read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The text of the bill, as modified, is as follows:

H.R. 2667

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, no amendment to the bill, as modified, is in order except the amendment printed in part 2 of House report 103–189, which may be offered only by the proponent of the amendment or a designee, shall be considered as read, and shall not be subject to amendment.

Debate time on the amendment shall be equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent of the amendment.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER] rise?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. VOLKMER

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to the rule, I offer the amendment designated in the report.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. VOLKMER: Page 11, line 3, strike "$25,000,000" and insert "$50,000,000".

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER] will be recognized for 10 minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 10 minutes.

Is the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER] opposed to the amendment?

Mr. NATCHER. No, we are not, Mr. Chairman, and at the appropriate time we will accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER].

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman, Members of the House, before proceeding to the amendment itself I would like to address two other things, and it has been spoken here on the floor, both last Thursday and Friday, and today, about the floods in the Midwest, and I think it is appropriate at this time to give a lot of thanks to a lot of people, some of which are going to remain unknown to all of us, but they are out there anyway.

In particular I want to thank both the Speaker of the House and the majority whip, the majority floor leader, for the efforts they have made to bring this legislation to the floor expeditiously, starting last Thursday. I also want to thank personally the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], the chairman of the committee, and the subcommittee chairmen, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN], the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH], and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BEVILL], and especially I want to thank Mr. BEVILL publicly for assisting me back several years ago when I asked him, even though back in the Reagan years the Reagan budget did not provide funds at all for a floodwall at Hannibal, MO. But because of his being able to listen to me in explaining the need to him, Mr. BEVILL, that floodwall has been built, and that floodwall had its first test just this year. The first test was in April. Our floodwall still stands. It has run through a 100-year flood and now a 500-year flood, so I want to thank the Committee on Appropriations for that work to get that floodwall.

Mr. Chairman, I also want to thank the President of the United States, and the Vice President, for showing their concern and visiting the areas on numerous occasions. They have become quite familiar with it so that they know exactly how devastating this actually is, and on that list of thanks, Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my Governor, Governor Mel Carnahan, for working with us and within the State of Missouri to help with this great disaster.

I cannot be remiss in not thanking especially the National Guard, and I am sure it is not just the Missouri National Guard, but also the Illinois, and Iowa, and other National Guard units, and, Mr. Chairman, it is interesting that we have more National Guard personnel helping out with this flood than we had over in Desert Storm, and they are doing an outstanding job.

And, yes, Mr. Chairman, on that list of thanks goes thanks to the Corps of Engineers for an outstanding job in helping to save some communities and trying to save many farm districts, and levee districts and others working day and night with the local citizenry, and along with that, of course, Mr. Witt of FEMA, Secretary Espy of the Agriculture Department. In other words, people everywhere. As my colleagues know, sometimes one does not even know where the help is coming from.

Mr. Chairman, in my home town of Hannibal I have had relief coming from Columbus, OH, people there, and it just became known to me over the weekend that relief came from a town in Indiana. A Kroger store in Kokomo, IN, south on Highway 31, they are sending contributions and donations for Hannibal, for people in my home town in Hannibal, MO. So, we appreciate that help from the Hoosiers.

Mr. Chairman, as said by someone else earlier and as my colleagues know, it is heartbreaking to see all of what is happening out there, but at the same time one cannot believe the feeling which one gets when seeing everyone in surrounding communities helping out a local community, helping out the farmers on the levees, just a great amount of work going on for hours, hours, and hours. Sometimes they go 48 hours without sleep to try to save a levee, to try to stop flooding. Sometimes it works. Sometimes levees have held, but very few. Others, after weeks and weeks of work, they finally lose it because, like the district of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN], on Sunday morning the Sny Island levee finally broke loose. That is the first time that that levee has broke in any flood, as I understand, since either 1897 or 1903. So, that gives my colleagues some idea of how devastating this flood is.

And it has been said earlier, too, there is not a person alive today, there is not a person alive today, that has seen what is happening in the Midwest in their lifetime. This is history, history being made. There has never been such a flood. And for those of my colleagues that may not know, and why I felt so strongly about getting this bill up and getting this rule passed, I not only have the Mississippi River bordering my district, but I also have the Missouri River, both of them for over a hundred miles each.

There is a view, Mr. Chairman, as has been said earlier, that we have got to pay for it, we should pay for this. Yes, that is true. I will not deny that. I agree with my colleagues. But this is not the time to do it. Some of my colleagues, the gentleman from Iowa, the gentleman from Minnesota, said they had an amendment. Well, they have an amendment. Other people I have talked to have other ideas of how to pay for it, and I am sure that if we asked every Member of this House how we were going to pay for this, we would probably find out that out of 435 we would find at least 50 to 100 ways to do it. So, if we were going to do it on this bill and haggle over how to do it, and then ask the Senate to agree to it, and they would probably have a way to do it or not to do it, we could probably spend at least a month or a month and a half here haggling over that. I much prefer to do it as the Speaker of the House has proposed, that a task force be set up, that legislation be promoted, a proposal be made to do it, that a trust fund be set up for disasters and for the future, and that we do come up with a methodology to pay for it, and I think that that is a proper way to do it. But do not bog down this legislation with that one little item because that is just what will happen.

Mr. Chairman, there is no question in my mind, having gone through the legislative process on numerous occasions, on numerous bills, that there has been a great deal of disagreement about exactly how we are going to pay for this. It is easy enough to make a proposal, but it is more difficult to get enough Members to agree to it.

Now to address the amendment itself, Mr. Chairman, and, by the way, I not only support the amendment, but strongly support the flood disaster supplemental appropriations. As my colleagues know, they have all reviewed reports of the flood damage along the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers.

☐ 1710

Thousands of acres of fertile farm land that should be growing with bountiful crops are now turned into unproductive lakes. Businesses along these swollen rivers are flooded, their inventory lost, and their livelihood in jeopardy as the rivers fail to yield. Thousands of families are displaced as the flood waters invade their homes. We have all seen these stark pictures. Mr. Chairman, the people in my district are galvanized in an effort to stop the flooding, support their neighbors, and provide comfort for those families that are displaced. However, as the initial shock from the flood starts to subside there is an urgency for life in this flood area to return to some sort of normalcy. The men and women in this flood plain must be able to get to work in order to maintain their livelihood.

Mr. Chairman, as it currently stands the only way to cross the Mississippi for many of my constituents is at St.

Louis or at Keokuk, IA. The closing of the bridges at Hannibal and Louisiana, MO, and Quincy, IL, make a trip that used to take only a few minutes now take hours one way. To put this in perspective I ask my colleagues to imagine if you had to travel almost to Richmond and back just to get to work. This is what is happening to people in my district that happen to work in Illinois.

Mr. Chairman, I am offering an amendment that will increase the amount of money for emergency expenses as a result of the floods for the Federal Highway Administration by $25 million. This money will only be available if an official budget request is made. This money is vital to restoring the damaged infrastructure of the Midwest so that the people of the Midwest can begin to put their lives back in order. Initial assessments estimate that miles of road must be rebuilt, approaches to bridges must be repaired, and several bridges may need replacing. Having this money available now will help ensure that the infrastructure that has been damaged will be repaired or replaced in an expeditious manner.

Mr. Chairman, I ask my colleagues to support this amendment and this legislation in order to help those men, women, and their families that have had their lives disrupted by the floods.

Mr. Chairman, in closing, I would just like to comment to those of you who say, act, or believe that this $3 billion is all we are going to need, I have here a report that some of the delegation from Missouri has. We had a meeting with our Governor here this morning here just downstairs on the first floor of this building. At that time the Governor gave us a preliminary report of damages in Missouri. It is right at $3 billion. Three billion dollars, about the same amount in this bill, and that is a preliminary figure. That is before what we know could very well happen tonight in Kansas City. That is before what has happened in St. Joseph.

Mr. Chairman, I am sure that you are going to find that this estimate, that the total amount later on is going to be many billions of dollars more, and we had just as well be prepared to do it. I do not think we are going to have the pay-for-it proposal ready at that time. So be prepared to spend some time later on this year on an additional amount, up to $10 billion.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any Member seeking time in opposition to the amendment?

If not, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the speaker pro tempore (Mr. WHEAT) having assumed the chair, Mr. WILLIAMS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2667) making emergency supplemental appropriations for relief from the major, widespread flooding in the Midwest for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 226, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. PORTER

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I am, in its present form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Mr. PORTER moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 2667, to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report back the same to the House forthwith with the following amendment:
> Strike the modification printed in Part 1 of House Report 103–189 relating to legislative amendments to the Job Training Partnership Act, Youth Fair Chance Programs.

Mr. PORTER (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to recommit be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, could we have a copy of the motion.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, we will provide a copy.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, this is a motion to recommit with instructions to eliminate the unrelated provisions regarding the Youth Fair Chance Program.

The rule contained a self-executing provision which added authorizing language to the bill that circumvented the jurisdiction of both the authorizing committee and the Committee on Appropriations. It prevented the House from considering or voting directly on this proposition.

Mr. Speaker, there are three basic reasons why Youth Fair Chance provisions should not be in this bill. First of all, because these provisions have nothing to do with flood relief. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. NATCHER], the chairman of the full committee and the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE], the ranking member on the full committee, and I, all asked the Committee on Rules for a clean bill.

Mr. Speaker, obviously we were ignored. An unrelated provision was snuck in through the rule that has absolutely no business here, and Members I believe are outraged that one Member would have special treatment not available to any others.

Youth Fair Chance should not be in the bill because it is authorizing on an appropriations bill. It adds three substantive provisions which would require the payment of stipends to trainees. The current authorizing law allows but does not require these stipends.

The program manager at the Department of Labor tells us the regulations would not allow participants to receive stipends without this change. But the current authorizing law creates an employment training program, Mr. Speaker, not a stipend program. And this is authorizing to make it a stipend program or a money bill that is dealing with flood relief.

Third, Mr. Speaker, Youth Fair Chance should not be in the bill because it circumvents the normal legislative process. Youth Fair Chance was first funded in a previous supplemental bill. The gentlewoman from California did not then go to the authorizing committee nor the Committee on Appropriations. She used the same egregious procedural end run to get it considered through another self-executing rule. It has therefore never properly been considered by the Committee on Appropriations, and it amends a program that not a single dollar has been spent on. We have no experience on which to base new changes in the law. These are simply inserted because the gentlewoman thinks they ought to be there.

Furthermore, it directly contravenes the judgment of the authorizing committee which passed the initial bill without the stipend requirement. In fact, the only committee that has ever considered the Waters amendment was the conference committee on the previous supplemental bill, which specifically rejected it.

Mr. Speaker, let me emphasize this was not some oversight of the conference committee. The waters provisions were considered and thoughtfully rejected by the conference committee. One can read the conference report and see it. Nor, as some claimed, is the Waters provision necessary to get Youth Fair Chance up and running. The Department of Labor tells us it will start the program with or without the Waters provision. It is again an employment training program, not a stipend program.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this process shows a cynical disrespect for the authorizing committee, a cynical disrespect for the Appropriations Committee, a disrespect, if you will, Mr. Speaker, for the entire legislative process and for all Members who have to go through that normal process in order to have their provisions and their ideas considered on this floor.

We should send a message, Mr. Speaker, in this motion to recommit that Members cannot use arcane procedure to capitalize on the suffering of others, to advance their own unrelated legislative agendas.

Let us make this a clean bill, to get relief to the thousands of Americans that need it. Let us ask the gentlwoman from California to do what all the rest of us have to do, to go to the authorizing committee, to go to the Committee on Appropriations, to use the normal legislative process.

I urge the Members to reject the Waters language and support the motion to recommit.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. WHEAT). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, is it timely to raise a point of order on the motion to recommit?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A point of order on the motion to recommit would have to be made prior to the time that debate began on the motion.

Mr. VOLKMER. Even though we did not have a copy and we did not know what it was. Some of us would have liked to raise a point of order. This motion is not in order. It is completely out of order, according to the rules of the House.

POINT OF ORDER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman wish to state a point of order?

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, this amendment demands and strikes out language, an amendment that was previously adopted by the House. It is out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order comes too late. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. NATCHER. Mr. Speaker, the author of this motion to recommit is one of the able Members of the House, and he is my friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], as Members know, is the ranking minority member on the subcommittee on Labor-HHS-Education appropriations. He serves with me as chairman, and he helps make the recommendations for the important Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education appropriations bill. I appreciate his help.

This flood disaster relief bill that we have had before the House today is one of the most important bills that has been presented during this session of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I served with nine Presidents since I have been a Member of Congress. Our current President is a new President. He has been criticized from time to time about some of the issues that have been raised. But, Mr. Speaker, he is not afraid. He's doing just fine.

The issues in this bill that the President wants considered are basic issues pertaining to our people. They are important and should be solved.

The gentleman from Illinois, the ranking minority member on our subcommittee, has worked with me all down through the days on this particular flood relief bill, along with the other members of the subcommittee. The close cooperation from all members of the committee is the reason we have it here at this time as quickly as possible.

On July 14, the President submitted his flood relief request for $2,482,000,000. The following Monday, the President increased that amount to $2,983,000,000.

We held meetings on it with the executive branch immediately. We brought this bill to the House as quickly as we could and we recommend it to the House. It is a good bill.

Now, concerning the motion to recommit to strike out the provision pertaining to the Waters amendment, Mr. Speaker, as Members will recall, on May 26, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] offered an amendment to strike out the entire Youth Fair Chance Program in the bill at that time. That was in the second stimulus supplemental bill—H.R. 2244.

We had a rollcall vote on it, Mr. Speaker. As Members will recall, it went down 176 to 251.

I say, with all respect to my friend, the gentleman from Illinois, the motion that he has submitted today to recommit this legislation should be turned down. It should be defeated, Mr. Speaker, and I so request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule XV, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the question of passage of the bill.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 201, nays 226, not voting 7, as follows:

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Edwin Thomas, one of his secretaries.

REPORT ON H.R. 2750, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS BILL, 1994

Mr. CARR of Michigan, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 103–190) on the bill (H.R. 2750) making appropriations for the Department of Transportation and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1994, which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

ANNOUNCEMENT REGARDING PREPRINTING OF AMENDMENTS ON H.R. 2330, INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1994

(Mr. BEILENSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, the Rules Committee has received a request from the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence for a rule to H.R. 2330, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994, that would require amendments to be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD prior to their consideration.

Although the Rules Committee has not decided upon this request, I wanted to alert Members of this possible requirement for H.R. 2330 so that Members are prepared with their amendments.

It is anticipated that this measure will come to the floor sometime in the near future. Therefore, to fully ensure Members' abilities to offer amendments under the requested rule, they should have those amendments appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD prior to the consideration of their amendments.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WHEAT). Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on the motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall vote, if postponed, will be taken tomorrow, Wednesday, July 28, 1993.

§1101. Definitions

Section 40102(a) of this title applies to this chapter.

SUBCHAPTER II—ORGANIZATION AND ADMINISTRATIVE

§1111. General organization

(a) ORGANIZATION.—The National Transportation Safety Board is an independent establishment of the United States Government.

(b) APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS.—The Board is composed of 5 members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Not more than 3 members may be appointed from the same political party. At least 3 members shall be appointed on the basis of technical qualification, professional standing, and demonstrated knowledge in accident reconstruction, safety engineering, human factors, transportation safety, or transportation regulation.

(c) TERMS OF OFFICE AND REMOVAL.—The term of office of each member is 5 years. An individual appointed to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of the term for which the predecessor of that individual was appointed, is appointed for the remainder of that term. When the term of office of a member ends, the member may continue to serve until a successor is appointed and qualified. The President may remove a member for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office.

(d) CHAIRMAN AND VICE CHAIRMAN.—The President shall designate, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a Chairman of the Board. The President also shall designate a Vice Chairman of the Board. The terms of office of both the Chairman and Vice Chairman are 2 years. When the Chairman is absent or unable to serve or when the position of Chairman is vacant, the Vice Chairman acts as Chairman.

(e) DUTIES AND POWERS OF CHAIRMAN.—The Chairman is the chief executive and administrative officer of the Board. Subject to the general policies and decisions of the Board, the Chairman shall—

(1) appoint, supervise, and fix the pay of officers and employees necessary to carry out this chapter;

(2) distribute business among the officers, employees, and administrative units of the Board; and

(3) supervise the expenditures of the Board.

(f) QUORUM.—Three members of the Board are a quorum in carrying out duties and powers of the Board.

(g) OFFICES, BUREAUS, AND DIVISIONS.—The Board shall establish offices necessary to carry out this chapter, including an office to investigate and report on the safe transportation of hazardous material. The Board shall establish distinct and appropriately staffed bureaus, divisions, or offices to investigate and report on accidents involving each of the following modes of transportation:

(1) aviation.

(2) highway and motor vehicle.

(3) rail and tracked vehicle.

(4) pipeline.

(h) SEAL.—The Board shall have a seal that shall be judicially recognized.

§1112. Special boards of inquiry on air transportation safety

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—If an accident involves a substantial question about public safety in air transportation, the National Transportation Safety Board may establish a special board of inquiry composed of—

(1) one member of the Board acting as chairman; and

(2) 2 members representing the public, appointed by the President on notification of the establishment of the special board of inquiry.

(b) QUALIFICATIONS AND CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—The public members of a special board of inquiry must be qualified by training and experience to participate in the inquiry and may not have a pecuniary interest in an aviation enterprise involved in the accident to be investigated.

(c) AUTHORITY.—A special board of inquiry has the same authority that the Board has under this chapter.

§1113. Administrative

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) The National Transportation Safety Board, and when authorized by it, a member of the Board, an administrative law judge employed by or assigned to the Board, or an officer or employee designated by the Chairman of the Board, may conduct hearings to carry out this chapter, administer oaths, and require, by subpena or otherwise, necessary witnesses and evidence.

(2) A witness or evidence in a hearing under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be summoned or required to be produced from any place in the United States to the designated place of the hearing. A witness summoned under this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(3) A subpena shall be issued under the signature of the Chairman or the Chairman's delegate but may be served by any person designated by the Chairman.

(4) If a person disobeys a subpena, order, or inspection notice of the Board, the Board may bring a civil action in a district court of the United States to enforce the subpena, order, or notice. An action under this paragraph may be brought in the judicial district in which the person against whom the action is brought resides, is found, or does business. The court may punish a failure to obey an order of the court to comply with the subpena, order, or notice as a contempt of court.

(b) ADDITIONAL POWERS.—(1) The Board may—

(A) procure the temporary or intermittent services of experts or consultants under section 3109 of title 5;

(B) make agreements and other transactions necessary to carry out this chapter without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5);

(C) use, when appropriate, available services, equipment, personnel, and facilities of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government on a reimbursable or other basis;

(D) confer with employees and use services, records, and facilities of State and local governmental authorities;

(E) appoint advisory committees composed of qualified private citizens and officials of the Government and State and local governments as appropriate;

(F) accept voluntary and uncompensated services notwithstanding another law;

(G) accept gifts of money and other property;

(H) make contracts with nonprofit entities to carry out studies related to duties and powers of the Board; and

(I) require that the departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, State and local governments, and governments of foreign countries provide appropriate consideration for the reasonable costs of goods and services supplied by the Board.

(2) The Board shall deposit in the Treasury amounts received under paragraph (1)(I) of this subsection to be credited to the appropriation of the Board.

(c) SUBMISSION OF CERTAIN COPIES TO CONGRESS.—When the Board submits to the President or the Director of the Office of Management and Budget a budget estimate, budget request, supplemental budget estimate, other budget information, a legislative recommendation, prepared testimony for congressional hearings, or comments on legislation, the Board must submit a copy to Congress at the same time. An officer, department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government may not require the Board to submit the estimate, request, information, recommendation, testimony, or comments to another officer, department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government for approval, comment, or review before being submitted to Congress.

(d) LIAISON COMMITTEES.—The Chairman may determine the number of committees that are appropriate to maintain effective liaison with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, State and local governmental authorities, and independent standard-setting authorities that carry out programs and activities related to transportation safety. The Board may designate representatives to serve on or assist those committees.

(e) INQUIRIES.—The Board, or an officer or employee of the Board designated by the Chairman, may conduct an inquiry to obtain information related to transportation safety after publishing notice of the inquiry in the Federal Register. The Board or designated officer or employee may require by order a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government, a State or local governmental authority, or a person transporting individuals or property in commerce to submit to the Board a written report and answers to requests and questions related to a duty or power of the Board. The Board may prescribe the time within which the report and answers must be given to the Board or to the designated officer or employee. Copies of the report and answers shall be made available for public inspection.

(f) REGULATIONS.—The Board may prescribe regulations to carry out this chapter.

§1114. Disclosure, availability, and use of information

(a) GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, a copy of a record, information, or investigation submitted or received by the National Transportation Safety Board, or a member or employee of the Board, shall be made available to the public on identifiable request and at reasonable cost. This subsection does not require the release of information described by section 552(b) of title 5 or protected from disclosure by another law of the United States.

(b) TRADE SECRETS.—(1) The Board may disclose information related to a trade secret referred to in section 1905 of title 18 only—

(A) to another department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government when requested for official use;

(B) to a committee of Congress having jurisdiction over the subject matter to which the information is related, when requested by that committee;

(C) in a judicial proceeding under a court order that preserves the confidentiality of the information without impairing the proceeding; and

(D) to the public to protect health and safety after giving notice to any interested person to whom the information is related and an opportunity for that person to comment in writing, or orally in closed session, on the proposed disclosure, if the delay resulting from notice and opportunity for comment would not be detrimental to health and safety.

(2) Information disclosed under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be disclosed only in a way designed to preserve its confidentiality.

(c) COCKPIT VOICE RECORDINGS AND TRANSCRIPTS.—(1) The Board may not disclose publicly any part of a cockpit voice recorder recording or transcript of oral communications by and between flight crew members and ground stations related to an accident or incident investigated by the Board. However, the Board shall make public any part of a transcript the Board decides is relevant to the accident or incident—

(A) if the Board holds a public hearing on the accident or incident, at the time of the hearing; or

(B) if the Board does not hold a public hearing, at the time a majority of the other factual reports on the accident or incident are placed in the public docket.

(2) This subsection does not prevent the Board from referring at any time to cockpit voice recorder information in making safety recommendations.

(d) DRUG TESTS.—(1) Notwithstanding section 503(e) of the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1987 (Public Law 100–71, 101 Stat. 471), the Secretary of Transportation shall provide the following information to the Board when requested in writing by the Board:

(A) any report of a confirmed positive toxicological test, verified as positive by a medical review officer, conducted on an officer or employee of the Department of Transportation under post-accident, unsafe practice, or reasonable suspicion toxicological testing requirements of the Department, when the officer or employee is reasonably associated with the circumstances of an accident or incident under the investigative jurisdiction of the Board.

(B) any laboratory record documenting that the test is confirmed positive.

(2) Except as provided by paragraph (3) of this subsection, the Board shall maintain the confidentiality of, and exempt from disclosure under section 552(b)(3) of title 5—

(A) a laboratory record provided the Board under paragraph (1) of this subsection that reveals medical use of a drug allowed under applicable regulations; and

(B) medical information provided by the tested officer or employee related to the test or a review of the test.

(3) The Board may use a laboratory record made available under paragraph (1) of this subsection to develop an evidentiary record in an investigation of an accident or incident if—

(A) the fitness of the tested officer or employee is at issue in the investigation; and

(B) the use of that record is necessary to develop the evidentiary record.

§1115. Training

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "Institute" means the Transportation Safety Institute of the Department of Transportation and any successor organization of the Institute.

(b) USE OF INSTITUTE SERVICES.—The National Transportation Safety Board may use, on a reimbursable basis, the services of the Institute. The Secretary of Transportation shall make the Institute available to—

(1) the Board for safety training of employees of the Board in carrying out their duties and powers; and

(2) other safety personnel of the United States Government, State and local governments, governments of foreign countries, interstate authorities, and private organizations the Board designates in consultation with the Secretary.

(c) FEES.—(1) Training at the Institute for safety personnel (except employees of the Government) shall be provided at a reasonable fee established periodically by the Board in consultation with the Secretary. The fee shall be paid directly to the Secretary, and the Secretary shall deposit the fee in the Treasury. The amount of the fee—

(A) shall be credited to the appropriate appropriation (subject to the requirements of any annual appropriation); and

(B) is an offset against any annual reimbursement agreement between the Board and the Secretary to cover all reasonable costs of providing training under this subsection that the Secretary incurs in operating the Institute.

(2) The Board shall maintain an annual record of offsets under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection.

§1116. Reports and studies

(a) PERIODIC REPORTS.—The National Transportation Safety Board shall report periodically to Congress, departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and State and local governmental authorities concerned with transportation safety, and other interested persons. The report shall—

(1) advocate meaningful responses to reduce the likelihood of transportation accidents similar to those investigated by the Board; and

(2) propose corrective action to make the transportation of individuals as safe and free from risk of injury as possible, including action to minimize personal injuries that occur in transportation accidents.

(b) STUDIES, INVESTIGATIONS, AND OTHER REPORTS.—The Board also shall—

(1) carry out special studies and investigations about transportation safety, including avoiding personal injury;

(2) examine techniques and methods of accident investigation and periodically publish recommended procedures for accident investigations;

(3) prescribe requirements for persons reporting accidents and aviation incidents that—

(A) may be investigated by the Board under this chapter; or

(3) a detailed appraisal of the accident investigation and accident prevention activities of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and State and local governmental authorities having responsibility for those activities under a law of the United States or a State; and

(4) an evaluation conducted every 2 years of transportation safety and recommendations for legislative and administrative action and change.

§1118. Authorization of appropriations

(a) GENERAL.—Not more than $38,800,000 may be appropriated to the National Transportation Safety Board for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, to carry out this chapter.

(F) any other accident related to the transportation of individuals or property when the Board decides—

(i) the accident is catastrophic;

(ii) the accident involves problems of a recurring character; or

(iii) the investigation of the accident would carry out this chapter.

(2) An investigation by the Board under paragraph (1)(A)-(D) or (F) of this subsection has priority over any investigation by another department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government. The Board shall provide for appropriate participation by other departments, agencies, or instrumentalities in the investigation. However, those departments, agencies, or instrumentalities may not participate in the decision of the Board about the probable cause of the accident.

(3) This section and sections 1113, 1116(b), 1133, and 1134(a) and (c)-(e) of this title do not affect the authority of another department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government to investigate an accident under applicable law or to obtain information directly from the parties involved in, and witnesses to, the accident. The Board and other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities shall ensure that appropriate information developed about the accident is exchanged in a timely manner.

(b) ACCIDENTS INVOLVING PUBLIC VESSELS.—(1) The Board or the head of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall investigate and establish the facts, circumstances, and cause or probable cause of a marine accident involving a public vessel and any other vessel. (c) ACCIDENTS NOT INVOLVING GOVERNMENT MISFEASANCE OR NONFEASANCE.—(1) When asked by the Board, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(A) investigate an accident described under subsection (a) or (b) of this section in which misfeasance or nonfeasance by the Government has not been alleged; and

(B) report the facts and circumstances of the accident to the Board.

(2) The Board shall use the report in establishing cause or probable cause of an accident described under subsection (a) or (b) of this section.

(A) each accident involving civil aircraft; and

(B) with the participation of appropriate military authorities, each accident involving both military and civil aircraft.

(2) A person employed under section 1113(b)(1) of this title that is conducting an investigation or hearing about an aircraft accident has the same authority to conduct the investigation or hearing as the Board.

(b) NOTIFICATION AND REPORTING.—The Board shall prescribe regulations governing the notification and reporting of accidents involving civil aircraft.

(c) PARTICIPATION OF SECRETARY.—The Board shall provide for the participation of the Secretary of Transportation in the investigation of an aircraft accident under this chapter when participation is necessary to carry out the duties and powers of the Secretary. However, the Secretary may not participate in establishing probable cause.

(d) ACCIDENTS INVOLVING ONLY MILITARY AIRCRAFT.—If an accident involves only military aircraft and a duty of the Secretary is or may be involved, the military authorities shall provide for the participation of the Secretary. In any other accident involving only military aircraft, the military authorities shall give the Board or Secretary information the military authorities decide would contribute to the promotion of air safety.

§1133. Review of other agency action

The National Transportation Safety Board shall review on appeal—

(a) ENTRY AND INSPECTION.—An officer or employee of the National Transportation Safety Board—

(1) on display of appropriate credentials and written notice of inspection authority, may enter property where a transportation accident has occurred or wreckage from the accident is located and do anything necessary to conduct an investigation; and

(2) during reasonable hours, may inspect any record, process, control, or facility related to an accident investigation under this chapter.

(b) INSPECTION, TESTING, PRESERVATION, AND MOVING OF AIRCRAFT AND PARTS.—(1) In investigating an aircraft accident under this chapter, the Board may inspect and test, to the extent necessary, any civil aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or property on an aircraft involved in an accident in air commerce.

(2) Any civil aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or property on an aircraft involved in an accident in air commerce shall be preserved, and may be moved, only as provided by regulations of the Board.

(c) AVOIDING UNNECESSARY INTERFERENCE AND PRESERVING EVIDENCE.—In carrying out subsection (a)(1) of this section, an officer or employee may examine or test any vehicle, vessel, rolling stock, track, or pipeline component. The examination or test shall be conducted in a way that—

(1) does not interfere unnecessarily with transportation services provided by the owner or operator of the vehicle, vessel, rolling stock, track, or pipeline component; and

(2) to the maximum extent feasible, preserves evidence related to the accident, consistent with the needs of the investigation and with the cooperation of that owner or operator.

(d) EXCLUSIVE AUTHORITY OF BOARD.—Only the Board has the authority to decide on the way in which testing under this section will be conducted, including decisions on the person that will conduct the test, the type of test that will be conducted, and any individual who will witness the test. Those decisions are committed to the discretion of the Board. The Board shall make any of those decisions based on the needs of the investigation being conducted and, when applicable, subsections (a), (c), and (e) of this section.

(e) PROMPTNESS OF TESTS AND AVAILABILITY OF RESULTS.—An inspection, examination, or test under subsection (a) or (c) of this section shall be started and completed promptly, and the results shall be made available.

(f) AUTOPSIES.—(1) The Board may order an autopsy to be performed and have other tests made when necessary to investigate an accident under this chapter. However, local law protecting religious beliefs related to autopsies shall be observed to the extent consistent with the needs of the accident investigation.

(2) With or without reimbursement, the Board may obtain a copy of an autopsy report performed by a State or local official on an individual who died because of a transportation accident investigated by the Board under this chapter.

§1135. Secretary of Transportation's responses to safety recommendations

(a) GENERAL.—When the National Transportation Safety Board submits a recommendation about transportation safety to the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary shall give a formal written response to each recommendation not later than 90 days after receiving the recommendation. The response shall indicate whether the Secretary intends—

(1) to carry out procedures to adopt the complete recommendation;

(2) to carry out procedures to adopt a part of the recommendation; or

(3) to refuse to carry out procedures to adopt the recommendation.

(b) TIMETABLE FOR COMPLETING PROCEDURES AND REASONS FOR REFUSALS.—A response under subsection (a)(1) or (2) of this section shall include a copy of a proposed timetable for completing the procedures. A response under subsection (a)(2) of this section shall detail the reasons for the refusal to carry out procedures on the remainder of the recommendation. A response under subsection (a)(3) of this section shall detail the reasons for the refusal to carry out procedures.

(c) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—The Board shall make a copy of each recommendation and response available to the public at reasonable cost.

(d) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress on January 1 of each year a report containing each recommendation on transportation safety made by the Board to the Secretary during the prior year and a copy of the Secretary's response to each recommendation.

SUBCHAPTER IV—ENFORCEMENT AND PENALTIES

§1151. Aviation enforcement

(a) CIVIL ACTIONS BY BOARD.—The National Transportation Safety Board may bring a civil action in a district court of the United States against a person to enforce section 1132, 1134(b) or (f)(1)(related to an aircraft accident), or 1155(a) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those sections. An action under this subsection may be brought in the judicial district in which the person does business or the violation occurred.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS BY ATTORNEY GENERAL.—On request of the Board, the Attorney General may bring a civil action in an appropriate court—

(1) to enforce section 1132, 1134(b) or (f)(1)(related to an aircraft accident), or 1155(a) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those sections; and

(2) to prosecute a person violating those sections or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those sections.

(c) PARTICIPATION OF BOARD.—On request of the Attorney General, the Board may participate in a civil action to enforce section 1132, 1134(b) or (f)(1) (related to an aircraft accident), or 1155(a) of this title.

§1152. Joinder and intervention in aviation proceedings

A person interested in or affected by a matter under consideration in a proceeding or a civil action to enforce section 1132, 1134(b) or (f)(1) (related to an aircraft accident), or 1155(a) of this title, or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those sections, may be joined as a party or permitted to intervene in the proceeding or civil action.

§1153. Judicial review

(a) GENERAL.—The appropriate court of appeals of the United States or the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit may review a final order of the National Transportation Safety Board under this chapter. A person disclosing a substantial interest in the order may apply for review by filing a petition not later than 60 days after the order of the Board is issued.

(b) PERSONS SEEKING JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AVIATION MATTERS.—(1) A person disclosing a substantial interest in an order related to an aviation matter issued by the Board under this chapter may apply for review of the order by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. The petition must be filed not later than 60 days after the order is issued. The court may allow the petition to be filed after the 60 days only if there was a reasonable ground for not filing within that 60-day period.

(2) When a petition is filed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the clerk of the court immediately shall send a copy of the petition to the Board. The Board shall file with the court a record of the proceeding in which the order was issued.

(3) When the petition is sent to the Board, the court has exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, amend, modify, or set aside any part of the order and may order the Board to conduct further proceedings. After reasonable notice to the Board, the court may grant interim relief by staying the order or taking other appropriate action when cause for its action exists. Findings of fact by the Board, if supported by substantial evidence, are conclusive.

(4) In reviewing an order under this subsection, the court may consider an objection to an order of the Board only if the objection was made in the proceeding conducted by the Board or if there was a reasonable ground for not making the objection in the proceeding.

(5) A decision by a court under this subsection may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28.

(c) ADMINISTRATOR SEEKING JUDICIAL REVIEW OF AVIATION MATTERS.—When the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration decides that an order of the Board under section 44709 or 46301(d)(5) of this title will have a significant adverse impact on carrying out this chapter related to an aviation matter, the Administrator may obtain judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to the judicial review proceedings. Findings of fact of the Board are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

§1154. Discovery and use of cockpit voice and other material

(a) TRANSCRIPTS AND RECORDINGS.—(1) Except as provided by this subsection, a party in a judicial proceeding may not use discovery to obtain—

(A) any part of a cockpit voice recorder transcript that the National Transportation Safety Board has not made available to the public under section 1114(c) of this title; and

(B) a cockpit voice recorder recording.

(2)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (4)(A) of this subsection, a court may allow discovery by a party of a cockpit voice recorder transcript if, after an in camera review of the transcript, the court decides that—

(i) the part of the transcript made available to the public under section 1114(c) of this title does not provide the party with sufficient information for the party to receive a fair trial; and

(ii) discovery of additional parts of the transcript is necessary to provide the party with sufficient information for the party to receive a fair trial.

(B) A court may allow discovery, or require production for an in camera review, of a cockpit voice recorder transcript that the Board has not made available under section 1114(c) of this title only if the cockpit voice recorder recording is not available.

(3) Except as provided in paragraph (4)(A) of this subsection, a court may allow discovery by a party of a cockpit voice recorder recording if, after an in camera review of the recording, the court decides that—

(A) the parts of the transcript made available to the public under section 1114(c) of this title and to the party through discovery under paragraph (2) of this subsection do not provide the party with sufficient information for the party to receive a fair trial; and

(B) discovery of the cockpit voice recorder recording is necessary to provide the party with sufficient information for the party to receive a fair trial.

(4)(A) When a court allows discovery in a judicial proceeding of a part of a cockpit voice recorder transcript not made available to the public under section 1114(c) of this title or a cockpit voice recorder recording, the court shall issue a protective order—

(i) to limit the use of the part of the transcript or the recording to the judicial proceeding; and

(ii) to prohibit dissemination of the part of the transcript or the recording to any person that does not need access to the part of the transcript or the recording for the proceeding.

(B) A court may allow a part of a cockpit voice recorder transcript not made available to the public under section 1114(c) of this title or a cockpit voice recorder recording to be admitted into evidence in a judicial proceeding, only if the court places the part of the transcript or the recording under seal to prevent the use of the part of the transcript or the recording for purposes other than for the proceeding.

(5) This subsection does not prevent the Board from referring at any time to cockpit voice recorder information in making safety recommendations.

(b) REPORTS.—No part of a report of the Board, related to an accident or an investigation of an accident, may be admitted into evidence or used in a civil action for damages resulting from a matter mentioned in the report.

§1155. Aviation penalties

(a) CIVIL PENALTY.—(1) A person violating section 1132 or 1134(b) or (f)(1) (related to an aircraft accident) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under either of those sections is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000. A separate violation occurs for each day a violation continues.

(2) This subsection does not apply to a member of the armed forces of the United States or an employee of the Department of Defense subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice when the member or employee is performing official duties. The appropriate military authorities are responsible for taking necessary disciplinary action and submitting to the National Transportation Safety Board a timely report on action taken.

(3) The Board may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under this subsection.

(4) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this subsection from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(5) A civil penalty under this subsection may be collected by bringing a civil action against the person liable for the penalty. The action shall conform as nearly as practicable to a civil action in admiralty.

(b) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—A person that knowingly and without authority removes, conceals, or withholds a part of a civil aircraft involved in an accident, or property on the aircraft at the time of the accident, shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

(a) DESIGNATING MATERIAL AS HAZARDOUS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall designate material (including an explosive, radioactive material, etiologic agent, flammable or combustible liquid or solid, poison, oxidizing or corrosive material, and compressed gas) or a group or class of material as hazardous when the Secretary decides that transporting the material in commerce in a particular amount and form may pose an unreasonable risk to health and safety or property.

(b) REGULATIONS FOR SAFE TRANSPORTATION.—(1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations for the safe transportation of hazardous material in intrastate, interstate, and foreign commerce. The regulations—

(A) apply to a person—

(i) transporting hazardous material in commerce;

(ii) causing hazardous material to be transported in commerce; or

(iii) manufacturing, fabricating, marking, maintaining, reconditioning, repairing, or testing a package or container that is represented, marked, certified, or sold by that person as qualified for use in transporting hazardous material in commerce; and

(B) shall govern safety aspects of the transportation of hazardous material the Secretary considers appropriate.

(2) A proceeding to prescribe the regulations must include an opportunity for informal oral presentations.

§5104. Representation and tampering

(a) REPRESENTATION.—A person may represent, by marking or otherwise, that—

(1) a container or package for transporting hazardous material is safe, certified, or complies with this chapter only if the container or package meets the requirements of each regulation prescribed under this chapter; or

(2) hazardous material is present in a package, container, motor vehicle, rail freight car, aircraft, or vessel only if the material is present.

(b) TAMPERING.—A person may not alter, remove, destroy, or otherwise tamper unlawfully with—

(1) a marking, label, placard, or description on a document required under this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter; or

(2) a package, container, motor vehicle, rail freight car, aircraft, or vessel used to transport hazardous material.

§5105. Transporting certain highly radioactive material

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, "high-level radioactive waste" and "spent nuclear fuel" have the same meanings given those terms in section 2 of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 (42 U.S.C. 10101).

(b) TRANSPORTATION SAFETY STUDY.—In consultation with the Secretary of Energy, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, potentially affected States and Indian tribes, representatives of the rail transportation industry, and shippers of high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel, the Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a study comparing the safety of using trains operated only to transport high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel with the safety of using other methods of rail transportation for transporting that waste and fuel. The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress not later than November 16, 1991, a report on the results of the study.

(c) SAFE RAIL TRANSPORTATION REGULATIONS.—Not later than November 16, 1992, after considering the results of the study conducted under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe amendments to existing regulations that the Secretary considers appropriate to provide for the safe rail transportation of high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel, including trains operated only for transporting high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel.

(d) ROUTES AND MODES STUDY.—Not later than November 16, 1991, the Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a study to decide which factors, if any, shippers and carriers should consider when selecting routes and modes that would enhance overall public safety related to the transportation of high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel. The study shall include—

(1) notice and opportunity for public comment; and

(2) an assessment of the degree to which at least the following affect the overall public safety of the transportation:

(A) population densities.

(B) types and conditions of modal infrastructures (including highways, railbeds, and waterways).

(C) quantities of high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel.

(D) emergency response capabilities.

(E) exposure and other risk factors.

(F) terrain considerations.

(e) INSPECTIONS OF MOTOR VEHICLES TRANSPORTING CERTAIN MATERIAL.—(1) Not later than November 16, 1991, the Secretary of Transportation shall require by regulation that before each use of a motor vehicle to transport a highway-route-controlled quantity of radioactive material in commerce, the vehicle shall be inspected and certified as complying with this chapter and applicable United States motor carrier safety laws and regulations. The Secretary may require that the inspection be carried out by an authorized United States Government inspector or according to appropriate State procedures.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may allow a person, transporting or causing to be transported a highway-route-controlled quantity of radioactive material, to inspect the motor vehicle used to transport the material and to certify that the vehicle complies with this chapter. The inspector qualification requirements the Secretary prescribes for an individual inspecting a motor vehicle apply to an individual conducting an inspection under this paragraph.

§5106. Handling criteria

The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe criteria for handling hazardous material, including—

The regulations—

(1) shall establish the date, as provided by subsection (b) of this section, by which the training shall be completed; and

(2) may provide for different training for different classes or categories of hazardous material and hazmat employees.

(b) BEGINNING AND COMPLETING TRAINING.—A hazmat employer shall begin the training of hazmat employees of the employer not later than 6 months after the Secretary of Transportation prescribes the regulations under subsection (a) of this section. The training shall be completed within a reasonable period of time after—

A grant under this subsection shall be made to a nonprofit organization that demonstrates—

(1) expertise in conducting a training program for hazmat employees; and

(2) the ability to reach and involve in a training program a target population of hazmat employees.

(f) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—(1) Chapter 35 of title 44 does not apply to an activity of the Secretary of Transportation under subsections (a)-(d) of this section.

(2) An action of the Secretary of Transportation under subsections (a)-(d) of this section and sections 5106, 5108(a)-(g)(1) and (h), and 5109 of this title is not an exercise, under section 4(b)(1) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (29 U.S.C. 653(b)(1)), of statutory authority to prescribe or enforce standards or regulations affecting occupational safety or health.

§5109. Motor carrier safety permits

(a) Requirement.—A motor carrier may transport or cause to be transported by motor vehicle in commerce hazardous material only if the carrier holds a safety permit the Secretary of Transportation issues under this section authorizing the transportation and keeps a copy of the permit, or other proof of its existence, in the vehicle. The Secretary shall issue a permit if the Secretary finds the carrier is fit, willing, and able—

(1) to provide the transportation to be authorized by the permit;

(2) to comply with this chapter and regulations the Secretary prescribes to carry out this chapter; and

(3) to comply with applicable United States motor carrier safety laws and regulations and applicable minimum financial responsibility laws and regulations.

The Secretary may approve any part of the application or deny the application. The application shall be under oath and contain information the Secretary requires by regulation.

(d) Amendments, Suspensions, and Revocations.—(1) After notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary may amend, suspend, or revoke a safety permit, as provided by procedures prescribed under subsection (e) of this section, when the Secretary decides the motor carrier is not complying with a requirement of this chapter, a regulation prescribed under this chapter, or an applicable United States motor carrier safety law or regulation or minimum financial responsibility law or regulation.

(2) If the Secretary decides an imminent hazard exists, the Secretary may amend, suspend, or revoke a permit before scheduling a hearing.

(3) procedures to amend, suspend, or revoke a permit; and

(4) other procedures the Secretary considers appropriate to carry out this section.

(f) Shipper Responsibility.—A person offering hazardous material for motor vehicle transportation in commerce may offer the material to a motor carrier only if the carrier has a safety permit issued under this section authorizing the transportation.

(g) Conditions.—A motor carrier may provide transportation under a safety permit issued under this section only if the carrier complies with conditions the Secretary finds are required to protect public safety.

(h) Regulations.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section not later than November 16, 1991.

§5110. Shipping papers and disclosure

(a) Providing Shipping Papers.—Each person offering for transportation in commerce hazardous material to which the shipping paper requirements of the Secretary of Transportation apply shall provide to the carrier providing the transportation a shipping paper that makes the disclosures the Secretary prescribes under subsection (b) of this section.

(4) immediate first action emergency response information or a way for appropriate reference to the information (that must be available immediately); and

(5) a telephone number for obtaining more specific handling and mitigation information about the hazardous material at any time during which the material is transported.

(c) Keeping Shipping Papers on the Vehicle.—(1) A motor carrier, and the person offering the hazardous material for transportation if a private motor carrier, shall keep the shipping paper on the vehicle transporting the material.

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection, the shipping paper shall be kept in a location the Secretary specifies in a motor vehicle, train, vessel, aircraft, or facility until—

(A) the hazardous material no longer is in transportation; or

(B) the documents are made available to a representative of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government or a State or local authority responding to an accident or incident involving the motor vehicle, train, vessel, aircraft, or facility.

(d) Disclosure to Emergency Response Authorities.—When an incident involving hazardous material being transported in commerce occurs, the person transporting the material, immediately on request of appropriate emergency response authorities, shall disclose to the authorities information about the material.

§5111. Rail tank cars

A rail tank car built before January 1, 1971, may be used to transport hazardous material in commerce only if the air brake equipment support attachments of the car comply with the standards for attachments contained in sections 179.100-16 and 179.200-19 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, in effect on November 16, 1990.

§5112. Highway routing of hazardous material

(a) Application.—(1) This section applies to a motor vehicle only if the vehicle is transporting hazardous material in commerce for which placarding of the vehicle is required under regulations prescribed under this chapter. (A) any use of a vehicle under this paragraph to transport any hazardous material in commerce; and

(B) any motor vehicle used to transport hazardous material in commerce.

(2) Except as provided by subsection (d) of this section and section 5125(c) of this title, each State and Indian tribe may establish, maintain, and enforce—

(A) designations of specific highway routes over which hazardous material may and may not be transported by motor vehicle; and

(B) limitations and requirements related to highway routing.

(b) Standards for States and Indian Tribes.—(1) The Secretary, in consultation with the States, shall prescribe by regulation standards for States and Indian tribes to use in carrying out subsection (a) of this section. The standards shall include—

(ii) if the State or tribe conducts at least one on-site observation of the training each year.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation shall allocate amounts made available for grants under this subsection for a fiscal year among eligible States and Indian tribes based on the needs of the States and tribes for emergency response training. In making a decision about those needs, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the number of hazardous material facilities in the State or on land under the jurisdiction of the tribe;

(B) the types and amounts of hazardous material transported in the State or on that land;

Amounts of the State or tribe under subsections (a)(2)(A) and (b)(2)(A) of this section are not part of the non-Government share under this subsection.

(f) MONITORING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—In coordination with the Secretaries of Transportation and Energy, Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and Director of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency shall monitor public sector emergency response planning and training for an accident or incident involving hazardous material. Considering the results of the monitoring, the Secretaries, Administrator, and Directors each shall provide technical assistance to a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe for carrying out emergency response training and planning for an accident or incident involving hazardous material and shall coordinate the assistance using the existing coordinating mechanisms of the national response team and, for radioactive material, the Federal Radiological Preparedness Coordinating Committee.

(g) Delegation of Authority.—To minimize administrative costs and to coordinate Government grant programs for emergency response training and planning, the Secretary of Transportation may delegate to the Directors of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, Chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and Secretaries of Labor and Energy any of the following:

(1) authority to receive applications for grants under this section.

(2) authority to review applications for technical compliance with this section.

(i) Annual Registration Fee Account and Its Uses.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall establish an account in the Treasury into which the Secretary of the Treasury shall deposit amounts the Secretary of Transportation collects under section 5108(g)(2)(A) of this title and transfers to the Secretary of the Treasury under section 5108(g)(2)(C) of this title. Without further appropriation, amounts in the account are available—

(1) to make grants under this section and section 5107(e) of this title;

(2) to monitor and provide technical assistance under subsection (f) of this section; and

(3) to pay administrative costs of carrying out this section and sections 5107(e), 5108(g)(2), and 5115 of this title, except that not more than 10 percent of the amounts made available from the account in a fiscal year may be used to pay those costs.

(A) at least equal to the safety level required under this chapter; or

(B) consistent with the public interest and this chapter, if a required safety level does not exist.

(2) An exemption under this subsection is effective for not more than 2 years and may be renewed on application to the Secretary.

(b) Applications.—When applying for an exemption or renewal of an exemption under this section, the person must provide a safety analysis prescribed by the Secretary that justifies the exemption. The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register notice that an application for an exemption has been filed and shall give the public an opportunity to inspect the safety analysis and comment on the application. This subsection does not require the release of information protected by law from public disclosure.

(B) transportation of a firearm or ammunition in commerce.

(d) Limitation on Authority.—Unless the Secretary decides that an emergency exists, an exemption or renewal granted under this section is the only way a person subject to this chapter may be exempt from this chapter.

§5118. Inspectors

(a) General Requirement.—The Secretary of Transportation shall maintain the employment of 30 hazardous material safety inspectors more than the total number of safety inspectors authorized for the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1990, for the Federal Railroad Administration, the Federal Highway Administration, and the Research and Special Programs Administration.

The regulations shall be prescribed by the later of the last day of the 3-year period beginning on the date the working group submitted its report or the last day of the 90-day period beginning on the date on which at least 26 States adopt all of the recommendations of the report. A regulation prescribed under this subsection may not define or limit the amount of a fee a State may impose or collect.

(2) A regulation prescribed under this subsection takes effect one year after it is prescribed. The Secretary may extend the one-year period for an additional year for good cause. After a regulation is effective, a State may establish, maintain, or enforce a requirement related to the same subject matter only if the requirement is the same as the regulation.

(3) In consultation with the working group, the Secretary shall develop a procedure to eliminate differences in how States carry out a regulation prescribed under this subsection.

(d) Relationship to Other Laws.—The Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 App. U.S.C.) does not apply to the working group.

§5120. International uniformity of standards and requirements

(a) Participation in International Forums.—Subject to guidance and direction from the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation shall participate in international forums that establish or recommend mandatory standards and requirements for transporting hazardous material in international commerce.

(b) Consultation.—The Secretary of Transportation may consult with interested authorities to ensure that, to the extent practicable, regulations the Secretary prescribes under sections 5103(b), 5104, 5110, and 5112 of this title are consistent with standards related to transporting hazardous material that international authorities adopt.

(c) Differences With International Standards and Requirements.—This section—

(1) does not require the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe a standard identical to a standard adopted by an international authority

if the Secretary decides the standard is unnecessary or unsafe; and

(2) does not prohibit the Secretary from prescribing a safety requirement more stringent than a requirement included in a standard adopted by an international authority if the Secretary decides the requirement is necessary in the public interest.

§5121. Administrative

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—To carry out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may investigate, make reports, issue subpenas, conduct hearings, require the production of records and property, take depositions, and conduct research, development, demonstration, and training activities. (B) maintain a central reporting system and information center capable of providing information and advice to law enforcement and firefighting personnel, other interested individuals, and officers and employees of the Government and State and local governments on meeting an emergency related to the transportation of hazardous material; and

(C) conduct a continuous review on all aspects of transporting hazardous material to decide on and take appropriate actions to ensure safe transportation of hazardous material.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not prevent the Secretary from making a contract with a private entity for use of a supplemental reporting system and information center operated and maintained by the contractor.

(e) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit to the President, for submission to Congress, not later than June 15th of each year, a report about the transportation of hazardous material during the prior calendar year. The report shall include—

(1) a statistical compilation of accidents and casualties related to the transportation of hazardous material;

(2) a list and summary of applicable Government regulations, criteria, orders, and exemptions;

(3) a summary of the basis for each exemption;

(B) to eliminate or ameliorate the hazard.

(2) On request of the Secretary, the Attorney General shall bring an action under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

§5123. Civil penalty

(a) PENALTY.—(1) A person that knowingly violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of at least $250 but not more than $25,000 for each violation. A person acts knowingly when—

(A) the person has actual knowledge of the facts giving rise to the violation; or

(B) a reasonable person acting in the circumstances and exercising reasonable care would have that knowledge.

(2) A separate violation occurs for each day the violation, committed by a person that transports or causes to be transported hazardous material, continues.

(b) HEARING REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of Transportation may find that a person has violated this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter only after notice and an opportunity for a hearing. The Secretary shall impose a penalty under this section by giving the person written notice of the amount of the penalty.

(c) PENALTY CONSIDERATIONS.—In determining the amount of a civil penalty under this section, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(2) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue to do business; and

(3) other matters that justice requires.

(d) CIVIL ACTIONS TO COLLECT.—The Attorney General may bring a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States to collect a civil penalty under this section.

(e) COMPROMISE.—The Secretary may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under this section before referral to the Attorney General.

(g) DEPOSITING AMOUNTS COLLECTED.—Amounts collected under this section shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

§5124. Criminal penalty

A person knowingly violating section 5104(b) of this title or willfully violating this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

§5125. Preemption

(a) GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsections (b), (c), and (e) of this section, a requirement of a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe is preempted if—

(1) complying with a requirement of the State, political subdivision, or tribe and a requirement of this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter is not possible; or

(2) the requirement of the State, political subdivision, or tribe, as applied or enforced, is an obstacle to accomplishing and carrying out this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter.

(b) SUBSTANTIVE DIFFERENCES.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a law, regulation, order, or other requirement of a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe about any of the following subjects, that is not substantively the same as a provision of this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter, is preempted:

(A) the designation, description, and classification of hazardous material.

(B) the packing, repacking, handling, labeling, marking, and placarding of hazardous material.

(C) the preparation, execution, and use of shipping documents related to hazardous material and requirements related to the number, contents, and placement of those documents.

(D) the written notification, recording, and reporting of the unintentional release in transportation of hazardous material.

(E) the design, manufacturing, fabricating, marking, maintenance, reconditioning, repairing, or testing of a package or container represented, marked, certified, or sold as qualified for use in transporting hazardous material.

(2) If the Secretary of Transportation prescribes or has prescribed under section 5103(b), 5104, 5110, or 5112 of this title or prior comparable provision of law a regulation or standard related to a subject referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection, a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe may prescribe, issue, maintain, and enforce only a law, regulation, standard, or order about the subject that is substantively the same as a provision of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. The Secretary shall decide on and publish in the Federal Register the effective date of section 5103(b) of this title for any regulation or standard about any of those subjects that the Secretary prescribes after November 16, 1990. However, the effective date may not be earlier than 90 days after the Secretary prescribes the regulation or standard nor later than the last day of the 2-year period beginning on the date the Secretary prescribes the regulation or standard.

(3) If a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe imposes a fine or penalty the Secretary decides is appropriate for a violation related to a subject referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection, an additional fine or penalty may not be imposed by any other authority.

(c) COMPLIANCE WITH SECTION 5112(b) REGULATIONS.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, after the last day of the 2-year period beginning on the date a regulation is prescribed under section 5112(b) of this title, a State or Indian tribe may establish, maintain, or enforce a highway routing designation over which hazardous material may or may not be transported by motor vehicles, or a limitation or requirement related to highway routing, only if the designation, limitation, or requirement complies with section 5112(b).

(2)(A) A highway routing designation, limitation, or requirement established before the date a regulation is prescribed under section 5112(b) of this title does not have to comply with section 5112(b)(1)(B), (C), and (F).

(B) This subsection and section 5112 of this title do not require a State or Indian tribe to comply with section 5112(b)(1)(I) if the highway routing designation, limitation, or requirement was established before November 16, 1990.

(C) The Secretary may allow a highway routing designation, limitation, or requirement to continue in effect until a dispute related to the designation, limitation, or requirement is resolved under section 5112(d) of this title.

(d) DECISIONS ON PREEMPTION.—(1) A person (including a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe) directly affected by a requirement of a State, political subdivision, or tribe may apply to the Secretary, as provided by regulations prescribed by the Secretary, for a decision on whether the requirement is preempted by subsection (a), (b)(1), or (c) of this section. The Secretary shall publish notice of the application in the Federal Register. After notice is published, an applicant may not seek judicial relief on the same or substantially the same issue until the Secretary takes final action on the application or until 180 days after the application is filed, whichever occurs first.

(2) After consulting with States, political subdivisions of States, and Indian tribes, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations for carrying out paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(3) Subsection (a) of this section does not prevent a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe, or another person directly affected by a requirement, from seeking a decision on preemption from a court of competent jurisdiction instead of applying to the Secretary under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(e) WAIVER OF PREEMPTION.—A State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe may apply to the Secretary for a waiver of preemption of a requirement the State, political subdivision, or tribe acknowledges is preempted by subsection (a), (b)(1), or (c) of this section. Under a procedure the Secretary prescribes by regulation, the Secretary may waive preemption on deciding the requirement—

(1) provides the public at least as much protection as do requirements of this chapter and regulations prescribed under this chapter; and

(2) is not an unreasonable burden on commerce.

(f) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—A party to a proceeding under subsection (d) or (e) of this section may bring a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States for judicial review of the decision of the Secretary not later than 60 days after the decision becomes final.

(g) FEES.—A State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribe may impose a fee related to transporting hazardous material only if the fee is fair and used for a purpose related to transporting hazardous material, including enforcement and planning, developing, and maintaining a capability for emergency response.

§5126. Relationship to other laws

(a) CONTRACTS.—A person under contract with a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government that transports or causes to be transported hazardous material, or manufactures, fabricates, marks, maintains, reconditions, repairs, or tests a package or container that the person represents, marks, certifies, or sells as qualified for use in transporting hazardous material must comply with this chapter, regulations prescribed and orders issued under this chapter, and all other requirements of the Government, State and local governments, and Indian tribes (except a requirement preempted by a law of the United States) in the same way and to the same extent that any person engaging in that transportation, manufacturing, fabricating, marking, maintenance, reconditioning, repairing, or testing that is in or affects commerce must comply with the provision, regulation, order, or requirement.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—This chapter does not apply to—

(1) a pipeline subject to regulation under chapter 601 of this title; or

(2) any matter that is subject to the postal laws and regulations of the United States under this chapter or title 18 or 39.

§5301. Policies, findings, and purposes

(a) DEVELOPMENT OF TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS.—It is in the interest of the United States to encourage and promote the development of transportation systems that embrace various modes of transportation and efficiently maximize mobility of individuals and goods in and through urbanized areas and minimize transportation-related fuel consumption and air pollution.

(b) GENERAL FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) more than 70 percent of the population of the United States is located in rapidly expanding urban areas that generally cross the boundary lines of local jurisdictions and often extend into at least 2 States;

(2) the welfare and vitality of urban areas, the satisfactory movement of people and goods within those areas, and the effectiveness of programs aided by the United States Government are jeopardized by deteriorating or inadequate urban transportation service and facilities, the intensification of traffic congestion, and the lack of coordinated, comprehensive, and continuing development planning;

(3) transportation is the lifeblood of an urbanized society, and the health and welfare of an urbanized society depend on providing efficient, economical, and convenient transportation in and between urban areas;

(4) for many years the mass transportation industry capably and profitably satisfied the transportation needs of the urban areas of the United States but in the early 1970's continuing even minimal mass transportation service in urban areas was threatened because maintaining that transportation service was financially burdensome;

(5) ending that transportation, or the continued increase in its cost to the user, is undesirable and may affect seriously and adversely the welfare of a substantial number of lower income individuals;

(6) some urban areas were developing preliminary plans for, or carrying out, projects in the early 1970's to revitalize their mass transportation operations;

(7) significant mass transportation improvements are necessary to achieve national goals for improved air quality, energy conservation, international competitiveness, and mobility for elderly individuals, individuals with disabilities, and economically disadvantaged individuals in urban and rural areas of the United States;

(8) financial assistance by the Government to develop efficient and coordinated mass transportation systems is essential to solve the urban transportation problems referred to in clause (2) of this subsection; and

(9) immediate substantial assistance by the Government is needed to enable mass transportation systems to continue providing vital transportation service.

(c) RAPID URBANIZATION AND CONTINUING POPULATION DISPERSAL.—Rapid urbanization and continuing dispersal of the population and activities in urban areas have made the ability of all citizens to move quickly and at a reasonable cost an urgent problem of the Government.

(d) ELDERLY INDIVIDUALS AND INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES.—It is the policy of the Government that elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities have the same right as other individuals to use mass transportation service and facilities. Special efforts shall be made in planning and designing mass transportation service and facilities to ensure that mass transportation can be used by elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities. All programs of the Government assisting mass transportation shall carry out this policy.

(e) PRESERVING THE ENVIRONMENT.—It is the policy of the Government that special effort shall be made to preserve the natural beauty of the countryside, public park and recreation lands, wildlife and waterfowl refuges, and important historical and cultural assets when planning, designing, and carrying out an urban mass transportation capital project with assistance from the Government under sections 5309 and 5310 of this title.

(f) GENERAL PURPOSES.—The purposes of this chapter are—

(1) to assist in developing improved mass transportation equipment, facilities, techniques, and methods with the cooperation of public and private mass transportation companies;

(2) to encourage the planning and establishment of areawide urban mass transportation systems needed for economical and desirable urban development with the cooperation of public and private mass transportation companies;

(3) to assist States and local governments and their authorities in financing areawide urban mass transportation systems that are to be operated by public or private mass transportation companies as decided by local needs;

(4) to provide financial assistance to State and local governments and their authorities to help carry out national goals related to mobility for elderly individuals, individuals with disabilities, and economically disadvantaged individuals; and

(5) to establish a partnership that allows a community, with financial assistance from the Government, to satisfy its urban mass transportation requirements.

§5302. Definitions

(a) GENERAL.—In this chapter—

(1) "capital project" means a project for—

(A) acquiring, constructing, supervising, or inspecting equipment or a facility for use in mass transportation, expenses incidental to the acquisition or construction (including designing, engineering, location surveying, mapping, and acquiring rights of way), relocation assistance, acquiring replacement housing sites, and acquiring, constructing, relocating, and rehabilitating replacement housing;

§5303. Metropolitan planning

(a) DEVELOPMENT REQUIREMENTS.—To carry out section 5301(a) of this title, metropolitan planning organizations designated under subsection (c) of this section, in cooperation with States, shall develop transportation plans and programs for State urbanized areas. The plans and programs for each area shall provide for developing transportation facilities (including pedestrian walkways and bicycle transportation facilities) that will function as an intermodal transportation system for the State, metropolitan area, and United States. The development process shall provide for consideration of all modes of transportation and shall be continuing, cooperative, and comprehensive to the degree appropriate, based on the complexity of the transportation problems.

(b) PLAN AND PROGRAM FACTORS.—In developing plans and programs under this section and sections 5304–5306 of this title, each metropolitan planning organization at least shall consider the following factors:

(1) preserving existing transportation facilities and, where practical, ways to meet transportation needs by using existing transportation facilities more efficiently.

(2) the consistency of transportation planning with United States Government, State, and local energy conservation programs, goals, and objectives.

(3) the need to relieve congestion and prevent congestion from occurring.

(4) the likely effect of transportation policy decisions on land use and development and the consistency of transportation plans and programs with short- and long-term land use and development plans.

(5) programming expenditures on transportation enhancement activities, as required under section 133 of title 23.

(6) the effects of all transportation projects to be undertaken in the metropolitan area, without regard to whether the projects are publicly financed.

(7) international border crossings and access to ports, airports, intermodal transportation facilities, major freight distribution routes, national parks, recreation areas, monuments and historic sites, and military installations.

(8) the need for connecting roads in the metropolitan area with roads outside the area.

(9) the transportation needs identified by using the management systems required by section 303 of title 23.

(10) preserving rights of way for constructing future transportation projects, including identifying—

(A) unused rights of way that may be needed for future transportation corridors; and

(B) corridors where action is needed most to prevent destruction or loss.

(11) ways to enhance the efficient movement of freight.

(12) using life-cycle costs in designing and engineering bridges, tunnels, and pavement.

(13) the overall social, economic, energy, and environmental effects of transportation decisions.

(14) ways to expand and enhance mass transportation services and to increase usage of those services.

(15) capital investments that will result in increased security in mass transportation systems.

(c) DESIGNATING METROPOLITAN PLANNING ORGANIZATIONS.—(1) To carry out the planning process required by this section, a metropolitan planning organization shall be designated for each urbanized area with a population of more than 50,000—

(A) by agreement of the chief executive officer of a State and units of general local government representing at least 75 percent of the affected population (including the central city as defined by the Secretary of Commerce); or

(B) under procedures established by State or local law.

(2) In a metropolitan area designated as a transportation management area, the designated metropolitan planning organization, if redesignated after December 18, 1991, shall include local elected officials, officials of authorities that administer or operate major modes of transportation in the metropolitan area (including all transportation authorities included in the organization on June 1, 1991), and appropriate State officials.

(3) More than one metropolitan planning organization may be designated in an urbanized area (as defined by the Secretary of Commerce) only if the chief executive officer decides that the size and complexity of the urbanized area make designation of more than one organization appropriate.

(4) A designation is effective until—

(A) the organization is redesignated under paragraph (3) of this subsection; or

(B) revoked—

(i) by agreement of the chief executive officer and units of general local government representing at least 75 percent of the affected population; or

(ii) as otherwise provided by State or local procedures.

(5)(A) The chief executive officer and units of general local government representing at least 75 percent of the affected population (including the central city as defined by the Secretary of Commerce) may redesignate by agreement a metropolitan planning organization when appropriate to carry out this section.

(B) A metropolitan planning organization shall be redesignated on request of one or more units of general local government representing at least 25 percent of the affected population (including the central city as defined by the Secretary of Commerce) in an urbanized area with a population of more than 5,000,000, but less than 10,000,000 or that is an extreme nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide (as defined in the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.)).

(C) A metropolitan planning organization shall be redesignated using procedures established to carry out this paragraph.

(6) This subsection does not affect the authority, under State law in effect on December 18, 1991, of a public authority with multimodal transportation responsibilities—

(A) to develop plans and programs for a metropolitan planning organization to adopt; and

(B) to develop long-range capital plans, coordinate mass transportation services and projects, and carry out other activities under State law.

(d) METROPOLITAN AREA BOUNDARIES.—To carry out this section, the metropolitan planning organization and the chief executive officer shall decide by agreement on the boundaries of a metropolitan area. The area shall cover at least the existing urbanized area and the contiguous area expected to become urbanized within the 20-year forecast period and may include the Metropolitan Statistical Area or Consolidated Metropolitan Statistical Area, as defined by the Secretary of Commerce. An area designated as an nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) shall include at least the boundaries of the nonattainment area, except as the chief executive officer and metropolitan planning organization otherwise agree.

(e) COORDINATION.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish requirements the Secretary considers appropriate to encourage chief executive officers and metropolitan planning organizations with responsibility for part of a multi-State metropolitan area to provide coordinated transportation planning for the entire area.

(2) Congress consents to at least 2 States making an agreement, not in conflict with a law of the United States, for cooperative efforts and mutual assistance in support of activities authorized under this section related to interstate areas and localities in the States and establishing authorities the States consider desirable for making the agreement effective.

(3) If more than one metropolitan planning organization has authority in a metropolitan area or an area designated a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), each organization shall consult with the other organizations designated for the area and the State to coordinate plans and projects required by this section and sections 5304–5306 of this title.

(f) DEVELOPING LONG-RANGE PLANS.—(1) Each metropolitan planning organization shall prepare and update periodically, according to a schedule the Secretary of Transportation decides is appropriate, a long-range plan for its metropolitan area under the requirements of this section. The plan shall be in the form the Secretary considers appropriate and at least shall—

(A) identify transportation facilities (including major roadways, mass transportation, and multimodal and intermodal facilities) that should function as an integrated metropolitan transportation system, emphasizing transportation facilities that serve important United States and regional transportation functions;

(B) include a financial plan that—

(i) demonstrates how the long-range plan can be carried out;

(ii) indicates resources from public and private sources reasonably expected to be made available to carry out the plan; and

(iii) recommends innovative financing techniques, including value capture, tolls, and congestion pricing, to finance needed projects and programs;

(C) assess capital investment and other measures necessary—

(i) to ensure the preservation of the existing metropolitan transportation system, including requirements for operational improvements, resurfacing, restoration, and rehabilitation of existing and future major roadways, and operations, maintenance, modernization, and rehabilitation of existing and future mass transportation facilities; and

(ii) to use existing transportation facilities most efficiently to relieve vehicular congestion and maximize the mobility of individuals and goods; and

(D) indicate appropriate proposed transportation enhancement activities.

(2) When formulating a long-range plan, the metropolitan planning organization shall consider the factors described in subsection (e) of this section as they are related to a 20-year forecast period.

(3) In a metropolitan area that is in a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), the metropolitan planning organization shall coordinate the development of the long-range plan with the development of the transportation control measures of the State Implementation Plan required by the Act.

(4) Before approving a long-range plan, each metropolitan planning organization shall provide citizens, affected public agencies, representatives of mass transportation authority employees, private providers of transportation, and other interested parties with a reasonable opportunity to comment on the plan in a way the Secretary of Transportation considers appropriate.

(5) A long-range plan shall be—

(A) made readily available for public review; and

(B) submitted for information purposes to the chief executive officer of the State at the time and in the way the Secretary of Transportation establishes.

(g) GRANTS.—Under criteria the Secretary of Transportation establishes, the Secretary may make contracts for, and grants to, States, local governmental authorities, and authorities of the States and governmental authorities, or may make agreements with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, to plan, engineer, design, and evaluate a mass transportation project and for other technical studies, including—

(1) studies related to management, operations, capital requirements, and economic feasibility;

(2) evaluating previously financed projects; and

(3) other similar and related activities preliminary to and in preparation for constructing, acquiring, or improving the operation of facilities and equipment.

(h) BALANCED AND COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING.—(1) To the extent practicable, the Secretary of Transportation shall ensure that amounts made available under section 5338(g)(1) of this title to carry out this section and sections 5304–5306 of this title are used to support balanced and comprehensive transportation planning that considers the relationships among land use and all transportation modes, without regard to the programmatic source of the planning amounts.

(2)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall apportion 80 percent of the amount made available under section 5338(g)(1) of this title to States in a ratio equal to the population in urbanized areas in each State divided by the total population in urbanized areas in all States, as shown by the latest available decennial census. A State may not receive less than .5 percent of the amount apportioned under this subparagraph.

(B) Amounts apportioned to a State under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall be allocated to metropolitan planning organizations in the State designated under this section under a formula—

(i) the State develops in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organizations;

(ii) the Secretary of Transportation approves; and

(iii) that considers population in urbanized areas and provides an appropriate distribution for urbanized areas to carry out the cooperative processes described in this section.

(C) A State shall make amounts available promptly to eligible metropolitan planning organizations according to procedures the Secretary of Transportation approves.

(3)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall apportion 20 percent of the amount made available under section 5338(g)(1) of this title to States to supplement allocations made under paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection for metropolitan planning organizations.

(B) Amounts under this paragraph shall be allocated under a formula that reflects the additional cost of carrying out planning, programming, and project selection responsibilities under this section and sections 5304–5306 of this title in those areas.

(4) To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary of Transportation shall ensure that no metropolitan planning organization is allocated less than the amount it received by administrative formula under this section in the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1991. To carry out this subsection, the Secretary may make a proportionate reduction in other amounts made available to carry out section 5338(g)(1) of this title.

(5) Amounts available for an activity under this subsection are for 80 percent of the cost of the activity unless the Secretary of Transportation decides it is in the interests of the Government not to require a State or local match.

(6) An amount apportioned under this subsection—

(A) remains available for 3 years after the fiscal year in which the amount is apportioned, and

(B) that is unobligated at the end of the 3-year period shall be reapportioned among the States for the next fiscal year.

§5304. Transportation improvement program

(a) DEVELOPMENT AND UPDATE.—In cooperation with the State and affected mass transportation operators, a metropolitan planning organization designated for a metropolitan area shall develop a transportation improvement program for the area. In developing the program, the organization shall provide citizens, affected public agencies, representatives of transportation authority employees, other affected employee representatives, private providers of transportation, and other interested parties with a reasonable opportunity to comment on the proposed program. The program shall be updated at least once every 2 years and shall be approved by the organization and the chief executive officer of the State.

(b) CONTENTS.—A transportation improvement program for a metropolitan area shall include—

(1) a priority list of projects and parts of projects to be carried out in each 3-year period after the program is adopted; and

(2) a financial plan that—

(A) demonstrates how the program can be carried out;

(B) indicates resources from public and private sources that reasonably are expected to be made available to carry out the plan; and

(C) recommends innovative financing techniques, including value capture, tolls, and congestion pricing, to finance needed projects.

(c) PROJECT SELECTION.—(1) Except as provided in section 5305(d)(1) of this title, the State, in cooperation with the metropolitan planning organization, shall select projects in a metropolitan area that involves United States Government participation. Selection shall comply with the transportation improvement program for the area.

(2) A transportation improvement program for a metropolitan area shall include—

(A) projects within the area that are proposed for financing under this chapter and title 23 and that are consistent with the long-range plan developed under section 5303(f) of this title; and

(B) a project or an identified phase of a project only if full financing reasonably can be anticipated to be available for the project in the period estimated for completion.

(d) NOTICE AND COMMENT.—Before approving a transportation improvement program, a metropolitan planning organization shall provide citizens, affected public agencies, representatives of transportation agency employees, private providers of transportation, and other interested parties with reasonable notice and an opportunity to comment on the proposed program.

(e) REGULATORY PROCEEDING.—Not later than June 18, 1992, the Secretary of Transportation shall begin a regulatory proceeding to conform review requirements for mass transportation projects under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) to comparable requirements under that Act applicable to highway projects. This section and sections 5303, 5305, and 5306 of this title do not affect the applicability of the Act to mass transportation or highway projects. A mass transportation project that has an approved draft Environmental Impact Statement is exempt from complying with requirements under the Act applicable to highway projects.

§5305. Transportation management areas

(a) DESIGNATION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall designate as a transportation management area—

(1) each urbanized area with a population of more than 200,000; and

(2) any other area, including the Lake Tahoe Basin as defined in the Act of December 19, 1980 (Public Law 96–551, 94 Stat. 3233), when requested by the chief executive officer and the metropolitan organization designated for the area or the affected local officials.

(b) TRANSPORTATION PLANS AND PROGRAMS.—Transportation plans and programs in a transportation management area shall be based on a continuing and comprehensive transportation planning process the metropolitan planning organization carries out in cooperation with the State and mass transportation operators.

(c) CONGESTION MANAGEMENT SYSTEM.—The transportation planning process under sections 5303, 5304, and 5306 of this title in a transportation management area shall include a congestion management system providing for effective management, through travel demand reduction and operational management strategies, of new and existing transportation facilities eligible for financing under this chapter and title 23. The Secretary shall establish a phase-in schedule to comply with sections 5303, 5304, and 5306.

(d) PROJECT SELECTION.—(1)(A) In consultation with the State, the metropolitan planning organization designated for a transportation management area shall select the projects to be carried out in the area with United States Government participation under this chapter or title 23, except projects of the National Highway System or under the Bridge and Interstate Maintenance programs.

(B) In cooperation with the metropolitan planning organization designated for a transportation management area, the State shall select the projects to be carried out in the area of the National Highway System or under the Bridge and Interstate Maintenance programs.

(2)(A) A selection under this subsection must comply with the transportation improvement program for the area.

(B) A selection under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection must comply with priorities established in the program.

(e) CERTIFICATION.—(1) At least once every 3 years, the Secretary shall ensure and certify that each metropolitan planning organization in each transportation management area is carrying out its responsibilities under applicable laws of the United States. The Secretary may make the certification only if the organization is complying with section 134 of title 23 and other applicable requirements of laws of the United States and the organization and chief executive officer have approved a transportation improvement program for the area.

(2) If the Secretary does not certify before October 1, 1993, that a metropolitan planning organization is carrying out its responsibilities, the Secretary may withhold any part of the apportionment under section 104(b)(3) of title 23 attributed to the relevant metropolitan area under section 133(d)(3) of title 23 and capital amounts apportioned under section 5336 of this title. If an organization remains uncertified for more than 2 consecutive years after September 30, 1994, 20 percent of that apportionment and capital amounts shall be withheld. The withheld apportionments shall be restored when the Secretary certifies the organization.

(3) The Secretary may not withhold certification based on the policies and criteria a metropolitan planning organization or mass transportation grant recipient establishes under section 5306(a) of this title for deciding the feasibility of private enterprise participation.

(f) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN NONATTAINMENT AREAS.—Government amounts may be made available for a mass transportation project resulting in a significant increase in carrying capacity for single occupant vehicles in a transportation management area classified as a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) only if the project is part of an approved congestion management system.

(g) AREAS NOT DESIGNATED TRANSPORTATION MANAGEMENT AREAS.—(1) The Secretary may provide for the development of abbreviated metropolitan transportation plans and programs the Secretary decides are appropriate to carry out this section and sections 5303, 5304, and 5306 of this title for metropolitan areas not designated transportation management areas under this section. The Secretary shall consider the complexity of transportation problems in those areas, including transportation-related air quality problems.

(2) The Secretary may not provide an abbreviated plan or program for a metropolitan area in a nonattainment area for ozone or carbon monoxide under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.).

§5306. Private enterprise participation in metropolitan planning and transportation improvement programs and relationship to other limitations

(a) PRIVATE ENTERPRISE PARTICIPATION.—A plan or program required by section 5303, 5304, or 5305 of this title shall encourage to the maximum extent feasible the participation of private enterprise. If equipment or a facility already being used in an urban area is to be acquired under this chapter, the program shall provide that it be improved so that it will better serve the transportation needs of the area.

(b) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LIMITATIONS.—Sections 5303–5305 of this title do not authorize—

(1) a metropolitan planning organization to impose a legal requirement on a transportation facility, provider, or project not eligible under this chapter or title 23; and

(2) intervention in the management of a transportation authority.

§5307. Block grants

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "associated capital maintenance items" means equipment, tires, tubes, and material, each costing at least .5 percent of the current fair market value of rolling stock comparable to the rolling stock for which the equipment, tires, tubes, and material are to be used.

(2) "designated recipient" means—

(A) a person designated, consistent with the planning process under sections 5303–5306 of this title, by the chief executive officer of a State, responsible local officials, and publicly owned operators of mass transportation to receive and apportion amounts under section 5336 of this title that are attributable to transportation management areas established under section 5305(a) of this title;

(B) a State or regional authority if the authority is responsible under the laws of a State for a capital project and for financing and directly providing mass transportation; or

(C) a recipient designated under section 5(b)(1) of the Federal Transit Act not later than January 5, 1983.

(b) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may make grants under this section for capital projects and to finance the planning, improvement, and operating costs of equipment, facilities, and associated capital maintenance items for use in mass transportation, including the renovation and improvement of historic transportation facilities with related private investment.

(2) In a transportation management area designated under section 5305(a) of this title, amounts that cannot be used to pay operating expenses under this section also are available for a highway project if—

(A) that use is approved by the metropolitan planning organization under section 5303 of this title after appropriate notice and an opportunity for comment and appeal is provided to affected mass transportation providers; and

(B) the Secretary decides the amounts are not needed for investment required by the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101 et seq.).

(3) A grant for a capital project under this section also is available to finance the leasing of equipment and facilities for use in mass transportation, subject to regulations the Secretary prescribes limiting the grant to leasing arrangements that are more cost effective than acquisition or construction.

(4) A project for the reconstruction of equipment and material, each of which after reconstruction will have a fair market value of at least .5 percent of the current fair market value of rolling stock comparable to the rolling stock for which the equipment and material will be used, is a capital project for an associated capital maintenance item under this section.

(5) Amounts under this section are available for a highway project under title 23 only if amounts used for the State or local share of the project are eligible to finance either a highway or mass transportation project.

(c) PUBLIC PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS.—Each recipient of a grant shall—

(1) make available to the public information on amounts available to the recipient under this section and the program of projects the recipient proposes to undertake;

(2) develop, in consultation with interested parties, including private transportation providers, a proposed program of projects for activities to be financed;

(3) publish a proposed program of projects in a way that affected citizens, private transportation providers, and local elected officials have the opportunity to examine the proposed program and submit comments on the proposed program and the performance of the recipient;

(4) provide an opportunity for a public hearing in which to obtain the views of citizens on the proposed program of projects;

(5) ensure that the proposed program of projects provides for the coordination of mass transportation services assisted under section 5336 of this title with transportation services assisted from other United States Government sources;

(6) consider comments and views received, especially those of private transportation providers, in preparing the final program of projects; and

(7) make the final program of projects available to the public.

(d) GRANT RECIPIENT REQUIREMENTS.—A recipient may receive a grant in a fiscal year only if—

(1) the recipient, within the time the Secretary prescribes, submits a final program of projects prepared under subsection (c) of this section and a certification for that fiscal year that the recipient (including a person receiving amounts from a chief executive officer of a State under this section)—

(A) has or will have the legal, financial, and technical capacity to carry out the program;

(B) has or will have satisfactory continuing control over the use of equipment and facilities;

(C) will maintain equipment and facilities;

(D) will ensure that elderly and handicapped individuals, or an individual presenting a medicare card issued to that individual under title II or XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401 et seq., 1395 et seq.), will be charged during non-peak hours for transportation using or involving a facility or equipment of a project financed under this chapter not more than 50 percent of the peak hour fare;

(E) in carrying out a procurement under this section—

(i) will use competitive procurement (as defined or approved by the Secretary);

(ii) will not use a procurement that uses exclusionary or discriminatory specifications; and

(iii) will comply with applicable Buy-American laws in carrying out a procurement;

(F) has complied with subsection (c) of this section;

(G) has available and will provide the required amounts as provided by subsection (e) of this section;

(H) will comply with sections 5301(a) and (d), 5303–5306, and 5310(a)–(d) of this title;

(I) has a locally developed process to solicit and consider public comment before raising a fare or carrying out a major reduction of transportation; and

(J)(i) will expend for each fiscal year for mass transportation security projects, including increased lighting in or adjacent to a mass transportation system (including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, and garages), increased camera surveillance of an area in or adjacent to that system, providing an emergency telephone line to contact law enforcement or security personnel in an area in or adjacent to that system, and any other project intended to increase the security and safety of an existing or planned mass transportation system, at least one percent of the amount the recipient receives for each fiscal year under section 5336 of this title; or

(ii) has decided that the expenditure for security projects is not necessary; and

(2) the Secretary accepts the certification.

(e) GOVERNMENT'S SHARE OF COSTS.—A grant of the Government for a capital project (including associated capital maintenance items) under this section is for 80 percent of the net project cost of the project. A recipient may provide additional local matching amounts. A grant for operating expenses may not be more than 50 percent of the net project cost of the project. The remainder of the net project cost shall be provided in cash from sources other than amounts of the Government or revenues from providing mass transportation (excluding revenues derived from the sale of advertising and concessions that are more than the amount of those revenues in the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1985). Transit system amounts that make up the remainder shall be from an undistributed cash surplus, a replacement or depreciation cash fund or reserve, or new capital.

(f) STATEWIDE OPERATING ASSISTANCE.—(1) A State authority that is a designated recipient and providing mass transportation in at least 2 urbanized areas may apply for operating assistance in an amount not more than the amount for all urbanized areas in which it provides transportation.

(2) When approving an application under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary may not reduce the amount of operating assistance approved for another State or a local transportation authority within the affected urbanized areas.

(g) UNDERTAKING PROJECTS IN ADVANCE.—(1) When a recipient obligates all amounts apportioned to it under section 5336 of this title and then carries out a part of a project described in this section (except a project for operating expenses) without amounts of the Government and according to all applicable procedures and requirements (except to the extent the procedures and requirements limit a State to carrying out a project with amounts of the Government previously apportioned to it), the Secretary may pay to the recipient the Government's share of the cost of carrying out that part when additional amounts are apportioned to the recipient under section 5336 if—

(A) the recipient applies for the payment;

(B) the Secretary approves the payment; and

(C) before carrying out that part, the Secretary approves the plans and specifications for the part in the same way as for other projects under this section.

(2) The Secretary may approve an application under paragraph (1) of this subsection only if an authorization for this section is in effect for the fiscal year to which the application applies. The Secretary may not approve an application if the payment will be more than—

(A) the recipient's expected apportionment under section 5336 of this title if the total amount authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year to carry out this section is appropriated; less

(B) the maximum amount of the apportionment that may be made available for projects for operating expenses under this section.

(3) The cost of carrying out that part of a project includes the amount of interest earned and payable on bonds issued by the recipient to the extent proceeds of the bonds are expended in carrying out the part. However, the amount of interest allowed under this paragraph may not be more than the amount by which the estimated cost of carrying out the part (if it would be carried out at the time the part is converted to a regularly financed project) exceeds the actual cost (except interest) of carrying out the part.

(4) The Secretary shall consider changes in capital project cost indices when determining the estimated cost under paragraph (3) of this subsection.

(h) STREAMLINED ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall prescribe streamlined administrative procedures for complying with the certification requirement under subsection (d)(1)(B) and (C) of this section for track and signal equipment used in existing operations.

(i) REVIEWS, AUDITS, AND EVALUATIONS.—(1)(A) At least annually, the Secretary shall carry out, or require a recipient to have carried out independently, reviews and audits the Secretary considers appropriate to establish whether the recipient has carried out—

(i) the activities proposed under subsection (d) of this section in a timely and effective way and can continue to do so; and

(ii) those activities and its certifications and has used amounts of the Government in the way required by law.

(B) An audit of the use of amounts of the Government shall comply with the auditing procedures of the Comptroller General.

(2) At least once every 3 years, the Secretary shall review and evaluate completely the performance of a recipient in carrying out the recipient's program, specifically referring to compliance with statutory and administrative requirements and the extent to which actual program activities are consistent with the activities proposed under subsection (d) of this section and the planning process required under sections 5303–5306 of this title.

(3) The Secretary may take appropriate action consistent with a review, audit, and evaluation under this subsection, including making an appropriate adjustment in the amount of a grant or withdrawing the grant.

(j) REPORTS.—A recipient (including a person receiving amounts from a chief executive officer of a State under this section) shall submit annually to the Secretary a report on the revenues the recipient derives from the sale of advertising and concessions.

(k) SUBMISSION OF CERTIFICATIONS.—A certification under subsection (d) of this section and any additional certification required by law to be submitted to the Secretary may be consolidated into a single document to be submitted annually as part of the grant application under this section. The Secretary shall publish annually a list of all certifications required under this chapter with the publication required under section 5336(e)(2) of this title.

(l) Procurement System Approval.—A recipient may request the Secretary to approve its procurement system. The Secretary shall approve the system for use for procurements financed under section 5336 of this title if, after consulting with the Administrator for Federal Procurement Policy, the Secretary decides the system provides for competitive procurement. Approval of a system under this subsection does not relieve a recipient of the duty to certify under subsection (d)(1)(E) of this section.

(m) Operating Ferries Outside Urbanized Areas.—A vessel used in ferryboat operations financed under section 5336 of this title that is part of a State-operated ferry system may be operated occasionally outside the urbanized area in which service is provided to accommodate periodic maintenance if existing ferry service is not reduced significantly by operating outside the area.

(n) Relationship to Other Laws.—(1) Section 1001 of title 18 applies to a certificate or submission under this section. The Secretary may end a grant under this section and seek reimbursement, directly or by offsetting amounts available under section 5336 of this title, when a false or fraudulent statement or related act within the meaning of section 1001 is made in connection with a certification or submission.

(2) Sections 5302, 5318, 5323(a)(1), (d), and (f), 5332, and 5333 of this title apply to this section and to a grant made under this section. Except as provided in this section, no other provision of this chapter applies to this section or to a grant made under this section.

§5308. Mass Transit Account block grants

(a) General Authority.—The Secretary of Transportation may make grants under this section to be used only for capital projects (including capital maintenance items).

(b) Application of Other Sections.—(1) Sections 5307(a)–(d), (h)–(l), and (n) and 5336(a)–(c), (f), (g), and (j) of this title apply to amounts made available under section 5338(a) of this title to carry out this section.

(2) Sections 5307(e) and 5336(d) of this title apply to grants under this section.

§5309. Discretionary grants and loans

(a) General Authority.—The Secretary of Transportation may make grants and loans under this section to assist State and local governmental authorities in financing—

(1) capital projects for new fixed guideway systems, and extensions to existing fixed guideway systems, including the acquisition of real property, the initial acquisition of rolling stock for the systems, alternatives analysis related to the development of the systems, and the acquisition of rights of way, and relocation, for fixed guideway corridor development for projects in the advanced stages of alternatives analysis or preliminary engineering;

(2) capital projects, including property and improvements (except public highways other than fixed guideway facilities), needed for an efficient and coordinated mass transportation system;

(3) the capital costs of coordinating mass transportation with other transportation;

(4) the introduction of new technology, through innovative and improved products, into mass transportation;

(5) transportation projects that enhance urban economic development or incorporate private investment, including commercial and residential development, because the projects—

(A) enhance the effectiveness of a mass transportation project and are related physically or functionally to that mass transportation project; or

(B) establish new or enhanced coordination between mass transportation and other transportation;

(6) mass transportation projects planned, designed, and carried out to meet the special needs of elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities; and

(7) the development of corridors to support fixed guideway systems, including protecting rights of way through acquisition, construction of dedicated bus and high occupancy vehicle lanes and park and ride lots, and other nonvehicular capital improvements that the Secretary may decide would result in increased mass transportation usage in the corridor.

(b) Loans for Real Property Interests.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may make loans under this section to State and local governmental authorities to acquire interests in real property for use on urban mass transportation systems as rights of way, station sites, and related purposes, including reconstruction, renovation, the net cost of property management, and relocation payments made under section 5324(a) of this title.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may make a loan under paragraph (1) of this subsection for an approved project only after finding that the property reasonably is expected to be required for a mass transportation system and that it will be used for that system within a reasonable time.

(3) An applicant for a loan under this subsection shall provide a copy of the application to the planning agency for the community affected by the project at the same time the application is submitted to the Secretary of Transportation. If the planning agency submits comments to the Secretary not later than 30 days after the application is submitted, or, if the agency requests more time within those 30 days, within a period the Secretary establishes, the Secretary shall consider those comments before taking final action on the application.

(4) A loan agreement under this subsection shall provide that a capital project on the property will be started not later than 10 years after the fiscal year in which the agreement is made. If an interest in property acquired under this subsection is not used for the purpose for which it was acquired, an appraisal of the current value of the property or interest shall be made when a decision is made about the use. The decision shall be made within the 10-year period. Two-thirds of the increase in value shall be paid to the Secretary of Transportation for deposit in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(5) A loan under this subsection must be repaid not later than 10 years after the date of the loan agreement or on the date a grant agreement for a capital project on the property is made, whichever is earlier. Payments made to repay the loan shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(c) Consideration of Decreased Commuter Rail Transportation.—The Secretary of Transportation shall consider the adverse effect of decreased commuter rail transportation when deciding whether to approve a grant or loan under this section to acquire a rail line and all related facilities—

(1) owned by a rail carrier subject to reorganization under title 11; and

(2) used to provide commuter rail transportation.

(d) Project as Part of Approved Program of Projects.—Except as provided in subsections (b)(2) and (e) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation may approve a grant or loan for a project under this section only after finding that the project is part of the approved program of projects required under sections 5303–5306 of this title and that an applicant—

(1) has or will have the legal, financial, and technical capacity to carry out the project, satisfactory continuing control over the use of equipment or facilities, and the capability to maintain the equipment or facilities; and

(2) will maintain the equipment or facilities.

(e) Criteria for Grants and Loans for Fixed Guideway Systems.—(1) This subsection applies to a project—

(A) for which a letter of intent or contract for the complete amount is issued under subsection (g) of this section after April 1, 1987; or

(B) not in the preliminary engineering, final design, or construction stage on January 1, 1987.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may approve a grant or loan under this section for a capital project for a new fixed guideway system or extension of an existing fixed guideway system only if the Secretary decides that the proposed project is—

(A) based on the results of an alternatives analysis and preliminary engineering;

(B) justified based on a comprehensive review of its mobility improvements, environmental benefits, cost effectiveness, and operating efficiencies; and

(C) supported by an acceptable degree of local financial commitment, including evidence of stable and dependable financing sources to construct, maintain, and operate the system or extension.

(3) In making a decision under paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(A) consider the direct and indirect costs of relevant alternatives;

(B) account for costs related to factors such as congestion relief, improved mobility, air pollution, noise pollution, congestion, energy consumption, and all associated ancillary and mitigation costs necessary to carry out each alternative analyzed;

(C) identify and consider mass transportation supportive existing land use policies and future patterns;

(D) consider the degree to which the project increases the mobility of the mass transportation dependent population or promotes economic development; and

(E) consider other factors the Secretary considers appropriate to carry out this chapter.

(4)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall issue guidelines on how the Secretary will evaluate results of alternatives analysis, project justification, and the degree of local financial commitment.

(B) The project justification under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection shall be adjusted to reflect differences in local land, construction, and operating costs.

(C) The degree of local financial commitment is acceptable only if—

(i) the proposed project plan provides for the availability of contingency amounts the Secretary of Transportation determines to be reasonable to cover unanticipated cost overruns;

(ii) each proposed local source of capital and operating financing is stable, reliable, and available within the proposed project timetable; and

(iii) local resources are available to operate the overall proposed mass transportation system (including essential feeder bus and other services necessary to achieve the projected ridership levels) without requiring a reduction in existing mass transportation services to operate the proposed project.

(D) In assessing the stability, reliability, and availability of proposed sources of local financing, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider—

(i) existing grant commitments;

(ii) the degree to which financing sources are dedicated to the purposes proposed; and

(iii) any debt obligation that exists or is proposed by the recipient for the proposed project or other mass transportation purpose.

(5) A proposed project may advance from alternatives analysis to preliminary engineering only if the Secretary of Transportation finds that the project meets the requirements of this section and there is a reasonable chance that the project will continue to meet the requirements at the end of preliminary engineering.

(6)(A) A new fixed guideway system or extension of an existing fixed guideway system is not subject to the requirements of this subsection, and the simultaneous evaluation of similar projects in at least 2 corridors in a metropolitan area may not be limited, if—

(i) the project is located in an extreme or severe nonattainment area and is a transportation control measure (as defined by the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.)) required to carry out an approved State Implementation Plan; or

(ii) assistance provided under this section is less than $25,000,000 or one-third of the total cost of the project or an appropriate program of projects as decided by the Secretary of Transportation.

(B) The simultaneous evaluation of projects in at least 2 corridors in a metropolitan area may not be limited and the Secretary of Transportation shall make decisions under this subsection with expedited procedures that will promote carrying out an approved State Implementation Plan in a timely way if a project is—

(i) located in a nonattainment area that is not an extreme or severe nonattainment area;

(ii) a transportation control measure (as defined by the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.)); and

(iii) required to carry out the State Implementation Plan.

(C) This subsection does not apply to a part of a project (including a commuter rail transportation project on an existing right of way) financed completely with amounts for highways made available under part A of title I of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240, 105 Stat. 1915).

(7) A project financed under this subsection shall be carried out through a full financing grant agreement.

(f) Required Payments and Eligible Costs of Projects That Enhance Urban Economic Development or Incorporate Private Investment.—(1) Each grant or loan under subsection (a)(5) of this section shall require that a person making an agreement to occupy space in a facility pay a reasonable share of the costs of the facility through rental payments and other means.

(2) Eligible costs for a project under subsection (a)(5) of this section—

(A) include property acquisition, demolition of existing structures, site preparation, utilities, building foundations, walkways, open space, and a capital project for, and improving, equipment or a facility for an intermodal transfer facility or transportation mall; but

(B) do not include construction of a commercial revenue-producing facility or a part of a public facility not related to mass transportation.

(g) Letters of Intent, Full Financing Grant Agreements, and Early Systems Work Agreements.—(1)(A) The Secretary of Transportation may issue a letter of intent to an applicant announcing an intention to obligate, for a project under this section, an amount from future available budget authority specified in law that is not more than the amount stipulated as the financial participation of the Secretary in the project. The amount shall be sufficient to complete at least an operable segment when a letter is issued for a fixed guideway project.

(B) At least 30 days before issuing a letter under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the Secretary of Transportation shall notify in writing the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate of the proposed issuance of the letter.

(C) The issuance of a letter is deemed not to be an obligation under sections 1108(c) and (d), 1501, and 1502(a) of title 31 or an administrative commitment.

(D) An obligation or administrative commitment may be made only when amounts are appropriated.

(2)(A) The Secretary of Transportation may make a full financing grant agreement with an applicant. The agreement shall—

(i) establish the terms of participation by the United States Government in a project under this section;

(ii) establish the maximum amount of Government financial assistance for the project;

(iii) cover the period of time for completing the project, including a period extending beyond the period of an authorization; and

(iv) make timely and efficient management of the project easier according to the law of the United States.

(B) An agreement under this paragraph obligates an amount of available budget authority specified in law and may include a commitment, contingent on amounts to be specified in law in advance for commitments under this paragraph, to obligate an additional amount from future available budget authority specified in law. The agreement shall state that the contingent commitment is not an obligation of the Government. Interest and other financing costs of efficiently carrying out a part of the project within a reasonable time are a cost of carrying out the project under a full financing grant agreement, except that eligible costs may not be more than the cost of the most favorable financing terms reasonably available for the project at the time of borrowing. The applicant shall certify, in a way satisfactory to the Secretary of Transportation, that the applicant has shown reasonable diligence in seeking the most favorable financing terms. The amount stipulated in an agreement under this paragraph for a fixed guideway project shall be sufficient to complete at least an operable segment.

(3)(A) The Secretary of Transportation may make an early systems work agreement with an applicant if a record of decision under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) has been issued on the project and the Secretary finds there is reason to believe—

(i) a full financing grant agreement for the project will be made; and

(ii) the terms of the work agreement will promote ultimate completion of the project more rapidly and at less cost.

(B) A work agreement under this paragraph obligates an amount of available budget authority specified in law and shall provide for reimbursement of preliminary costs of carrying out the project, including land acquisition, timely procurement of system elements for which specifications are decided, and other activities the Secretary of Transportation decides are appropriate to make efficient, long-term project management easier. A work agreement shall cover the period of time the Secretary considers appropriate. The period may extend beyond the period of current authorization. Interest and other financing costs of efficiently carrying out the work agreement within a reasonable time are a cost of carrying out the agreement, except that eligible costs may not be more than the cost of the most favorable financing terms reasonably available for the project at the time of borrowing. The applicant shall certify, in a way satisfactory to the Secretary, that the applicant has shown reasonable diligence in seeking the most favorable financing terms. If an applicant does not carry out the project for reasons within the control of the applicant, the applicant shall repay all Government payments made under the work agreement plus reasonable interest and penalty charges the Secretary establishes in the agreement.

(4) The total estimated amount of future obligations of the Government and contingent commitments to incur obligations covered by all outstanding letters of intent, full financing grant agreements, and early systems work agreements may be not more than the greater of the amount authorized under section 5338(a) of this title to carry out this section or 50 percent of the uncommitted cash balance remaining in the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund (including amounts received from taxes and interest earned that are more than amounts previously obligated), less an amount the Secretary of Transportation reasonably estimates is necessary for grants under this section not covered by a letter. The total amount covered by new letters and contingent commitments included in full financing grant agreements and early systems work agreements may be not more than a limitation specified in law.

(h) Government's Share of Net Project Cost.—Based on engineering studies, studies of economic feasibility, and information on the expected use of equipment or facilities, the Secretary of Transportation shall estimate the net project cost. A grant for the project is for 80 percent of the net project cost, unless the grant recipient requests a lower grant percentage. The remainder shall be provided in cash from a source other than amounts of the Government. Transit system amounts that make up the remainder must be from an undistributed cash surplus, a replacement or depreciation cash fund or reserve, or new capital. The remainder for a planned extension to a fixed guideway system may include the cost of rolling stock previously purchased if the applicant satisfies the Secretary that only amounts other than amounts of the Government were used and that the purchase was made for use on the extension. A refund or reduction of the remainder may be made only if a refund of a proportional amount of the grant of the Government is made at the same time.

(i) Loan Term Requirements.—Except for a loan under subsection (b) of this section, a loan, including a renewal or extension of the loan, may be made, and a security or obligation may be bought, only if it has a maturity date of not more than 40 years. Interest on a loan may not be less than—

(1) a rate the Secretary of the Treasury establishes, considering the current average yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the Government that have remaining periods of maturity comparable to the average maturity of the loan, adjusted to the nearest .125 percent; plus

(2) an allowance the Secretary of Transportation considers adequate to cover administrative costs and probable losses.

(j) Loan Payment Forgiveness.—A grant agreement for a capital project may forgive repaying the loan and interest in place of a cash grant for the amount forgiven. The amount is part of the grant and part of the contribution of the Government to the cost of the project.

(k) Limitation on Making Loans and Grants for Projects.—The Secretary of Transportation may not make a loan under this section for a project for which a grant (except a relocation payment grant) is made under this section. However, the Secretary may make a project grant even though real property for the project has been or will be acquired through a loan under subsection (b) of this section.

(l) Fiscal Capacity Considerations.—If the Secretary of Transportation gives priority consideration to financing projects that include more than the non-Government share required under subsection (h) of this section, the Secretary shall give equal consideration to differences in the fiscal capacity of State and local governments.

(m) ALLOCATING AMOUNTS.—(1) Of the amounts available for grants and loans under this section for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1993–1997—

(A) 40 percent is available for fixed guideway modernization;

(B) 40 percent is available for capital projects for new fixed guideway systems and extensions to existing fixed guideway systems; and

(C) 20 percent is available to replace, rehabilitate, and buy buses and related equipment and to construct bus-related facilities.

(2) At least 5.5 percent of the amounts available in each fiscal year under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection is available for areas other than urbanized areas.

(3) Not later than January 20 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate a proposal on the allocation of amounts to be made available to finance grants and loans for capital projects for new fixed guideway systems and extensions to existing fixed guideway systems among applicants for those amounts.

(4) A person applying for, or receiving, assistance for a project described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (1) of this subsection may receive assistance for a project described in another of those clauses.

(n) UNDERTAKING PROJECTS IN ADVANCE.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may pay the Government's share of the net project cost to a State or local governmental authority that carries out any part of a project described in this section or a substitute transit project described in section 103(e)(4) of title 23 without the aid of amounts of the Government and according to all applicable procedures and requirements if—

(A) the State or local governmental authority applies for the payment;

(B) the Secretary approves the payment; and

(C) before carrying out the part of the project, the Secretary approves the plans and specifications for the part in the same way as other projects under this section or section 103(e)(4) of title 23.

(A) at least $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992, for grants under subsection (c)(2) of this section.

(B) at least $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, for the United States Government share of the costs (as determined under section 5309 of this title) if the systems planning, alternatives analysis, preliminary engineering, and design and environmental impact statement are required by law for the project.

(C) at least $30,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1994, as provided in the grant agreement under subsection (e) of this section, for the Government share of the construction costs of the project.

(2) The grant agreement under subsection (e) of this section shall provide that for the 3d year of revenue operations of the project, the Secretary shall pay from amounts provided under this section the Government share of operating costs in an amount equal to the lesser of 50 percent of the deficit incurred in operating the project in that year or $300,000.

(3) Amounts not expended under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection are available for the Government share of costs described in paragraph (1)(B) and (C) of this subsection.

(4) Amounts under paragraph (1)(B) and (C) of this subsection remain available until expended.

(i) Government's Share of Costs.—The Government share of the cost of constructing the project is 80 percent of the net cost of the project.

(j) Project Not Subject to Major Capital Investment Policy.—The project is not subject to the major capital investment policy of the Federal Transit Administration.

(k) Report.—Not later than January 30, 1993, and each year after that date, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the progress and results of the project.

§5321. Crime prevention and security

The Secretary of Transportation may make capital grants from amounts available under section 5338 of this title to mass transportation systems for crime prevention and security. This chapter does not prevent the financing of a project under this section when a local governmental authority other than the grant applicant has law enforcement responsibilities.

§5322. Human resource programs

The Secretary of Transportation may undertake, or make grants and contracts for, programs that address human resource needs as they apply to mass transportation activities. A program may include—

(1) an employment training program;

(2) an outreach program to increase minority and female employment in mass transportation activities;

(3) research on mass transportation personnel and training needs; and

(4) training and assistance for minority business opportunities.

§5323. General provisions on assistance

(a) Interests in Property.—(1) Financial assistance provided under this chapter to a State or a local governmental authority may be used to acquire an interest in, or buy property of, a private mass transportation company, for a capital project for property acquired from a private mass transportation company after July 9, 1964, or to operate mass transportation equipment or a mass transportation facility in competition with, or in addition to, transportation service provided by an existing mass transportation company, only if—

(A) the Secretary of Transportation finds the assistance is essential to a program of projects required under sections 5303–5306 of this title;

(B) the Secretary of Transportation finds that the program, to the maximum extent feasible, provides for the participation of private mass transportation companies;

(C) just compensation under State or local law will be paid to the company for its franchise or property; and

(D) the Secretary of Labor certifies that the assistance complies with section 5333(b) of this title.

(2) A governmental authority may not use financial assistance of the United States Government to acquire land, equipment, or a facility used in mass transportation from another governmental authority in the same geographic area.

(b) Notice and Public Hearing.—(1) An application for a grant or loan under this chapter (except section 5307) for a capital project that will affect substantially a community, or the mass transportation service of a community, must include a certificate of the applicant that the applicant has—

(A) provided an adequate opportunity for a public hearing with adequate prior notice;

(B) held that hearing unless no one with a significant economic, social, or environmental interest requested one;

(C) considered the economic, social, and environmental effects of the project; and

(D) found that the project is consistent with official plans for developing the urban area.

(2) Notice of a hearing under this subsection shall include a concise description of the proposed project and shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the geographic area the project will serve. If a hearing is held, a copy of the transcript of the hearing shall be submitted with the application.

(c) Acquiring New Bus Models.—Amounts appropriated or made available under this chapter (except section 5307) after September 30, 1989, may be obligated or expended to acquire a new bus model only if a bus of the model has been tested at the facility established under section 5318 of this title.

(d) Buying and Operating Buses.—(1) Financial assistance under this chapter may be used to buy or operate a bus only if the applicant, governmental authority, or publicly owned operator that receives the assistance agrees that, except as provided in the agreement, the governmental authority or an operator of mass transportation for the governmental authority will not provide charter bus transportation service outside the urban area in which it provides regularly scheduled mass transportation service. An agreement shall provide for a fair arrangement the Secretary of Transportation considers appropriate to ensure that the assistance will not enable a governmental authority or an operator for a governmental authority to foreclose a private operator from providing intercity charter bus service if the private operator can provide the service.

(2) On receiving a complaint about a violation of an agreement, the Secretary of Transportation shall investigate and decide whether a violation has occurred. If the Secretary decides that a violation has occurred, the Secretary shall correct the violation under terms of the agreement. In addition to a remedy specified in the agreement, the Secretary may bar a recipient under this subsection or an operator from receiving further assistance when the Secretary finds a continuing pattern of violations of the agreement.

(e) Bus Passenger Seat Functional Specifications.—The initial advertising by a State or local governmental authority for bids to acquire buses using financial assistance under this chapter (except section 5307) may include passenger seat functional specifications that are at least equal to performance specifications the Secretary of Transportation prescribes. The specifications shall be based on a finding by the State or local governmental authority of local requirements for safety, comfort, maintenance, and life cycle costs.

(f) Schoolbus Transportation.—(1) Financial assistance under this chapter may be used for a capital project, or to operate mass transportation equipment or a mass transportation facility, only if the applicant agrees not to provide schoolbus transportation that exclusively transports students and school personnel in competition with a private schoolbus operator. This subsection does not apply—

(A) to an applicant that operates a school system in the area to be served and a separate and exclusive schoolbus program for the school system;

(B) unless a private schoolbus operator can provide adequate transportation that complies with applicable safety standards at reasonable rates; and

(C) to a State or local governmental authority if it or a direct predecessor in interest from which it acquired the duty of transporting school children and personnel, and facilities to transport them, provided schoolbus transportation at any time after November 25, 1973, but before November 26, 1974.

(2) An applicant violating an agreement under this subsection may not receive other financial assistance under this chapter.

(g) Buying Buses Under Other Laws.—Subsections (d) and (f) of this section apply to financial assistance to buy a bus under sections 103(e)(4) and 142(a) or (c) of title 23. However, subsection (f)(1)(C) of this section applies to sections 103(e)(4) and 142(a) or (c) only if schoolbus transportation was provided at any time after August 12, 1972, but before August 13, 1973.

(h) Grant and Loan Prohibitions.—A grant or loan may not be used to—

(1) pay ordinary governmental or nonproject operating expenses; or

(2) support a procurement that uses an exclusionary or discriminatory specification.

(i) Government's Share of Costs for Certain Projects.—A Government grant for a project to be assisted under this chapter that involves acquiring vehicle-related equipment required by the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) or the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101 et seq.) is for 90 percent of the net project cost of the equipment that is attributable to complying with those Acts. The Secretary of Transportation, through practicable administrative procedures, may determine the costs attributable to that equipment.

(j) Buy American.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may obligate an amount that may be appropriated to carry out this chapter for a project only if the steel, iron, and manufactured goods used in the project are produced in the United States.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may waive paragraph (1) of this subsection if the Secretary finds that—

(A) applying paragraph (1) would be inconsistent with the public interest;

(B) the steel, iron, and goods produced in the United States are not produced in a sufficient and reasonably available amount or are not of a satisfactory quality;

(C) when procuring rolling stock (including train control, communication, and traction power equipment) under this chapter—

(i) the cost of components and subcomponents produced in the United States is more than 60 percent of the cost of all components of the rolling stock; and

(ii) final assembly of the rolling stock has occurred in the United States; or

(D) including domestic material will increase the cost of the overall project by more than 25 percent.

(3) In this subsection, labor costs involved in final assembly are not included in calculating the cost of components.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation may not make a waiver under paragraph (2) of this subsection for goods produced in a foreign country if the Secretary, in consultation with the United States Trade Representative, decides that the government of that foreign country—

(A) has an agreement with the United States Government under which the Secretary has waived the requirement of this subsection; and

(B) has violated the agreement by discriminating against goods to which this subsection applies that are produced in the United States and to which the agreement applies.

(5) A person is ineligible under subpart 9.4 of chapter 1 of title 48, Code of Federal Regulations, to receive a contract or subcontract made with amounts authorized under the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240, 105 Stat. 1914) if a court or department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government decides the person intentionally—

(A) affixed a "Made in America" label, or a label with an inscription having the same meaning, to goods sold in or shipped to the United States that are used in a project to which this subsection applies but not produced in the United States; or

(B) represented that goods described in clause (A) of this paragraph were produced in the United States.

(6) The Secretary of Transportation may not impose any limitation on assistance provided under this chapter that restricts a State from imposing more stringent requirements than this subsection on the use of articles, materials, and supplies mined, produced, or manufactured in foreign countries in projects carried out with that assistance or restricts a recipient of that assistance from complying with those State-imposed requirements.

(7) Not later than January 1, 1995, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on purchases from foreign entities waived under paragraph (2) of this subsection in the fiscal years ending September 30, 1992, and September 30, 1993. The report shall indicate the dollar value of items for which waivers were granted.

(k) APPLICATION OF SECTION 135 OF TITLE 23.—The planning and programming requirements of section 135 of title 23 apply to a grant made under sections 5307–5311 of this title.

§5324. Limitations on discretionary and special needs grants and loans

(a) RELOCATION PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—Financial assistance may be provided under section 5309 of this title only if the Secretary of Transportation decides that—

(1) an adequate relocation program is being carried out for families displaced by a project; and

(2) an equal number of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings are being, or will be, provided to those families in the same area or in another area generally not less desirable for public utilities and public and commercial facilities, at rents or prices within the financial means of those families, and with reasonable access to their places of employment.

(b) ECONOMIC, SOCIAL, AND ENVIRONMENTAL INTERESTS.—(1) In carrying out section 5301(e) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation shall cooperate and consult with the Secretaries of Agriculture, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, and the Interior and the Council on Environmental Quality on each project that may have a substantial impact on the environment.

(2) In carrying out section 5309 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation shall review each transcript of a hearing submitted under section 5323(b) of this title to establish that an adequate opportunity to present views was given to all parties with a significant economic, social, or environmental interest and that the project application includes a statement on—

(A) the environmental impact of the proposal;

(B) adverse environmental effects that cannot be avoided;

(C) alternatives to the proposal; and

(D) irreversible and irretrievable impacts on the environment.

(3)(A) The Secretary of Transportation may approve an application for financial assistance under section 5309 of this title only if the Secretary makes written findings, after reviewing the application and any hearings held before a State or local governmental authority under section 5323(b) of this title, that—

(i) an adequate opportunity to present views was given to all parties with a significant economic, social, or environmental interest;

(ii) the preservation and enhancement of the environment, and the interest of the community in which a project is located, were considered; and

(iii) no adverse environmental effect is likely to result from the project, or no feasible and prudent alternative to the effect exists and all reasonable steps have been taken to minimize the effect.

(B) If a hearing has not been conducted or the Secretary of Transportation decides that the record of the hearing is inadequate for making the findings required by this subsection, the Secretary shall conduct a hearing on an environmental issue raised by the application after giving adequate notice to interested persons.

(C) A finding of the Secretary of Transportation under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall be made a matter of public record.

(c) PROHIBITIONS AGAINST REGULATING OPERATIONS AND CHARGES.—The Secretary of Transportation may not regulate the operation of a mass transportation system for which a grant is made under section 5309 of this title and, after a grant is made, may not regulate any charge for the system. However, the Secretary may require the local governmental authority, corporation, or association to comply with any undertaking provided by it related to its grant application.

§5325. Contract requirements

(a) NONCOMPETITIVE BIDDING.—A capital project or improvement contract for which a grant or loan is made under this chapter, if the contract is not made through competitive bidding, shall provide that records related to the contract shall be made available to the Secretary of Transportation and the Comptroller General, or an officer or employee of the Secretary or Comptroller General, when conducting an audit and inspection.

(b) ACQUIRING ROLLING STOCK.—A recipient of financial assistance of the United States Government under this chapter may make a contract to expend that assistance to acquire rolling stock—

(1) based on—

(A) initial capital costs; or

(B) performance, standardization, life cycle costs, and other factors; or

(2) with a party selected through a competitive procurement process.

(c) PROCURING ASSOCIATED CAPITAL MAINTENANCE ITEMS.—A recipient of a grant under section 5307 of this title procuring an associated capital maintenance item under section 5307(b) may make a contract directly with the original manufacturer or supplier of the item to be replaced, without receiving prior approval of the Secretary, if the recipient first certifies in writing to the Secretary that—

(1) the manufacturer or supplier is the only source for the item; and

(2) the price of the item is no more than the price similar customers pay for the item.

(d) MANAGEMENT, ARCHITECTURAL, AND ENGINEERING CONTRACTS.—A contract for program management, construction management, a feasibility study, and preliminary engineering, design, architectural, engineering, surveying, mapping, or related services for a project for which a grant or loan is made under this chapter shall be awarded in the same way as a contract for architectural and engineering services is negotiated under title IX of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 541 et seq.) or an equivalent qualifications-based requirement of a State. This subsection does not apply to the extent a State has adopted or adopts by law a formal procedure for procuring those services.

§5326. Special procurements

(a) TURNKEY SYSTEM PROJECTS.—(1) In this subsection, "turnkey system project" means a project under which a recipient makes a contract with a seller, firm, or consortium of firms to construct a mass transportation system that meets specific performance criteria and that the seller operates for a period of time.

(2) To advance new technologies and lower the cost of a capital project for a new mass transportation system, the Secretary of Transportation shall allow solicitation for a turnkey system project to be financed under this chapter to be awarded conditionally before United States Government requirements have been met on the project if the award is made without prejudice to carrying out those requirements. Government financial assistance under this chapter may be made available for the project after the recipient complies with Government requirements.

(3) To develop regulations applying generally to turnkey system projects, the Secretary may approve at least 2 projects for an initial demonstration phase. The results of the demonstration projects (and other projects using this procurement method on December 18, 1991) shall be considered in developing guidelines to carry out this subsection.

(b) MULTIYEAR ROLLING STOCK.—(1) A recipient procuring rolling stock with Government financial assistance under this chapter may make a multiyear contract to buy the rolling stock and replacement parts under which the recipient has an option to buy additional rolling stock or replacement parts for not more than 5 years after the date of the original contract.

(2) The Secretary shall allow at least 2 recipients to act on a cooperative basis to procure rolling stock in compliance with this subsection and other Government procurement requirements.

(c) EFFICIENT PROCUREMENT.—A recipient may award a procurement contract under this chapter to other than the lowest bidder when the award furthers an objective consistent with the purposes of this chapter, including improved long-term operating efficiency and lower long-term costs. Not later than March 17, 1992, the Secretary shall—

(1) make appropriate changes in existing procedures to make the policy stated in this subsection readily practicable for all mass transportation authorities; and

(2) prescribe guidance that clarifies and carries out the policy.

§5327. Project management oversight

(a) PROJECT MANAGEMENT PLAN REQUIREMENTS.—To receive United States Government financial assistance for a major capital project under this chapter or the National Capital Transportation Act of 1969 (Public Law 91–143, 83 Stat. 320), a recipient must prepare and carry out a project management plan approved by the Secretary of Transportation. The plan shall provide for—

(1) adequate recipient staff organization with well-defined reporting relationships, statements of functional responsibilities, job descriptions, and job qualifications;

(2) a budget covering the project management organization, appropriate consultants, property acquisition, utility relocation, systems demonstration staff, audits, and miscellaneous payments the recipient may be prepared to justify;

(3) a construction schedule for the project;

(4) a document control procedure and recordkeeping system;

(5) a change order procedure that includes a documented, systematic approach to the handling of construction change orders;

(6) organizational structures, management skills, and staffing levels required throughout the construction phase;

(7) quality control and quality assurance functions, procedures, and responsibilities for construction, system installation, and integration of system components;

(8) material testing policies and procedures;

(9) internal plan implementation and reporting requirements;

(10) criteria and procedures to be used for testing the operational system or its major components;

(11) periodic updates of the plan, especially related to project budget and project schedule, financing, ridership estimates, and the status of local efforts to enhance ridership where ridership estimates partly depend on the success of those efforts; and

(12) the recipient's commitment to submit a project budget and project schedule to the Secretary each month.

(b) PLAN APPROVAL.—(1) The Secretary shall approve a plan not later than 60 days after it is submitted. If the approval cannot be completed within 60 days, the Secretary shall notify the recipient, explain the reasons for the delay, and estimate the additional time that will be required.

(2) The Secretary shall inform the recipient of the reasons when a plan is disapproved.

(c) LIMITATIONS ON USE OF AVAILABLE AMOUNTS.—(1) The Secretary may use not more than .5 percent of amounts made available for a fiscal year to carry out section 5307, 5309, or 5311 of this title, an interstate transfer mass transportation project under section 103(e)(4) of title 23 as in effect on September 30, 1991, or a project under the National Capital Transportation Act of 1969 (Public Law 91–143, 83 Stat. 320) to make a contract to oversee the construction of a major project under section 5307, 5309, 5311, or 103(e)(4) of that Act. The Secretary may use when necessary not more than an additional .25 percent of amounts made available in a fiscal year to carry out a major project under section 5307 to make a contract to oversee the construction of the project.

(2) The Secretary may use amounts available under paragraph (1) of this subsection to make contracts for safety, procurement, management, and financial compliance reviews and audits of a recipient of amounts under paragraph (1). Subsections (a), (b), and (e) of this section do not apply to contracts under this paragraph.

(3) The Government shall pay the entire cost of carrying out a contract under this subsection.

(d) ACCESS TO SITES AND RECORDS.—Each recipient of assistance under this chapter or section 14(b) of the National Capital Transportation Act of 1969 (Public Law 91–143, 83 Stat. 320), as added by section 2 of the National Capital Transportation Amendments of 1979 (Public Law 96–184, 93 Stat. 1320), shall provide the Secretary and a contractor the Secretary chooses under subsection (c) of this section with access to the construction sites and records of the recipient when reasonably necessary.

(e) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section. The regulations shall include—

(1) a definition of "major capital project" for subsection (c) of this section that excludes a project to acquire rolling stock or to maintain or rehabilitate a vehicle; and

(2) a requirement that oversight begin during the preliminary engineering stage of a project, unless the Secretary finds it more appropriate to begin the oversight during another stage of the project, to maximize the transportation benefits and cost savings associated with project management oversight.

§5328. Project review

(a) SCHEDULE.—(1) When the Secretary of Transportation allows a new fixed guideway project to advance into the alternatives analysis stage of project review, the Secretary shall cooperate with the applicant in alternatives analysis and in preparing a draft environmental impact statement and shall approve the draft for circulation not later than 45 days after the applicant submits the draft to the Secretary.

(2) After the draft is circulated and not later than 30 days after the applicant selects a locally preferred alternative, the Secretary shall allow the project to advance to the preliminary engineering stage if the Secretary finds the project is consistent with section 5309(e)(1)–(6) of this title.

(3) The Secretary shall issue a record of decision and allow a project to advance to the final design stage of construction not later than 120 days after the final environmental impact statement for the project is completed.

(4) The Secretary shall make a full financing grant agreement under section 5309 of this title for a project not later than 120 days after the project enters the final design stage of construction. The agreement shall provide for a United States Government share of the construction cost at least equal to the Government share estimated in the Secretary's most recent report required under section 5309(m)(2) of this title or an update of the report unless the applicant requests otherwise.

(b) ALLOWED DELAYS.—(1) Advancement of a project under the time requirements of subsection (a) of this section may be delayed only—

(A) for the time the applicant may request; or

(B) during the time the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and an opportunity for comment, that the applicant, for reasons attributable only to the applicant, has not complied substantially with the provisions of this chapter applicable to the project.

(2) Not more than 10 days after imposing a delay under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection, the Secretary shall give the applicant a written statement explaining the reasons for the delay and describing actions the applicant must take to end the delay.

(3) At least once every 6 months, the Secretary shall report to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate on each situation in which the Secretary has not met a time requirement of subsection (a) of this section or delayed a time requirement under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection. The report shall explain the reasons for the delay and include a plan for achieving timely completion of the Secretary's review.

(c) PROGRAM OF INTERRELATED PROJECTS.—(1) In this subsection, a program of interrelated projects includes the following:

(A) the New Jersey Urban Core Project (as defined in title III of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240, 105 Stat. 2087)).

(B) the San Francisco Bay Area Rail Extension Program, consisting of at least an extension of the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District to the San Francisco International Airport (Phase 1a to Colma and Phase 1b to San Francisco Airport), the Santa Clara County Transit District Tasman Corridor Project, a program element designated by a change to the Metropolitan Transportation Commission Resolution No. 1876, and a program element financed completely with non-Government amounts, including the BART Warm Springs Extension, Dublin Extension, and West Pittsburg Extension.

(C) the Los Angeles Metro Rail Minimum Operable Segment-3 Program, consisting of 7 stations and approximately 11.6 miles of heavy rail subway on the following lines:

(E) the Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon Westside Light Rail Program, consisting of the locally preferred alternative for the Westside Light Rail Project, including system related costs, contained in the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1991 (Public Law 101–516, 104 Stat. 2155), and defined in House Report 101–584, and the Hillsboro extension to the Westside Light Rail Project contained in that Act.

(F) the Queens Local/Express Connector Program, consisting of the locally preferred alternative for the connection of the 63d Street tunnel extension to the Queens Boulevard lines, the bell-mouth part of the connector that will allow for future access by commuter rail trains and other subway lines to the 63d Street tunnel extension, planning elements for connecting the upper and lower levels to commuter and subway lines in Long Island City, and planning elements for providing a connector for commuter rail transportation to the East side of Manhattan and subway lines to the proposed Second Avenue subway.

(G) the Dallas Area Rapid Transit Authority light rail elements of the New System Plan, consisting of the locally preferred alternative for the South Oak Cliff corridor, the South Oak Cliff corridor extension-Camp Wisdom, the West Oak Cliff corridor-Westmoreland, the North Central corridor-Park Lane, the North Central corridor-Richardson, Plano, and Garland extensions, the Pleasant Grove corridor-Buckner, and the Carrollton corridors-Farmers Branch and Las Colinas terminal.

(H) other programs designated by law or the Secretary.

(2) Consistent with the time requirements of subsection (a) of this section or as otherwise provided by law, the Secretary shall make at least one full financing grant agreement for each program described in paragraph (1) of this subsection. The agreement shall include commitments to advance each of the applicant's program elements (in the program of interrelated projects) through the appropriate program review stages as provided in subsection (a) or as otherwise provided by law and to provide Government financing for each element. The agreement may be changed to include design and construction of a particular element.

(3) When reviewing a project in a program of interrelated projects, the Secretary shall consider the local financial commitment, transportation effectiveness, and other assessment factors of all program elements to the extent consideration expedites carrying out the project.

(4) Including a program element not financed by the Government in a program of interrelated projects does not impose Government requirements that otherwise would not apply to the element.

§5329. Investigation of safety hazards

(a) GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation may investigate a condition in equipment, a facility, or an operation financed under this chapter that the Secretary believes causes a serious hazard of death or injury to establish the nature and extent of the condition and how to eliminate or correct it. If the Secretary establishes that a condition causes a hazard, the Secretary shall require the local governmental authority receiving amounts under this chapter to submit a plan for correcting it. The Secretary may withhold further financial assistance under this chapter until a plan is approved and carried out.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than June 15, 1992, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report containing—

(1) a description of actions taken to identify and investigate conditions in a facility, equipment, or way of operating as part of the findings and decisions required of the Secretary in providing a grant or loan under this chapter;

(2) a description of actions of the Secretary to correct or eliminate, as a requirement for making an amount available through a grant or loan under this chapter, a condition found to create a serious hazard of death or injury;

(3) a summary of all passenger-related deaths and injuries resulting from an unsafe condition in a facility, equipment, or way of operating a facility or equipment at least partly financed under this chapter;

(4) a summary of all employee-related deaths and injuries resulting from an unsafe condition in a facility, equipment, or way of operating a facility or equipment at least partly financed under this chapter;

(5) a summary of action of the Secretary to correct or eliminate the unsafe condition to which the deaths and injuries referred to in clauses (3) and (4) of this subsection were attributed;

(6) a summary of actions of the Secretary to alert mass transportation operators of the nature of the unsafe condition found to create a serious hazard of death or injury; and

(7) recommendations of the Secretary to Congress of any legislative or administrative actions necessary to ensure that all recipients of amounts under this chapter will undertake the best way available to correct or eliminate hazards of death or injury, including—

(A) a timetable for undertaking actions;

(B) an estimate of the capital and operating cost to take the actions; and

(C) minimum standards for establishing and carrying out safety plans by recipients of amounts under this chapter.

§5330. Withholding amounts for noncompliance with safety requirements

(a) APPLICATION.—This section applies only to States that have rail fixed guideway mass transportation systems not subject to regulation by the Federal Railroad Administration.

(b) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Transportation may withhold not more than 5 percent of the amount required to be appropriated for use in a State or urbanized area in the State under section 5307 of this title for a fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1994, if the State in the prior fiscal year has not met the requirements of subsection (c) of this section and the Secretary decides the State is not making an adequate effort to comply with subsection (c).

(c) STATE REQUIREMENTS.—A State meets the requirements of this section if the State—

(1) establishes and is carrying out a safety program plan for each fixed guideway mass transportation system in the State that establishes at least safety requirements, lines of authority, levels of responsibility and accountability, and methods of documentation for the system; and

(2) designates a State authority as having responsibility—

(A) to require, review, approve, and monitor the carrying out of each plan;

(B) to investigate hazardous conditions and accidents on the systems; and

(C) to require corrective action to correct or eliminate those conditions.

(d) MULTISTATE INVOLVEMENT.—When more than one State is subject to this section in connection with a single mass transportation authority, the affected States may designate an entity (except the mass transportation authority) to ensure uniform safety standards and enforcement and to meet the requirements of subsection (c) of this section.

(e) AVAILABILITY OF WITHHELD AMOUNTS.—(1) An amount withheld under subsection (b) of this section remains available for apportionment for use in the State until the end of the 2d fiscal year after the fiscal year for which the amount may be appropriated.

(2) If a State meets the requirements of subsection (c) of this section before the last day of the period for which an amount withheld under subsection (b) of this section remains available under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary, on the first day on which the State meets the requirements, shall apportion to the State the amount withheld that remains available for apportionment for use in the State. An amount apportioned under this paragraph remains available until the end of the 3d fiscal year after the fiscal year in which the amount is apportioned. An amount not obligated at the end of the 3-year period shall be apportioned for use in other States under section 5336 of this title.

(3) If a State does not meet the requirements of subsection (c) of this section at the end of the period for which an amount withheld under subsection (b) of this section remains available under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the amount shall be apportioned for use in other States under section 5336 of this title.

(f) REGULATIONS.—Not later than December 18, 1992, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations stating the requirements for complying with subsection (c) of this section.

§5331. Alcohol and controlled substances testing

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "controlled substance" means any substance under section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802) whose use the Secretary of Transportation decides has a risk to transportation safety.

(2) "person" includes any entity organized or existing under the laws of the United States, a State, territory, or possession of the United States, or a foreign country.

(3) "mass transportation" means any form of mass transportation, except a form the Secretary decides is covered adequately, for employee alcohol and controlled substances testing purposes, under subchapter III of chapter 201 or section 31306 of this title.

(b) TESTING PROGRAM FOR MASS TRANSPORTATION EMPLOYEES.—(1)(A) In the interest of mass transportation safety, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations not later than October 28, 1992, that establish a program requiring mass transportation operations that receive financial assistance under section 5307, 5309, or 5311 of this title or section 103(e)(4) of title 23 to conduct preemployment, reasonable suspicion, random, and post-accident testing of mass transportation employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Secretary) for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation.

(B) When the Secretary of Transportation considers it appropriate in the interest of safety, the Secretary may prescribe regulations for conducting periodic recurring testing of mass transportation employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Secretary) for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation.

(2) In prescribing regulations under this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation—

(A) shall require that post-accident testing of such a mass transportation employee be conducted when loss of human life occurs in an accident involving mass transportation; and

(B) may require that post-accident testing of such a mass transportation employee be conducted when bodily injury or significant property damage occurs in any other serious accident involving mass transportation.

(c) DISQUALIFICATIONS FOR USE.—(1) When the Secretary of Transportation considers it appropriate, the Secretary shall require disqualification for an established period of time or dismissal of any employee referred to in subsection (b)(1) of this section who is found—

(A) to have used or been impaired by alcohol when on duty; or

(B) to have used a controlled substance, whether or not on duty, except as allowed for medical purposes by law or regulation.

(2) This section does not supersede any penalty applicable to a mass transportation employee under another law.

(d) TESTING AND LABORATORY REQUIREMENTS.—In carrying out subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall develop requirements that shall—

(1) promote, to the maximum extent practicable, individual privacy in the collection of specimens;

(2) for laboratories and testing procedures for controlled substances, incorporate the Department of Health and Human Services scientific and technical guidelines dated April 11, 1988, and any amendments to those guidelines, including mandatory guidelines establishing—

(A) comprehensive standards for every aspect of laboratory controlled substances testing and laboratory procedures to be applied in carrying out this section, including standards requiring the use of the best available technology to ensure the complete reliability and accuracy of controlled substances tests and strict procedures governing the chain of custody of specimens collected for controlled substances testing;

(B) the minimum list of controlled substances for which individuals may be tested; and

(C) appropriate standards and procedures for periodic review of laboratories and criteria for certification and revocation of certification of laboratories to perform controlled substances testing in carrying out this section;

(3) require that a laboratory involved in controlled substances testing under this section have the capability and facility, at the laboratory, of performing screening and confirmation tests;

(4) provide that all tests indicating the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation be confirmed by a scientifically recognized method of testing capable of providing quantitative information about alcohol or a controlled substance;

(5) provide that each specimen be subdivided, secured, and labeled in the presence of the tested individual and that a part of the specimen be retained in a secure manner to prevent the possibility of tampering, so that if the individual's confirmation test results are positive the individual has an opportunity to have the retained part tested by a 2d confirmation test done independently at another certified laboratory if the individual requests the 2d confirmation test not later than 3 days after being advised of the results of the first confirmation test;

(6) ensure appropriate safeguards for testing to detect and quantify alcohol in breath and body fluid samples, including urine and blood, through the development of regulations that may be necessary and in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services;

(7) provide for the confidentiality of test results and medical information (except information about alcohol or a controlled substance) of employees, except that this clause does not prevent the use of test results for the orderly imposition of appropriate sanctions under this section; and

(8) ensure that employees are selected for tests by nondiscriminatory and impartial methods, so that no employee is harassed by being treated differently from other employees in similar circumstances.

(e) REHABILITATION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations establishing requirements for rehabilitation programs that provide for the identification and opportunity for treatment of any mass transportation employee referred to in subsection (b)(1) of this section who is found to have used alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation. The Secretary shall decide on the circumstances under which employees shall be required to participate in a program. This subsection does not prevent a mass transportation operation from establishing a program under this section in cooperation with another mass transportation operation.

(f) Relationship to Other Laws, Regulations, Standards, and Orders.—(1) A State or local government may not prescribe, issue, or continue in effect a law, regulation, standard, or order that is inconsistent with regulations prescribed under this section. However, a regulation prescribed under this section does not preempt a State criminal law that imposes sanctions for reckless conduct leading to loss of life, injury, or damage to property.

(2) In prescribing regulations under this section, the Secretary of Transportation—

(A) shall establish only requirements that are consistent with international obligations of the United States; and

(B) shall consider applicable laws and regulations of foreign countries.

(3) This section does not prevent the Secretary of Transportation from continuing in effect, amending, or further supplementing a regulation prescribed before October 28, 1991, governing the use of alcohol or a controlled substance by mass transportation employees.

(g) Ineligibility for Assistance.—A person is not eligible for financial assistance under section 5307, 5309, or 5311 of this title or section 103(e)(4) of title 23 if the person is required, under regulations the Secretary of Transportation prescribes under this section, to establish a program of alcohol and controlled substances testing and does not establish the program.

§5332. Nondiscrimination

(a) Definition.—In this section, "person" includes a governmental authority, political subdivision, authority, legal representative, trust, unincorporated organization, trustee, trustee in bankruptcy, and receiver.

(b) Prohibitions.—A person may not be excluded from participating in, denied a benefit of, or discriminated against under, a project, program, or activity receiving financial assistance under this chapter because of race, color, creed, national origin, sex, or age.

(c) Compliance.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall take affirmative action to ensure compliance with subsection (b) of this section.

(2) When the Secretary decides that a person receiving financial assistance under this chapter is not complying with subsection (b) of this section, a civil rights law of the United States, or a regulation or order under that law, the Secretary shall notify the person of the decision and require action be taken to ensure compliance with subsection (b).

(d) Authority of Secretary for Noncompliance.—If a person does not comply with subsection (b) of this section within a reasonable time after receiving notice, the Secretary shall—

(1) direct that no further financial assistance of the United States Government under this chapter be provided to the person;

(2) refer the matter to the Attorney General with a recommendation that a civil action be brought;

(3) proceed under title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.); and

(4) take any other action provided by law.

(e) Civil Actions by Attorney General.—The Attorney General may bring a civil action for appropriate relief when—

(1) a matter is referred to the Attorney General under subsection (d)(2) of this section; or

(2) the Attorney General believes a person is engaged in a pattern or practice in violation of this section.

(f) Application and Relationship to Other Laws.—This section applies to an employment or business opportunity and is in addition to title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.).

§5333. Labor standards

(a) Prevailing Wages Requirement.—The Secretary of Transportation shall ensure that laborers and mechanics employed by contractors and subcontractors in construction work financed with a grant or loan under this chapter be paid wages not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality, as determined by the Secretary of Labor under the Act of March 3, 1931 (known as the Davis-Bacon Act) (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5). The Secretary of Transportation may approve a grant or loan only after being assured that required labor standards will be maintained on the construction work. For a labor standard under this subsection, the Secretary of Labor has the same duties and powers stated in Reorganization Plan No. 14 of 1950 (eff. May 24, 1950, 64 Stat. 1267) and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934 (40 U.S.C. 276c).

(b) Employee Protective Arrangements.—(1) As a condition of financial assistance under sections 5307–5312, 5318(d), 5323(a)(1), (b), (d), and (e), 5328, 5337, and 5338(j)(5) of this title, the interests of employees affected by the assistance shall be protected under arrangements the Secretary of Labor concludes are fair and equitable. The agreement granting the assistance under sections 5307–5312, 5318(d), 5323(a)(1), (b), (d), and (e), 5328, 5337, and 5338(j)(5) shall specify the arrangements.

(2) Arrangements under this subsection shall include provisions that may be necessary for—

(A) the preservation of rights, privileges, and benefits (including continuation of pension rights and benefits) under existing collective bargaining agreements or otherwise;

(B) the continuation of collective bargaining rights;

(C) the protection of individual employees against a worsening of their positions related to employment;

(D) assurances of employment to employees of acquired mass transportation systems;

(E) assurances of priority of reemployment of employees whose employment is ended or who are laid off; and

(F) paid training or retraining programs.

(3) Arrangements under this subsection shall provide benefits at least equal to benefits established under section 11347 of this title.

§5334. Administrative

(a) General Authority.—In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(1) prescribe terms for a project under sections 5307 and 5309–5311 of this title (except terms the Secretary of Labor prescribes under section 5333(b) of this title);

(2) sue and be sued;

(3) foreclose on property or bring a civil action to protect or enforce a right conferred on the Secretary of Transportation by law or agreement;

(4) buy property related to a loan under this chapter;

(5) agree to pay an annual amount in place of a State or local tax on real property acquired or owned under this chapter;

(6) sell, exchange, or lease property, a security, or an obligation;

(7) obtain loss insurance for property and assets the Secretary of Transportation holds;

(8) consent to a modification in an agreement under this chapter; and

(9) include in an agreement or instrument under this chapter a covenant or term the Secretary of Transportation considers necessary to carry out this chapter.

(b) Procedures for Prescribing Regulations.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall prepare an agenda listing all areas in which the Secretary intends to propose regulations governing activities under this chapter within the following 12 months. The Secretary shall publish the proposed agenda in the Federal Register as part of the Secretary's semiannual regulatory agenda that lists regulatory activities of the Federal Transit Administration. The Secretary shall submit the agenda to the Committees on Public Works and Transportation and Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs and Appropriations of the Senate on the day the agenda is published.

(2) Except for emergency regulations, the Secretary of Transportation shall give interested parties at least 60 days to participate in a regulatory proceeding under this chapter by submitting written information, views, or arguments, with or without an oral presentation, except when the Secretary for good cause finds that public notice and comment are unnecessary because of the routine nature or insignificant impact of the regulation or that an emergency regulation should be issued. The Secretary may extend the 60-day period if the Secretary decides the period is insufficient to allow diligent individuals to prepare comments or that other circumstances justify an extension.

(3) An emergency regulation ends 120 days after it is issued.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation shall comply with this section (except subsections (h) and (i)) and sections 5323(a)(2), (c) and (e), 5324(c), and 5325 of this title when proposing or carrying out a regulation governing an activity under this chapter, except for a routine matter or a matter with no significant impact.

(c) Budget Program and Set of Accounts.—The Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) submit each year a budget program as provided in section 9103 of title 31; and

(2) maintain a set of accounts the Comptroller General shall audit under chapter 35 of title 31.

(d) Depository and Availability of Amounts.—The Secretary of Transportation shall deposit amounts made available to the Secretary under this chapter in a checking account in the Treasury. Receipts, assets, and amounts obtained or held by the Secretary to carry out this chapter are available for administrative expenses to carry out this chapter.

(e) Binding Effect of Financial Transaction.—A financial transaction of the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter and a related voucher are binding on all officers and employees of the United States Government.

(f) Dealing With Acquired Property.—Notwithstanding another law related to the Government acquiring, using, or disposing of real property, the Secretary of Transportation may deal with property acquired under subsection (a)(3) or (4) of this section in any way. However, this subsection does not—

(1) deprive a State or political subdivision of a State of jurisdiction of the property; or

(2) impair the civil rights, under the laws of a State or political subdivision of a State, of an inhabitant of the property.

(g) Transfer of Assets No Longer Needed.—(1) If a recipient of assistance under this chapter decides an asset acquired under this chapter at least in part with that assistance is no longer needed for the purpose for which it was acquired, the Secretary of Transportation may authorize the recipient to transfer the asset to a local governmental authority to be used for a public purpose with no further obligation to the Government. The Secretary may authorize a transfer for a public purpose other than mass transportation only if the Secretary decides—

(A) the asset will remain in public use for at least 5 years after the date the asset is transferred;

(B) there is no purpose eligible for assistance under this chapter for which the asset should be used;

(C) the overall benefit of allowing the transfer is greater than the interest of the Government in liquidation and return of the financial interest of the Government in the asset, after considering fair market value and other factors; and

(D) through an appropriate screening or survey process, that there is no interest in acquiring the asset for Government use if the asset is a facility or land.

(2) A decision under paragraph (1) of this section must be in writing and include the reason for the decision.

(3) This subsection is in addition to another law related to using and disposing of a facility or equipment under an assistance agreement.

(h) TRANSFER OF AMOUNTS AND NON-GOVERNMENT SHARE.—(1) Amounts made available for a mass transportation project under title 23 shall be transferred to and administered by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter. Amounts made available for a highway project under this chapter shall be transferred to and administered by the Secretary under title 23.

(2) The provisions of title 23 related to the non-Government share apply to amounts under title 23 used for mass transportation projects. The provisions of this chapter related to the non-Government share apply to amounts under this chapter used for highway projects.

(i) AUTHORITY OF SECRETARY OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall—

(1) carry out section 5312(a) and (b)(1) of this title related to—

(A) urban transportation systems and planned development of urban areas; and

(B) the role of transportation planning in overall urban planning; and

(2) advise and assist the Secretary of Transportation in making findings under section 5323(a)(1)(A) of this title.

(j) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—(1) Section 9107(a) of title 31 applies to the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter.

(2) Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5) applies to a contract for more than $1,000 for services or supplies related to property acquired under this chapter.

§5335. Reports and audits

(a) REPORTING SYSTEM AND UNIFORM SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTS AND RECORDS.—(1) To help meet the needs of individual mass transportation systems, the United States Government, State and local governments, and the public for information on which to base mass transportation service planning, the Secretary of Transportation shall maintain a reporting system, by uniform categories, to accumulate mass transportation financial and operating information and a uniform system of accounts and records. The reporting and uniform systems shall contain appropriate information to help any level of government make a public sector investment decision. The Secretary may request and receive appropriate information from any source.

(2) The Secretary may make a grant under section 5307 of this title only if the applicant, and any person that will receive benefits directly from the grant, are subject to the reporting and uniform systems.

(b) QUARTERLY REPORTS.—Not later than 30 days after the last day of each calendar quarter, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Public Works and Transportation and Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs and Appropriations of the Senate a report on—

(1) obligations by State, designated recipient, and applicant made under this chapter during the quarter;

(2) the balance of unobligated apportionments under this chapter on the last day of the quarter;

(3) the balance of unobligated amounts under this chapter on the last day of the quarter that the Secretary may expend;

(4) letters of intent issued during the quarter;

(5) letters of intent outstanding on the last day of the quarter; and

(6) grant contracts executed and reimbursement authority established for amounts obligated for each State, designated recipient, and applicant.

(c) BIENNIAL NEEDS REPORT.—In January 1993 and in January of every 2d year after 1993, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate a report containing an evaluation of the extent to which current mass transportation needs are addressed adequately and an estimate of the future mass transportation needs of the United States, including mass transportation needs in rural areas (particularly access to health care facilities). The report shall include—

(1) an assessment of needs related to rail modernization, guideway modernization, replacing, rehabilitating, and buying buses and related equipment, constructing bus related facilities, and constructing new fixed guideway systems and extensions to existing fixed guideway systems;

(2) a 5-year projection of maintenance and modernization needs resulting from aging of existing equipment and facilities, including the need to overhaul or replace existing bus fleets and rolling stock used on fixed guideway systems;

(3) a 5-year projection of the need to invest in the expansion of existing mass transportation systems to meet changing economic, commuter, and residential patterns;

(4) an estimate of the level of expenditure needed to satisfy the needs identified in clauses (1)–(3) of this paragraph;

(5) an examination of existing Government, State, local, and private resources that are or reasonably can be expected to be made available to support public mass transportation; and

(6) the gap between the level of expenditure estimated under clause (4) of this paragraph and the level of resources identified under clause (5) of this paragraph that are available to meet the needs.

(d) BIENNIAL TRANSFERABILITY REPORT.—In January 1993 and in January of every 2d year after 1993, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate a report on carrying out section 5307(b)(5) of this title. The report shall—

(1) identify, by State, the amount of mass transportation money transferred for non-mass transportation purposes under section 5307(b)(5) of this title during the prior fiscal year;

(2) include an assessment of the impact of the transfers on the mass transportation needs of individuals and communities in the State, including the impact on—

(A) the State's ability to meet the mass transportation needs of elderly individuals and individuals with disabilities;

(B) efforts to meet the objectives of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) and the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101 et seq.); and

(C) the State's efforts to extend public mass transportation services to unserved rural areas; and

(3) examine the relative levels of Government mass transportation assistance and services in urban and rural areas in the fiscal year that ended September 30, 1991, and the extent to which the assistance and service has changed in later fiscal years because of mass transportation resources made available under this chapter and the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (Public Law 102–240, 105 Stat. 1914).

§5336. Apportionment of appropriations for block grants

(a) BASED ON URBANIZED AREA POPULATION.—Of the amount made available or appropriated under section 5338(f) of this title—

(1) 9.32 percent shall be apportioned each fiscal year only in urbanized areas with a population of less than 200,000 so that each of those areas is entitled to receive an amount equal to—

(A) 50 percent of the total amount apportioned multiplied by a ratio equal to the population of the area divided by the total population of all urbanized areas with populations of less than 200,000 as shown in the latest United States Government census; and

(B) 50 percent of the total amount apportioned multiplied by a ratio for the area based on population weighted by a factor, established by the Secretary of Transportation, of the number of inhabitants in each square mile; and

(2) 90.68 percent shall be apportioned each fiscal year only in urbanized areas with populations of at least 200,000 as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section.

(b) BASED ON FIXED GUIDEWAY REVENUE VEHICLE-MILES, ROUTE-MILES, AND PASSENGER-MILES.—(1) In this subsection, "fixed guideway revenue vehicle-miles" and "fixed guideway route-miles" include ferry boat operations directly or under contract by the designated recipient.

(2) Of the amount apportioned under subsection (a)(2) of this section, 33.29 percent shall be apportioned as follows:

(A) 95.61 percent of the total amount apportioned under this subsection shall be apportioned so that each urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000 is entitled to receive an amount equal to—

(i) 60 percent of the 95.61 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio equal to the number of fixed guideway revenue vehicle-miles attributable to the area, as established by the Secretary of Transportation, divided by the total number of all fixed guideway revenue vehicle-miles attributable to all areas; and

(ii) 40 percent of the 95.61 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio equal to the number of fixed guideway route-miles attributable to the area, established by the Secretary, divided by the total number of all fixed guideway route-miles attributable to all areas.

(B) 4.39 percent of the total amount apportioned under this subsection shall be apportioned so that each urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000 is entitled to receive an amount equal to—

(i) the number of fixed guideway vehicle passenger-miles traveled multiplied by the number of fixed guideway vehicle passenger-miles traveled for each dollar of operating cost in an area; divided by

(ii) the total number of fixed guideway vehicle passenger-miles traveled multiplied by the total number of fixed guideway vehicle passenger-miles traveled for each dollar of operating cost in all areas.

(C) An urbanized area with a population of at least 750,000 in which commuter rail transportation is provided shall receive at least .75 percent of the total amount apportioned under this subsection.

(D) Under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, fixed guideway revenue vehicle- or route-miles, and passengers served on those miles, in an urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000, where the miles and passengers served otherwise would be attributable to an urbanized area with a population of at least 1,000,000 in an adjacent State, are attributable to the governmental authority in the State in which the urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000 is located. The authority is deemed an urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000 if the authority makes a contract for the service.

(E) A recipient's apportionment under subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph may not be reduced if the recipient, after satisfying the Secretary of Transportation that energy or operating efficiencies would be achieved, reduces revenue vehicle-miles but provides the same frequency of revenue service to the same number of riders.

(c) BASED ON BUS REVENUE VEHICLE-MILES AND PASSENGER-MILES.—Of the amount apportioned under subsection (a)(2) of this section, 66.71 percent shall be apportioned as follows:

(1) 90.8 percent of the total amount apportioned under this subsection shall be apportioned as follows:

(A) 73.39 percent of the 90.8 percent apportioned under this paragraph shall be apportioned so that each urbanized area with a population of at least 1,000,000 is entitled to receive an amount equal to—

(i) 50 percent of the 73.39 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio equal to the total bus revenue vehicle-miles operated in or directly serving the urbanized area divided by the total bus revenue vehicle-miles attributable to all areas;

(ii) 25 percent of the 73.39 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio equal to the population of the area divided by the total population of all areas, as shown by the latest Government census; and

(iii) 25 percent of the 73.39 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio for the area based on population weighted by a factor, established by the Secretary of Transportation, of the number of inhabitants in each square mile.

(B) 26.61 percent of the 90.8 percent apportioned under this paragraph shall be apportioned so that each urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000 but not more than 999,999 is entitled to receive an amount equal to—

(i) 50 percent of the 26.61 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio equal to the total bus revenue vehicle-miles operated in or directly serving the urbanized area divided by the total bus revenue vehicle-miles attributable to all areas;

(ii) 25 percent of the 26.61 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio equal to the population of the area divided by the total population of all areas, as shown by the latest Government census; and

(iii) 25 percent of the 26.61 percent apportioned under this subparagraph multiplied by a ratio for the area based on population weighted by a factor, established by the Secretary of Transportation, of the number of inhabitants in each square mile.

(2) 9.2 percent of the total amount apportioned under this subsection shall be apportioned so that each urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000 is entitled to receive an amount equal to—

(A) the number of bus passenger-miles traveled multiplied by the number of bus passenger-miles traveled for each dollar of operating cost in an area; divided by

(B) the total number of bus passenger-miles traveled multiplied by the total number of bus passenger-miles traveled for each dollar of operating cost in all areas.

(d) OPERATING ASSISTANCE.—(1) The total amount apportioned under this section that may be used for operating assistance may not be more than—

(A) 80 percent of the total amount apportioned in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1982, under section 5(a)(1)(A), (2)(A), and (3)(A) of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 to urbanized areas with populations of at least 1,000,000;

(B) 90 percent of the total amount apportioned in that year under section 5(a)(1)(A), (2)(A), and (3)(A) to urbanized areas with populations of at least 200,000 but not more than 999,999;

(C) 95 percent of the total amount apportioned in that year under section 5(a)(1)(A), (2)(A), and (3)(A) to urbanized areas with populations of less than 200,000; or

(D) two-thirds of the total amount apportioned under this section during the first complete year an urbanized area received amounts under this section if the area first became an urbanized area under the 1980 Government census or later.

(2) Amounts apportioned under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be increased on October 1 of each year by an amount equal to the amount applicable to each urbanized area under paragraph (1) (except increases under this paragraph), multiplied by the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index for all-urban consumers published by the Secretary of Labor during the most recent calendar year. However, the increase may not be more than the percentage increase of amounts made available under section 5338(f) of this title in the current fiscal year and amounts made available under section 5338(f) in the prior fiscal year.

(e) DATE OF APPORTIONMENT.—The Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) apportion amounts appropriated under section 5338(f) of this title to carry out section 5307 of this title not later than the 10th day after the date the amounts are appropriated or October 1 of the fiscal year for which the amounts are appropriated, whichever is later; and

(2) publish apportionments of the amounts, including amounts attributable to each urbanized area with a population of more than 50,000 and amounts attributable to each State of a multistate urbanized area, on the apportionment date.

(f) AMOUNTS NOT APPORTIONED TO DESIGNATED RECIPIENTS.—The chief executive officer of a State may expend in an urbanized area with a population of less than 200,000 an amount apportioned under this section that is not apportioned to a designated recipient as defined in section 5307(a) of this title.

(g) TRANSFERS OF APPORTIONMENTS.—(1) The chief executive officer of a State may transfer any part of the State's apportionment under subsection (a)(1) of this section to supplement amounts apportioned to the State under section 5311(c) of this title or amounts apportioned to urbanized areas under this subsection. The chief executive officer may make a transfer only after consulting with responsible local officials and publicly owned operators of mass transportation in each area for which the amount originally was apportioned under this section.

(2) The chief executive officer of a State may transfer any part of the State's apportionment under section 5311(c) of this title to supplement amounts apportioned to the State under subsection (a)(1) of this section.

(3) The chief executive officer of a State may use throughout the State amounts of a State's apportionment remaining available for obligation at the beginning of the 90-day period before the period of the availability of the amounts expires.

(4) A designated recipient for an urbanized area with a population of at least 200,000 may transfer a part of its apportionment under this section to the chief executive officer of a State. The chief executive officer shall distribute the transferred amounts to urbanized areas under this section.

(5) Capital and operating assistance limitations applicable to the original apportionment apply to amounts transferred under this subsection.

(h) CHANGES OF APPORTIONMENTS.—If sufficient amounts are available, the Secretary of Transportation shall change apportionments under this section between the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund and the general fund to ensure that each recipient receives from the general fund at least as much operating assistance made available each fiscal year under this section as the recipient is eligible to receive.

(i) PERIOD OF AVAILABILITY TO RECIPIENTS.—An amount apportioned under this section may be obligated by the recipient for 3 years after the fiscal year in which the amount is apportioned. Not later than 30 days after the end of the 3-year period, an amount that is not obligated at the end of that period shall be added to the amount that may be apportioned under this section in the next fiscal year.

(j) APPLICATION OF OTHER SECTIONS.—Sections 5302, 5318, 5323(a)(1), (d), and (f), 5332, and 5333 of this title apply to this section and to a grant made under this section. Except as provided in this section, no other provision of this chapter applies to this section or to a grant made under this section.

(k) CERTAIN URBANIZED AREAS GRANDFATHERED.—An area designated an urbanized area under the 1980 census and not designated an urbanized area under the 1990 census for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, is eligible to receive—

(1) 50 percent of the amount the area would have received if the area had been an urbanized area as defined by section 5302(a)(13) of this title; and

SUBCHAPTER I—GENERAL

§5501. National Intermodal Transportation System policy

(a) GENERAL.—It is the policy of the United States Government to develop a National Intermodal Transportation System that is economically efficient and environmentally sound, provides the foundation for the United States to compete in the global economy, and will move individuals and property in an energy efficient way.

(b) SYSTEM CHARACTERISTICS.—(1) The National Intermodal Transportation System shall consist of all forms of transportation in a unified, interconnected manner, including the transportation systems of the future, to reduce energy consumption and air pollution while promoting economic development and supporting the United States' preeminent position in international commerce.

(2) The National Intermodal Transportation System shall include a National Highway System consisting of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways and those principal arterial roads that are essential for interstate and regional commerce and travel, national defense, intermodal transfer facilities, and international commerce and border crossings.

(3) The National Intermodal Transportation System shall include significant improvements in public transportation necessary to achieve national goals for improved air quality, energy conservation, international competitiveness, and mobility for elderly individuals, individuals with disabilities, and economically disadvantaged individuals in urban and rural areas of the United States.

(4) The National Intermodal Transportation System shall provide improved access to ports and airports, the Nation's link to commerce.

(5) The National Intermodal Transportation System shall give special emphasis to the contributions of the transportation sectors to increased productivity growth. Social benefits must be considered with particular attention to the external benefits of reduced air pollution, reduced traffic congestion, and other aspects of the quality of life in the United States.

(6) The National Intermodal Transportation System must be operated and maintained with insistent attention to the concepts of innovation, competition, energy efficiency, productivity, growth, and accountability. Practices that resulted in the lengthy and overly costly construction of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways must be confronted and stopped.

(7) The National Intermodal Transportation System shall be adapted to "intelligent vehicles", "magnetic levitation systems", and other new technologies, wherever feasible and economical, with benefit cost estimates given special emphasis on safety considerations and techniques for cost allocation.

(8) When appropriate, the National Intermodal Transportation System will be financed, as regards Government apportionments and reimbursements, by the Highway Trust Fund. Financial assistance will be provided to State and local governments and their instrumentalities to help carry out national goals related to mobility for elderly individuals, individuals with disabilities, and economically disadvantaged individuals.

(9) The National Intermodal Transportation System must be the centerpiece of a national investment commitment to create the new wealth of the United States for the 21st century.

(c) DISTRIBUTION AND POSTING.—The Secretary of Transportation shall distribute copies of the policy in subsections (a) and (b) of this section to each employee of the Department of Transportation and ensure that the policy is posted in all offices of the Department.

(2) The Secretary shall deem a cosmetic, device, or drug to be a nonfood product if—

(A) the cosmetic, device, or drug is transported in a motor vehicle or rail vehicle before, or at the same time as, a food or food additive; and

(B) transportation of the cosmetic, device, or drug would make the food or food additive unsafe to humans or animals.

(b) SPECIAL REQUIREMENTS.—In prescribing regulations under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the Secretary, after consultation required by section 5709 of this title, shall establish requirements for appropriate—

(1) recordkeeping, identification, marking, certification, or other means of verification to comply with sections 5704–5706 of this title;

(2) decontamination, removal, disposal, and isolation to comply with regulations carrying out sections 5704 and 5705 of this title; and

(3) material for the construction of tank trucks, rail tank cars, cargo tanks, and accessory equipment to comply with regulations carrying out section 5704 of this title.

(c) CONSIDERATIONS AND ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—In prescribing regulations under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the Secretary, after consultation required by section 5709 of this title, shall consider, and may establish requirements related to, each of the following:

(1) the extent to which packaging or similar means of protecting and isolating commodities are adequate to eliminate or ameliorate the potential risks of transporting cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives in motor vehicles or rail vehicles used to transport nonfood products.

(2) appropriate compliance and enforcement measures to carry out this chapter.

(3) appropriate minimum insurance or other liability requirements for a person to whom this chapter applies.

(d) PACKAGES MEETING PACKAGING STANDARDS.—If the Secretary finds packaging standards to be adequate, regulations under subsection (a)(1) of this section may not apply to cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, food additives, or nonfood products packaged in packages that meet the standards.

§5704. Tank trucks, rail tank cars, and cargo tanks

(a) PROHIBITIONS.—The regulations prescribed under section 5703(a)(1) of this title shall include provisions prohibiting a person from—

(1) using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank used in motor vehicle or rail transportation of cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives if the tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank is used to transport a nonfood product, except a nonfood product included in a list published under subsection (b) of this section;

(2) using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a tank truck or cargo tank to provide motor vehicle transportation of cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, food additives, or nonfood products included in the list published under subsection (b) of this section unless the tank truck or cargo tank is identified, by a permanent marking on the tank truck or cargo tank, as transporting only cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, food additives, or nonfood products included in the list;

(3) using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a tank truck or cargo tank to provide motor vehicle transportation of a nonfood product that is not included in the list published under subsection (b) of this section if the tank truck or cargo tank is identified, as provided in clause (2) of this subsection, as a tank truck or cargo tank transporting only cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, food additives, or nonfood products included in the list; or

(4) receiving, except for lawful disposal purposes, any cosmetic, device, drug, food, food additive, or nonfood product that has been transported in a tank truck or cargo tank in violation of clause (2) or (3) of this subsection.

(b) LIST OF NONFOOD PRODUCTS NOT UNSAFE.—After consultation required by section 5709 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation shall publish in the Federal Register a list of nonfood products the Secretary decides do not make cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives unsafe to humans or animals because of transportation of the nonfood products in a tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank used to transport cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives. The Secretary may amend the list periodically by publication in the Federal Register.

(c) DISCLOSURE.—A person that arranges for the use of a tank truck or cargo tank used in motor vehicle transportation for the transportation of a cosmetic, device, drug, food, food additive, or nonfood product shall disclose to the motor carrier or other appropriate person if the cosmetic, device, drug, food, food additive, or nonfood product being transported is to be used—

(1) as, or in the preparation of, a food or food additive; or

(2) as a nonfood product included in the list published under subsection (b) of this section.

§5705. Motor and rail transportation of nonfood products

(a) PROHIBITIONS.—The regulations prescribed under section 5703(a)(1) of this title shall include provisions prohibiting a person from using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a motor vehicle or rail vehicle (except a tank truck, rail tank car, or cargo tank described in section 5704 of this title) to transport cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives if the vehicle is used to transport nonfood products included in a list published under subsection (b) of this section.

(b) LIST OF UNSAFE NONFOOD PRODUCTS.—(1) After consultation required by section 5709 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation shall publish in the Federal Register a list of nonfood products the Secretary decides would make cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives unsafe to humans or animals because of transportation of the nonfood products in a motor vehicle or rail vehicle used to transport cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives. The Secretary may amend the list periodically by publication in the Federal Register.

(2) The list published under paragraph (1) of this subsection may not include cardboard, pallets, beverage containers, and other food packaging except to the extent the Secretary decides that the transportation of cardboard, pallets, beverage containers, or other food packaging in a motor vehicle or rail vehicle used to transport cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives would make the cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives unsafe to humans or animals.

§5706. Dedicated vehicles

(a) PROHIBITIONS.—The regulations prescribed under section 5703(a)(1) of this title shall include provisions prohibiting a person from using, offering for use, or arranging for the use of a motor vehicle or rail vehicle to transport asbestos, in forms or quantities the Secretary of Transportation decides are necessary, or products that present an extreme danger to humans or animals, despite any decontamination, removal, disposal, packaging, or other isolation procedures, unless the motor vehicle or rail vehicle is used only to transport one or more of the following: asbestos, those extremely dangerous products, or refuse.

(b) LIST OF APPLICABLE PRODUCTS.—After consultation required by section 5709 of this title, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a list of the products to which this section applies. The Secretary may amend the list periodically by publication in the Federal Register.

§5707. Waiver authority

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—After consultation required by section 5709 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation may waive any part of this chapter or regulations prescribed under this chapter for a class of persons, motor vehicles, rail vehicles, cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, food additives, or nonfood products, if the Secretary decides that the waiver—

(1) would not result in the transportation of cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, or food additives that would be unsafe to humans or animals; and

(2) would not be contrary to the public interest and this chapter.

(b) PUBLICATION OF WAIVERS.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register any waiver and the reasons for the waiver.

§5708. Food transportation inspections

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—For commercial motor vehicles, the Secretary of Transportation may carry out this chapter and assist in carrying out compatible State laws and regulations through means that include inspections conducted by State employees that are paid for with money authorized under section 31104 of this title, if the recipient State agrees to assist in the enforcement of this chapter or is enforcing compatible State laws and regulations.

(b) PROVIDING ASSISTANCE.—On the request of the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretaries of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the heads of other appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government shall provide assistance, to the extent available, to the Secretary of Transportation to carry out this chapter, including assistance in the training of personnel under a program established under subsection (c) of this section.

(c) TRAINING PROGRAM.—After consultation required by section 5709 of this title and consultation with the heads of appropriate State transportation and food safety authorities, the Secretary of Transportation shall develop and carry out a training program for inspectors to conduct vigorous enforcement of this chapter and regulations prescribed under this chapter or compatible State laws and regulations. As part of the training program, the inspectors, including State inspectors or personnel paid with money authorized under section 31104 of this title, shall be trained in the recognition of adulteration problems associated with the transportation of cosmetics, devices, drugs, food, and food additives and in the procedures for obtaining assistance of the appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government and State authorities to support the enforcement.

§5709. Consultation

As provided by sections 5703–5708 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretaries of Agriculture and Health and Human Services and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

§5710. Administrative

The Secretary of Transportation has the same duties and powers in regulating transportation under this chapter as the Secretary has under section 5121(a)–(c) (except subsection (c)(1)(A)) of this title in regulating transportation under chapter 51 of this title.

§5711. Enforcement and penalties

(a) ACTIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall request that a civil action be brought and take action to eliminate or ameliorate an imminent hazard related to a violation of a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter in the same way and to the same extent as authorized by section 5122 of this title.

(b) APPLICABLE PENALTIES AND PROCEDURES.—The penalties and procedures in sections 5123 and 5124 of this title apply to a violation of a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter.

§5712. Relationship to other laws

Section 5125 of this title applies to the relationship between this chapter and a requirement of a State, a political subdivision of a State, or an Indian tribe.

§5713. Application of sections 5711 and 5712

Sections 5711 and 5712 of this title apply only to transportation occurring on or after the date that regulations prescribed under section 5703(a)(1) of this title are effective.

§5714. Coordination procedures

Not later than November 3, 1991, the Secretary of Transportation, after consultation with appropriate State officials, shall establish procedures to promote more effective coordination between the departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and State authorities with regulatory authority over motor carrier safety and railroad safety in carrying out and enforcing this chapter.

§5901. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) the definitions in section 10102 of this title apply.

(2) "beneficial owner" means a person not having title to property but having ownership rights in the property, including a trustee of property in transit from an overseas place of origin that is domiciled or doing business in the United States, except that a carrier, agent of a carrier, broker, customs broker, freight forwarder, warehouser, or terminal operator is not a beneficial owner only because of providing or arranging for any part of the intermodal transportation of property.

(3) "carrier" means—

(A) a motor carrier, water carrier, and rail carrier providing transportation of property in commerce; and

(B) an ocean common carrier (as defined in section 3 of the Shipping Act of 1984 (46 App. U.S.C. 1702)) providing transportation of property in commerce.

(4) "container" has the meaning given the term "freight container" by the International Standards Organization in Series 1, Freight Containers, 3d Edition (reference number ISO668–1979(E)), including successive revisions, and similar containers that are used in providing transportation in interstate commerce.

(5) "first carrier" means the first carrier transporting a loaded container or trailer in intermodal transportation.

(6) "intermodal transportation" means the successive transportation of a loaded container or trailer from its place of origin to its place of destination by more than one mode of transportation in interstate or foreign commerce, whether under a single bill of lading or under separate bills of lading.

(7) "trailer" means a nonpower, property-carrying, trailing unit that is designed for use in combination with a truck tractor.

§5902. Notifications and certifications

(a) PRIOR NOTIFICATION.—Before a person tenders to a first carrier for intermodal transportation a loaded container or trailer having a projected gross cargo weight of more than 10,000 pounds (including packing material and pallets), the person shall give the carrier a written notification of the gross cargo weight and a reasonable description of the contents of the container or trailer. The notification may be transmitted electronically.

(b) CERTIFICATION.—Not later than when a person tenders to a first carrier for intermodal transportation a container or trailer to which subsection (a) of this section applies or a loaded container or trailer having an actual gross cargo weight of more than 10,000 pounds (including packing material and pallets), the person shall certify to the carrier in writing the actual gross cargo weight and a reasonable description of the contents of the container or trailer.

(c) FORWARDING CERTIFICATIONS TO SUBSEQUENT CARRIERS.—A carrier, agent of a carrier, broker, customs broker, freight forwarder, warehouser, or terminal operator shall forward the certification provided under subsection (b) of this section to a subsequent carrier transporting the container or trailer in intermodal transportation. The act of forwarding the certification may not be construed as a verification or affirmation of the accuracy or completeness of the information in the certification.

(d) NONAPPLICATION.—(1) Subsections (a) and (b) of this section and section 5903(c) of this title do not apply to a carrier when the carrier is transferring a loaded container or trailer to another carrier during intermodal transportation, unless the carrier is also the person tendering the loaded container or trailer to the first carrier.

(2) A carrier, agent of a carrier, broker, customs broker, freight forwarder, warehouser, or terminal operator is deemed not to be a person tendering a loaded container or trailer to a first carrier under this section, unless the carrier, agent, broker, customs broker, freight forwarder, warehouser, or terminal operator assumes legal responsibility for loading property into the container or trailer.

§5903. Prohibitions

(a) PROVIDING ERRONEOUS INFORMATION.—A person tendering a loaded container or trailer may not provide erroneous information in a certification required by section 5902(b) of this title.

(b) TRANSPORTING PRIOR TO RECEIVING CERTIFICATION.—A motor carrier may not transport a loaded container or trailer to which section 5902(b) of this title applies before receiving the certification required by section 5902(b).

(c) UNLAWFUL COERCION.—(1) A person may not coerce or attempt to coerce a person participating in intermodal transportation to transport a loaded container or trailer having an actual gross cargo weight of more than 10,000 pounds (including packing materials and pallets) before the certification required by section 5902(b) of this title is provided.

(2) A person, knowing that the weight of a loaded container or trailer or the weight of a tractor-trailer combination carrying the container or trailer is more than the weight allowed by applicable State law, may not coerce or attempt to coerce a carrier to transport the container or trailer or to operate the tractor-trailer combination in violation of that State law.

§5904. State enforcement

(a) GENERAL.—A State may enact a law to permit the State or a political subdivision of the State—

(1) to impose a fine or penalty, for a violation of a State highway weight law or regulation by a tractor-trailer combination carrying a loaded container or trailer for which a certification is required by section 5902(b) of this title, against the person tendering the loaded container or trailer to the first carrier if the violation results from the person's having provided erroneous information in the certification in violation of section 5903(a) of this title; and

(2) to impound the container or trailer until the fine or penalty has been paid by the owner or beneficial owner of the contents of the container or trailer or the person tendering the loaded container or trailer to the first carrier.

(b) LIMITATION.—This chapter does not require a person tendering a loaded container or trailer to a first carrier to ensure that the first carrier or any other carrier involved in the intermodal transportation will comply with any State highway weight law or regulation, other than as required by this chapter.

§5905. Liens

(a) GENERAL.—If a person involved in the intermodal transportation of a loaded container or trailer for which a certification is required by section 5902(b) of this title is required under State law to post a bond or pay any fine, penalty, cost, or interest resulting from providing erroneous information in the certification to the first carrier in violation of section 5903(a) of this title, the person has a lien against the contents equal to the amount of the bond, fine, penalty, cost, or interest incurred, until the person receives a payment of that amount from the owner or beneficial owner of the contents or from the person responsible for making the certification.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—(1) A lien under this section does not authorize a person to dispose of the contents of a loaded container or trailer until the person who tendered the container or trailer to the first carrier is given a reasonable opportunity to establish responsibility for the bond, fine, penalty, cost, or interest.

(2) In this section, an owner or beneficial owner of the contents of a container or trailer or a person tendering a container or trailer to the first carrier is deemed not to be a person involved in the intermodal transportation of the container or trailer.

§5906. Perishable agricultural commodities

Sections 5904(a)(2) and 5905 of this title do not apply to a container or trailer the contents of which are perishable agricultural commodities (as defined in the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930 (7 U.S.C. 499a et seq.)).

§5907. Regulations and effective date

(a) REGULATIONS.—Not later than July 25, 1993, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe final regulations to enforce this chapter. The Secretary may establish by regulation exemptions to the regulations that are in the public interest and consistent with the purposes of this chapter.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This chapter is effective on the date final regulations to enforce this chapter are prescribed.

SUBCHAPTER I—GENERAL

§20101. Purpose

The purpose of this chapter is to promote safety in every area of railroad operations and reduce railroad-related accidents and incidents.

§20102. Definitions

In this part—

(1) "railroad"—

(A) means any form of nonhighway ground transportation that runs on rails or electromagnetic guideways, including—

(i) commuter or other short-haul railroad passenger service in a metropolitan or suburban area and commuter railroad service that was operated by the Consolidated Rail Corporation on January 1, 1979; and

(ii) high speed ground transportation systems that connect metropolitan areas, without regard to whether those systems use new technologies not associated with traditional railroads; but

(B) does not include rapid transit operations in an urban area that are not connected to the general railroad system of transportation.

(2) "railroad carrier" means a person providing railroad transportation.

§20103. General authority

(a) REGULATIONS AND ORDERS.—The Secretary of Transportation, as necessary, shall prescribe regulations and issue orders for every area of railroad safety supplementing laws and regulations in effect on October 16, 1970.

(b) REGULATIONS OF PRACTICE FOR PROCEEDINGS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations of practice applicable to each proceeding under this chapter. The regulations shall reflect the varying nature of the proceedings and include time limits for disposition of the proceedings. The time limit for disposition of a proceeding may not be more than 12 months after the date it begins.

(c) CONSIDERATION OF INFORMATION AND STANDARDS.—In prescribing regulations and issuing orders under this section, the Secretary shall consider existing relevant safety information and standards.

(d) WAIVERS.—The Secretary may waive compliance with any part of a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter if the waiver is in the public interest and consistent with railroad safety. The Secretary shall make public the reasons for granting the waiver.

(e) HEARINGS.—The Secretary shall conduct a hearing as provided by section 553 of title 5 when prescribing a regulation or issuing an order under this chapter, including a regulation or order establishing, amending, or waiving compliance with a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. An opportunity for an oral presentation shall be provided.

§20104. Emergency authority

(a) ORDERING RESTRICTIONS AND PROHIBITIONS.—(1) If, through testing, inspection, investigation, or research carried out under this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation decides that an unsafe condition or practice, or a combination of unsafe conditions and practices, causes an emergency situation involving a hazard of death or personal injury, the Secretary immediately may order restrictions and prohibitions, without regard to section 20103(e) of this title, that may be necessary to abate the situation.

(2) The order shall describe the condition or practice, or a combination of conditions and practices, that causes the emergency situation and prescribe standards and procedures for obtaining relief from the order. This paragraph does not affect the Secretary's discretion under this section to maintain the order in effect for as long as the emergency situation exists.

(b) REVIEW OF ORDERS.—After issuing an order under this section, the Secretary shall provide an opportunity for review of the order under section 554 of title 5. If a petition for review is filed and the review is not completed by the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date the order was issued, the order stops being effective at the end of that period unless the Secretary decides in writing that the emergency situation still exists.

(c) CIVIL ACTIONS TO COMPEL ISSUANCE OF ORDERS.—An employee of a railroad carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce who may be exposed to imminent physical injury during that employment because of the Secretary's failure, without any reasonable basis, to issue an order under subsection (a) of this section, or the employee's authorized representative, may bring a civil action against the Secretary in a district court of the United States to compel the Secretary to issue an order. The action must be brought in the judicial district in which the emergency situation is alleged to exist, in which that employing carrier has its principal executive office, or for the District of Columbia. The Secretary's failure to issue an order under subsection (a) of this section may be reviewed only under section 706 of title 5.

§20105. State participation

(a) INVESTIGATIVE AND SURVEILLANCE ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe investigative and surveillance activities necessary to enforce the safety regulations prescribed and orders issued by the Secretary that apply to railroad equipment, facilities, rolling stock, and operations in a State. The State may participate in those activities when the safety practices for railroad equipment, facilities, rolling stock, and operations in the State are regulated by a State authority and the authority submits to the Secretary an annual certification as provided in subsection (b) of this section.

(b) ANNUAL CERTIFICATION.—(1) A State authority's annual certification must include—

(A) a certification that the authority—

(i) has regulatory jurisdiction over the safety practices for railroad equipment, facilities, rolling stock, and operations in the State;

(ii) was given a copy of each safety regulation prescribed and order issued by the Secretary, that applies to the equipment, facilities, rolling stock, or operations, as of the date of certification; and

(iii) is conducting the investigative and surveillance activities prescribed by the Secretary under subsection (a) of this section; and

(B) a report, in the form the Secretary prescribes by regulation, that includes—

(i) the name and address of each railroad carrier subject to the safety jurisdiction of the authority;

(ii) each accident or incident reported during the prior 12 months by a railroad carrier involving a fatality, personal injury requiring hospitalization, or property damage of more than $750 (or a higher amount prescribed by the Secretary), and a summary of the authority's investigation of the cause and circumstances surrounding the accident or incident;

(iii) the record maintenance, reporting, and inspection practices conducted by the authority to aid the Secretary in enforcing railroad safety regulations prescribed and orders issued by the Secretary, including the number of inspections made of railroad equipment, facilities, rolling stock, and operations by the authority during the prior 12 months; and

(iv) other information the Secretary requires.

(2) An annual certification applies to a safety regulation prescribed or order issued after the date of the certification only if the State authority submits an appropriate certification to provide the necessary investigative and surveillance activities.

(3) If, after receipt of an annual certification, the Secretary decides the State authority is not complying satisfactorily with the investigative and surveillance activities prescribed under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary may reject any part of the certification or take other appropriate action to achieve adequate enforcement. The Secretary must give the authority notice and an opportunity for a hearing before taking action under this paragraph. When the Secretary gives notice, the burden of proof is on the authority to show that it is complying satisfactorily with the investigative and surveillance activities prescribed by the Secretary.

(c) AGREEMENT WHEN CERTIFICATION NOT RECEIVED.—(1) If the Secretary does not receive an annual certification under subsection (a) of this section related to any railroad equipment, facility, rolling stock, or operation, the Secretary may make an agreement with a State authority for the authority to provide any part of the investigative and surveillance activities prescribed by the Secretary as necessary to enforce the safety regulations and orders applicable to the equipment, facility, rolling stock, or operation.

(2) The Secretary may terminate any part of an agreement made under this subsection on finding that the authority has not provided every part of the investigative and surveillance activities to which the agreement relates. The Secretary must give the authority notice and an opportunity for a hearing before making such a finding. The finding and termination shall be published in the Federal Register and may not become effective for at least 15 days after the date of publication.

(d) AGREEMENT FOR INVESTIGATIVE AND SURVEILLANCE ACTIVITIES.—In addition to providing for State participation under this section, the Secretary may make an agreement with a State to provide investigative and surveillance activities related to the Secretary's duties under chapters 203–213 of this title.

(e) PAYMENT.—On application by a State authority that has submitted a certification under subsections (a) and (b) of this section or made an agreement under subsection (c) or (d) of this section, the Secretary shall pay not more than 50 percent of the cost of the personnel, equipment, and activities of the authority needed, during the next fiscal year, to carry out a safety program under the certification or agreement. However, the Secretary may pay an authority only when the authority assures the Secretary that it will provide the remaining cost of the safety program and that the total State money expended for the safety program, excluding grants of the United States Government, will be at least as much as the average amount expended for the fiscal years that ended June 30, 1969, and June 30, 1970.

(f) MONITORING.—The Secretary may monitor State investigative and surveillance practices and carry out other inspections and investigations necessary to help enforce this chapter.

§20106. National uniformity of regulation

Laws, regulations, and orders related to railroad safety shall be nationally uniform to the extent practicable. A State may adopt or continue in force a law, regulation, or order related to railroad safety until the Secretary of Transportation prescribes a regulation or issues an order covering the subject matter of the State requirement. A State may adopt or continue in force an additional or more stringent law, regulation, or order related to railroad safety when the law, regulation, or order—

(1) is necessary to eliminate or reduce an essentially local safety hazard;

(2) is not incompatible with a law, regulation, or order of the United States Government; and

(3) does not unreasonably burden interstate commerce.

§20107. Inspection and investigation

(a) GENERAL.—To carry out this part, the Secretary of Transportation may take actions the Secretary considers necessary, including—

(1) conduct investigations, make reports, issue subpenas, require the production of documents, take depositions, and prescribe recordkeeping and reporting requirements; and

(2) delegate to a public entity or qualified person the inspection, examination, and testing of railroad equipment, facilities, rolling stock, operations, and persons.

(b) ENTRY AND INSPECTION.—In carrying out this part, an officer, employee, or agent of the Secretary, at reasonable times and in a reasonable way, may enter and inspect railroad equipment, facilities, rolling stock, operations, and relevant records. When requested, the officer, employee, or agent shall display proper credentials. During an inspection, the officer, employee, or agent is an employee of the United States Government under chapter 171 of title 28.

§20108. Research, development, testing, and training

(a) GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out, as necessary, research, development, testing, evaluation, and training for every area of railroad safety.

(b) CONTRACTS.—To carry out this part, the Secretary may make contracts for, and carry out, research, development, testing, evaluation, and training (particularly for those areas of railroad safety found to need prompt attention).

(c) AMOUNTS FROM NON-GOVERNMENT SOURCES FOR TRAINING SAFETY EMPLOYEES.—The Secretary may request, receive, and expend amounts received from non-United States Government sources for expenses incurred in training safety employees of private industry, State and local authorities, or other public authorities, except State rail safety inspectors participating in training under section 20105 of this title.

§20109. Employee protections

(a) FILING COMPLAINTS AND TESTIFYING.—A railroad carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce may not discharge or in any way discriminate against an employee because the employee, whether acting for the employee or as a representative, has—

(1) filed a complaint or brought or caused to be brought a proceeding related to the enforcement of this part or, as applicable to railroad safety, chapter 51 or 57 of this title; or

(2) testified or will testify in that proceeding.

(b) REFUSING TO WORK BECAUSE OF HAZARDOUS CONDITIONS.—(1) A railroad carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce may not discharge or in any way discriminate against an employee for refusing to work when confronted by a hazardous condition related to the performance of the employee's duties, if—

(A) the refusal is made in good faith and no reasonable alternative to the refusal is available to the employee;

(B) a reasonable individual in the circumstances then confronting the employee would conclude that—

(i) the hazardous condition presents an imminent danger of death or serious injury; and

(ii) the urgency of the situation does not allow sufficient time to eliminate the danger through regular statutory means; and

(C) the employee, where possible, has notified the carrier of the hazardous condition and the intention not to perform further work unless the condition is corrected immediately.

(2) This subsection does not apply to security personnel employed by a carrier to protect individuals and property transported by railroad.

(c) DISPUTE RESOLUTION.—A dispute, grievance, or claim arising under this section is subject to resolution under section 3 of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 153). In a proceeding by the National Railroad Adjustment Board, a division or delegate of the Board, or another board of adjustment established under section 3 to resolve the dispute, grievance, or claim, the proceeding shall be expedited and the dispute, grievance, or claim shall be resolved not later than 180 days after it is filed. If the violation is a form of discrimination that does not involve discharge, suspension, or another action affecting pay, and no other remedy is available under this subsection, the Board, division, delegate, or other board of adjustment may award the employee reasonable damages, including punitive damages, of not more than $20,000.

(d) ELECTION OF REMEDIES.—An employee of a railroad carrier may not seek protection under both this section and another provision of law for the same allegedly unlawful act of the carrier.

(e) DISCLOSURE OF IDENTITY.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, or with the written consent of the employee, the Secretary of Transportation may not disclose the name of an employee of a railroad carrier who has provided information about an alleged violation of this part or, as applicable to railroad safety, chapter 51 or 57 of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those provisions.

(2) The Secretary shall disclose to the Attorney General the name of an employee described in paragraph (1) of this subsection if the matter is referred to the Attorney General for enforcement.

§20110. Effect on employee qualifications and collective bargaining

This chapter does not—

(1) authorize the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe regulations and issue orders related to qualifications of employees, except qualifications specifically related to safety; or

(2) prohibit the bargaining representatives of railroad carriers and their employees from making collective bargaining agreements under the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.), including agreements related to qualifications of employees, that are not inconsistent with regulations prescribed and orders issued under this chapter.

§20111. Enforcement by the Secretary of Transportation

(a) EXCLUSIVE AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Transportation has exclusive authority—

(1) to impose and compromise a civil penalty for a violation of a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary;

(2) except as provided in section 20113 of this title, to request an injunction for a violation of a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary; and

(3) to recommend appropriate action be taken under section 20112(a) of this title.

(b) COMPLIANCE ORDERS.—The Secretary may issue an order directing compliance with this part or with a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued under this part.

(c) ORDERS PROHIBITING INDIVIDUALS FROM PERFORMING SAFETY-SENSITIVE FUNCTIONS.—If an individual's violation of a regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary under this chapter is shown to make that individual unfit for the performance of safety-sensitive functions, the Secretary, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, may issue an order prohibiting the individual from performing safety-sensitive functions in the railroad industry for a specified period of time or until specified conditions are met. This subsection does not affect the Secretary's authority under section 20104 of this title to act on an emergency basis.

(d) REGULATIONS REQUIRING REPORTING OF REMEDIAL ACTIONS.—(1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to require that a railroad carrier notified by the Secretary that imposition of a civil penalty will be recommended for a failure to comply with this part, chapter 51 or 57 of this title, or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those provisions, shall report to the Secretary, not later than the 30th day after the end of the month in which the notification is received—

(A) actions taken to remedy the failure; or

(B) if appropriate remedial actions cannot be taken by that 30th day, an explanation of the reasons for the delay.

(2) The Secretary—

(A) not later than June 3, 1993, shall issue a notice of a regulatory proceeding for proposed regulations to carry out this subsection; and

(B) not later than September 3, 1994, shall prescribe final regulations to carry out this subsection.

§20112. Enforcement by the Attorney General

(a) CIVIL ACTIONS.—At the request of the Secretary of Transportation, the Attorney General may bring a civil action in a district court of the United States—

(1) to enjoin a violation of, or to enforce, a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary;

(2) to collect a civil penalty imposed or an amount agreed on in compromise under section 21301 of this title; or

(3) to enforce a subpena issued by the Secretary under this chapter.

(b) VENUE.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, a civil action under this section may be brought in the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant has its principal executive office. If an action to collect a penalty is against an individual, the action also may be brought in the judicial district in which the individual resides.

(2) A civil action to enforce a subpena issued by the Secretary or a compliance order issued under section 20111(b) of this title may be brought in the judicial district in which the defendant resides, does business, or is found.

§20113. Enforcement by the States

(a) Injunctive Relief.—If the Secretary of Transportation does not begin a civil action under section 20112 of this title to enjoin the violation of a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary not later than 15 days after the date the Secretary receives notice of the violation and a request from a State authority participating in investigative and surveillance activities under section 20105 of this title that the action be brought, the authority may bring a civil action in a district court of the United States to enjoin the violation. This subsection does not apply if the Secretary makes an affirmative written finding that the violation did not occur or that the action is not necessary because of other enforcement action taken by the Secretary related to the violation.

(b) Imposition and Collection of Civil Penalties.—If the Secretary does not impose the applicable civil penalty for a violation of a railroad safety regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary not later than 60 days after the date of receiving notice from a State authority participating in investigative and surveillance activities under section 20105 of this title, the authority may bring a civil action in a district court of the United States to impose and collect the penalty. This paragraph does not apply if the Secretary makes an affirmative written finding that the violation did not occur.

(c) Venue.—A civil action under this section may be brought in the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant has its principal executive office. However, a State authority may not bring an action under this section outside the State.

§20114. Judicial procedures

(a) Criminal Contempt.—In a trial for criminal contempt for violating an injunction or restraining order issued under this chapter, the violation of which is also a violation of this chapter, the defendant may demand a jury trial. The defendant shall be tried as provided in rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (18 App. U.S.C.).

(b) Subpenas For Witnesses.—A subpena for a witness required to attend a district court of the United States in an action brought under this chapter may be served in any judicial district.

(c) Review of Agency Action.—Except as provided in section 20104(c) of this title, a proceeding to review a final action of the Secretary of Transportation under this part or, as applicable to railroad safety, chapter 51 or 57 of this title shall be brought in the appropriate court of appeals as provided in chapter 158 of title 28.

§20115. User fees

(3) may not be based on that part of industry revenues attributable to a railroad carrier or class of railroad carriers.

(b) Collection Procedures.—The Secretary shall prescribe procedures to collect the fees. The Secretary may use the services of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government or of a State or local authority to collect the fees, and may reimburse the department, agency, or instrumentality a reasonable amount for its services.

(c) Collection, Deposit, and Use.—(1) The Secretary shall impose and collect fees under this section for each fiscal year before the end of the fiscal year.

(2) Fees collected under this section shall be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury as offsetting receipts. The fees may be used, to the extent provided in advance in an appropriation law, only to carry out this chapter.

(3) Fees prescribed under this section shall be imposed in an amount sufficient to pay for the costs of activities under this chapter. However, the total fees received for a fiscal year may not be more than 105 percent of the total amount of the appropriations for the fiscal year for activities to be financed by the fees.

(d) Annual Report.—(1) Not later than 90 days after the end of each fiscal year in which fees are collected under this section, the Secretary shall report to Congress on—

(A) the amount of fees collected during that fiscal year;

(B) the impact of the fees on the financial health of the railroad industry and its competitive position relative to each competing mode of transportation; and

(C) the total cost of Government safety activities for each other competing mode of transportation, including any part of that total cost defrayed by Government user fees.

(2) Not later than 90 days after submitting a report for a fiscal year, the Secretary shall submit to Congress recommendations for corrective legislation if the report includes a finding that—

(A) there has been an impact from the fees on the financial health of the railroad industry or its competitive position relative to each competing mode of transportation; or

(B) there is a significant difference in the burden of Government user fees on the railroad industry and other competing modes of transportation.

(e) Expiration.—This section expires on September 30, 1995.

SUBCHAPTER II—PARTICULAR ASPECTS OF SAFETY

§20131. Restricted access to rolling equipment

The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations and issue orders that may be necessary to require that when railroad carrier employees (except train or yard crews) assigned to inspect, test, repair, or service rolling equipment have to work on, under, or between that equipment, every manually operated switch, including each crossover switch, providing access to the track on which the equipment is located is lined against movement to that track and secured by an effective locking device that can be removed only by the class or craft of employees performing the inspection, testing, repair, or service.

§20132. Visible markers for rear cars

(a) General.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations and issue orders that may be necessary to require that—

(1) the rear car of each passenger and commuter train has at least one highly visible marker that is lighted during darkness and when weather conditions restrict clear visibility; and

(2) the rear car of each freight train has highly visible markers during darkness and when weather conditions restrict clear visibility.

(b) Preemption.—Notwithstanding section 20106 of this title, subsection (a) of this section does not prohibit a State from continuing in force a law, regulation, or order in effect on July 8, 1976, related to lighted markers on the rear car of a freight train except to the extent it would cause the car to be in violation of this section.

§20133. Passenger equipment

(a) GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations and issue orders that may be necessary to ensure that the construction, maintenance, and operation of railroad equipment used to transport railroad passengers, whether in commuter or intercity service, maximize the safety of those passengers. The Secretary periodically shall review the regulations and orders and make amendments that may be necessary.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS AND AREAS OF CONCENTRATION.—In prescribing regulations, issuing orders, and making amendments under this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) consider comparable regulations and procedures of the United States Government that apply to other modes of transportation, especially those regulations and procedures carried out by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration;

(2) consider relevant differences between commuter and intercity passenger service;

(3) concentrate on those areas that the Secretary believes present the greatest opportunity for enhancing the safety of the equipment; and

(4) give significant weight to the expenditures that would be necessary to retrofit existing equipment and to change specifications for equipment on order.

(c) CONSULTATION.—In prescribing regulations, issuing orders, and making amendments under this section, the Secretary may consult with Amtrak, public authorities operating railroad passenger service, other railroad carriers transporting passengers, organizations of passengers, and organizations of employees. A consultation is not subject to the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 App. U.S.C.), but minutes of the consultation shall be placed in the public docket of the regulatory proceeding.

§20134. Grade crossings and railroad rights of way

(a) GENERAL.—To the extent practicable, the Secretary of Transportation shall maintain a coordinated effort to develop and carry out solutions to the railroad grade crossing problem and measures to protect pedestrians in densely populated areas along railroad rights of way. To carry out this subsection, the Secretary may use the authority of the Secretary under this chapter and over highway, traffic, and motor vehicle safety and over highway construction.

(b) SIGNAL SYSTEMS AND OTHER DEVICES.—Not later than June 22, 1989, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations and issue orders to ensure the safe maintenance, inspection, and testing of signal systems and devices at railroad highway grade crossings.

(B) stop signs or yield signs installed at grade crossings; and

(C) speed bumps or rumble strips installed on the road surfaces at the approaches to grade crossings.

(2) shall provide minimum training requirements;

(3) shall require comprehensive knowledge of applicable railroad carrier operating practices and rules;

(4) except as provided in subsection (c)(1) of this section, shall require consideration, to the extent the information is available, of the motor vehicle driving record of each individual seeking licensing or certification, including—

(A) any denial, cancellation, revocation, or suspension of a motor vehicle operator's license by a State for cause within the prior 5 years; and

(B) any conviction within the prior 5 years of an offense described in section 30304(a)(3) (A) or (B) of this title;

(5) may require, based on the individual's driving record, disqualification or the granting of a license or certification conditioned on requirements the Secretary prescribes; and

(6) shall require an individual seeking a license or certification—

(A) to request the chief driver licensing official of each State in which the individual has held a motor vehicle operator's license within the prior 5 years to provide information about the individual's driving record to the individual's employer, prospective employer, or the Secretary, as the Secretary requires; and

(c) WAIVERS.—(1) The Secretary shall prescribe standards and establish procedures for waiving subsection (b)(4) of this section for an individual or class of individuals who the Secretary decides are not currently unfit to operate a locomotive. However, the Secretary may waive subsection (b)(4) for an individual or class of individuals with a conviction, cancellation, revocation, or suspension described in paragraph (2) (A) or (B) of this subsection only if the individual or class, after the conviction, cancellation, revocation, or suspension, successfully completes a rehabilitation program established by a railroad carrier or approved by the Secretary.

(2) If an individual, after the conviction, cancellation, revocation, or suspension, successfully completes a rehabilitation program established by a railroad carrier or approved by the Secretary, the individual may not be denied a license or certification under subsection (b)(4) of this section because of—

(A) a conviction for operating a motor vehicle when under the influence of, or impaired by, alcohol or a controlled substance; or

(B) the cancellation, revocation, or suspension of the individual's motor vehicle operator's license for operating a motor vehicle when under the influence of, or impaired by, alcohol or a controlled substance.

(2) is designed to resist tampering.

(b) REGULATIONS AND ORDERS.—Not later than December 22, 1989, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations and issue orders that may be necessary to enhance safety by requiring that a train be equipped with an event recorder not later than one year after the regulations are prescribed and the orders are issued. However, if the Secretary finds it is impracticable to equip trains within that one-year period, the Secretary may extend the period to a date that is not later than 18 months after the regulations are prescribed and the orders are issued.

§20138. Tampering with safety and operational monitoring devices

§20140. Alcohol and controlled substances testing

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "controlled substance" means any substance under section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802) specified by the Secretary of Transportation.

(b) GENERAL.—(1) In the interest of safety, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations and issue orders, not later than October 28, 1992, related to alcohol and controlled substances use in railroad operations. The regulations shall establish a program requiring—

(A) a railroad carrier to conduct preemployment, reasonable suspicion, random, and post-accident testing of all railroad employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Secretary) for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation; and

(B) when the Secretary considers it appropriate, disqualification for an established period of time or dismissal of any employee found—

(i) to have used or been impaired by alcohol when on duty; or

(2) When the Secretary of Transportation considers it appropriate in the interest of safety, the Secretary may prescribe regulations and issue orders requiring railroad carriers to conduct periodic recurring testing of railroad employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Secretary) for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation.

(c) TESTING AND LABORATORY REQUIREMENTS.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall develop requirements that shall—

(1) promote, to the maximum extent practicable, individual privacy in the collection of specimens;

(5) provide that each specimen be subdivided, secured, and labeled in the presence of the tested individual and that a part of the specimen be retained in a secure manner to prevent the possibility of tampering, so that if the individual's confirmation test results are positive the individual has an opportunity to have the retained part tested by a 2d confirmation test done independently at another certified laboratory if the individual requests the 2d confirmation test not later than 3 days after being advised of the results of the first confirmation test;

(6) ensure appropriate safeguards for testing to detect and quantify alcohol in breath and body fluid samples, including urine and blood, through the development of regulations that may be necessary and in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services;

(7) provide for the confidentiality of test results and medical information (other than information about alcohol or a controlled substance) of employees, except that this clause does not prevent the use of test results for the orderly imposition of appropriate sanctions under this section; and

(8) ensure that employees are selected for tests by nondiscriminatory and impartial methods, so that no employee is harassed by being treated differently from other employees in similar circumstances.

(d) REHABILITATION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations or issue orders establishing requirements for rehabilitation programs that at least provide for the identification and opportunity for treatment of railroad employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Secretary) in need of assistance in resolving problems with the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation. The Secretary shall decide on the circumstances under which employees shall be required to participate in a program. Each railroad carrier is encouraged to make such a program available to all of its employees in addition to employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions. This subsection does not prevent a railroad carrier from establishing a program under this subsection in cooperation with another railroad carrier.

(e) INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS AND FOREIGN LAWS AND REGULATIONS.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary of Transportation—

(1) shall establish only requirements that are consistent with international obligations of the United States; and

(2) shall consider applicable laws and regulations of foreign countries.

(2) The Secretary may consider petitions to amend the regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection to allow the use of alternative technologies that meet the same basic performance requirements established by the regulations.

(3) In developing the regulations required by paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary shall consider information presented under subsection (a) of this section.

(c) EXCLUSIONS.—The Secretary may exclude from regulations prescribed under subsections (a) and (b) of this section any category of trains or rail operations if the Secretary decides that the exclusion is in the public interest and is consistent with railroad safety. The Secretary shall make public the reasons for the exclusion. The Secretary at least shall exclude from the regulations prescribed under subsection (b)—

(1) trains that have manned cabooses;

(2) passenger trains with emergency brakes;

(3) trains that operate only on track that is not part of the general railroad system;

(2) the need for revisions to regulations on track excepted from track safety standards; and

(3) employee safety.

(b) REVISION OF REGULATIONS.—Not later than September 3, 1994, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations and issue orders to revise track safety standards, considering safety information presented during the review under subsection (a) of this section and the report of the Comptroller General submitted under subsection (c) of this section.

(c) COMPTROLLER GENERAL'S STUDY AND REPORT.—The Comptroller General shall study the effectiveness of the Secretary's enforcement of track safety standards, with particular attention to recent relevant railroad accident experience and information. Not later than September 3, 1993, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to Congress and the Secretary on the results of the study, with recommendations for improving enforcement of those standards.

§20143. Locomotive visibility

(b) INTERIM REGULATIONS.—Not later than December 31, 1992, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe temporary regulations identifying ditch, crossing, strobe, and oscillating lights as temporary locomotive visibility measures and authorizing and encouraging the installation and use of those lights. Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5 does not apply to a temporary regulation or to an amendment to a temporary regulation.

(c) REVIEW OF REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall review the Secretary's regulations on locomotive visibility. Not later than December 31, 1993, the Secretary shall complete the current research of the Department of Transportation on locomotive visibility. In conducting the review, the Secretary shall collect relevant information from operational experience by rail carriers using enhanced visibility measures.

(d) REGULATORY PROCEEDING.—Not later than June 30, 1994, the Secretary shall begin a regulatory proceeding to prescribe final regulations requiring substantially enhanced locomotive visibility measures. In the proceeding, the Secretary shall consider at least—

(5) the effect of an enhanced visibility measure on the vision, health, and safety of train crew members; and

(6) separate standards for self-propelled, push-pull, and multi-unit passenger operations without a dedicated head end locomotive.

(e) FINAL REGULATIONS.—(1) Not later than June 30, 1995, the Secretary shall prescribe final regulations requiring enhanced locomotive visibility measures. The Secretary shall require that not later than December 31, 1997, a locomotive not excluded from the regulations be equipped with temporary visibility measures under subsection (b) of this section or the visibility measures the final regulations require.

(2) In prescribing regulations under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary may exclude a category of trains or rail operations from a specific visibility requirement if the Secretary decides the exclusion is in the public interest and is consistent with rail safety, including grade-crossing safety.

(3) A locomotive equipped with temporary visibility measures prescribed under subsection (b) of this section when final regulations are prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection is deemed to be complying with the final regulations for 4 years after the final regulations are prescribed.

§20144. Blue signal protection for on-track vehicles

The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations applying blue signal protection to on-track vehicles where rest is provided.

Sec.
20301. Definition and nonapplication.
20302. General requirements.
20303. Moving defective and insecure vehicles needing repairs.
20304. Assumption of risk by employees.
20305. Inspection of mail cars.
20306. Exemption for technological improvements.

§20301. Definition and nonapplication

(a) DEFINITION.—In this chapter, "vehicle" means a car, locomotive, tender, or similar vehicle.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—This chapter does not apply to the following:

(1) a train of 4-wheel coal cars.

(2) a train of 8-wheel standard logging cars if the height of each car from the top of the rail to the center of the coupling is not more than 25 inches.

(3) a locomotive used in hauling a train referred to in clause (2) of this subsection when the locomotive and cars of the train are used only to transport logs.

§20302. General requirements

(a) GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section and section 20303 of this title, a railroad carrier may use or allow to be used on any of its railroad lines—

(1) a vehicle only if it is equipped with—

(A) couplers coupling automatically by impact, and capable of being uncoupled, without the necessity of individuals going between the ends of the vehicles;

(B) secure sill steps and efficient hand brakes; and

(C) secure ladders and running boards when required by the Secretary of Transportation, and, if ladders are required, secure handholds or grab irons on its roof at the top of each ladder;

(2) except as otherwise ordered by the Secretary, a vehicle only if it is equipped with secure grab irons or handholds on its ends and sides for greater security to individuals in coupling and uncoupling vehicles;

(3) a vehicle only if it complies with the standard height of drawbars required by regulations prescribed by the Secretary;

(4) a locomotive only if it is equipped with a power-driving wheel brake and appliances for operating the train-brake system; and

(5) a train only if—

(A) enough of the vehicles in the train are equipped with power or train brakes so that the engineer on the locomotive hauling the train can control the train's speed without the necessity of brake operators using the common hand brakes for that purpose; and

(B) at least 50 percent of the vehicles in the train are equipped with power or train brakes and the engineer is using the power or train brakes on those vehicles and on all other vehicles equipped with them that are associated with those vehicles in the train.

(b) REFUSAL TO RECEIVE VEHICLES NOT PROPERLY EQUIPPED.—A railroad carrier complying with subsection (a)(5)(A) of this section may refuse to receive from a railroad line of a connecting railroad carrier or a shipper a vehicle that is not equipped with power or train brakes that will work and readily interchange with the power or train brakes in use on the vehicles of the complying railroad carrier.

(c) COMBINED VEHICLES LOADING AND HAULING LONG COMMODITIES.—Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section, when vehicles are combined to load and haul long commodities, only one of the vehicles must have hand brakes during the loading and hauling.

(d) AUTHORITY TO CHANGE REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may—

(1) change the number, dimensions, locations, and manner of application prescribed by the Secretary for safety appliances required by subsection (a)(1)(B) and (C) and (2) of this section only for good cause and after providing an opportunity for a full hearing;

(2) amend regulations for installing, inspecting, maintaining, and repairing power and train brakes only for the purpose of achieving safety; and

(3) increase, after an opportunity for a full hearing, the minimum percentage of vehicles in a train that are required by subsection (a)(5)(B) of this section to be equipped and used with power or train brakes.

(e) SERVICES OF ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN RAILROADS.—In carrying out subsection (d)(2) and (3) of this section, the Secretary may use the services of the Association of American Railroads.

§20303. Moving defective and insecure vehicles needing repairs

(a) GENERAL.—A vehicle that is equipped in compliance with this chapter whose equipment becomes defective or insecure nevertheless may be moved when necessary to make repairs, without a penalty being imposed under section 21302 of this title, from the place at which the defect or insecurity was first discovered to the nearest available place at which the repairs can be made—

(1) on the railroad line on which the defect or insecurity was discovered; or

(2) at the option of a connecting railroad carrier, on the railroad line of the connecting carrier, if not farther than the place of repair described in clause (1) of this subsection.

(b) USE OF CHAINS INSTEAD OF DRAWBARS.—A vehicle in a revenue train or in association with commercially-used vehicles may be moved under this section with chains instead of drawbars only when the vehicle contains livestock or perishable freight.

(c) LIABILITY.—The movement of a vehicle under this section is at the risk only of the railroad carrier doing the moving. This section does not relieve a carrier from liability in a proceeding to recover damages for death or injury of a railroad employee arising from the movement of a vehicle with equipment that is defective, insecure, or not maintained in compliance with this chapter.

§20304. Assumption of risk by employees

An employee of a railroad carrier injured by a vehicle or train used in violation of section 20302(a)(1)(A), (2), (4), or (5)(A) of this title does not assume the risk of injury resulting from the violation, even if the employee continues to be employed by the carrier after learning of the violation.

§20305. Inspection of mail cars

The Secretary of Transportation shall inspect the construction, adaptability, design, and condition of mail cars used on railroads in the United States. The Secretary shall make a report on the inspection and submit a copy of the report to the United States Postal Service.

§20306. Exemption for technological improvements

(a) GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation may exempt from the requirements of this chapter railroad equipment or equipment that will be operated on rails, when those requirements preclude the development or implementation of more efficient railroad transportation equipment or other transportation innovations under existing law.

(b) CONDITIONS FOR EXEMPTION.—The Secretary may grant an exemption under subsection (a) of this section only on the basis of—

(1) findings based on evidence developed at a hearing; or

(2) an agreement between national railroad labor representatives and the developer of the new equipment or technology.

CHAPTER 205—SIGNAL SYSTEMS

Sec.
20501. Definition.
20502. Requirements for installation and use.
20503. Amending regulations and changing requirements.
20504. Inspection, testing, and investigation.
20505. Reports of malfunctions and accidents.

§20501. Definition

In this chapter, "signal system" means a block signal system, an interlocking, automatic train stop, train control, or cab-signal device, or a similar appliance, method, device, or system intended to promote safety in railroad operations.

§20502. Requirements for installation and use

(a) INSTALLATION.—(1) When the Secretary of Transportation decides after an investigation that it is necessary in the public interest, the Secretary may order a railroad carrier to install, on any part of its railroad line, a signal system that complies with requirements of the Secretary. The order must allow the carrier a reasonable time to complete the installation. A carrier may discontinue or materially alter a signal system required under this paragraph only with the approval of the Secretary.

(2) A railroad carrier ordered under paragraph (1) of this subsection to install a signal system on one part of its railroad line may not be held negligent for not installing the system on any part of its line that was not included in the order. If an accident or incident occurs on a part of the line on which the signal system was not required to be installed and was not installed, the use of the system on another part of the line may not be considered in a civil action brought because of the accident or incident.

(b) USE.—A railroad carrier may allow a signal system to be used on its railroad line only when the system, including its controlling and operating appurtenances—

(1) may be operated safely without unnecessary risk of personal injury; and

(2) has been inspected and can meet any test prescribed under this chapter.

§20503. Amending regulations and changing requirements

The Secretary of Transportation may amend a regulation or change a requirement applicable to a railroad carrier for installing, maintaining, inspecting, or repairing a signal system under this chapter—

(1) when the carrier files with the Secretary a request for the amendment or change and the Secretary approves the request; or

(2) on the Secretary's own initiative for good cause shown.

§20504. Inspection, testing, and investigation

(a) SYSTEMS IN USE.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may—

(A) inspect and test a signal system used by a railroad carrier; and

(B) decide whether the system is in safe operating condition.

(2) In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary may employ only an individual who—

(A) has no interest in a patented article required to be used on or with a signal system; and

(B) has no financial interest in a railroad carrier or in a concern dealing in railroad supplies.

(b) SYSTEMS SUBMITTED FOR INVESTIGATION AND TESTING.—The Secretary may investigate, test, and report on the use of and need for a signal system, without cost to the United States Government, when the system is submitted in completed shape for investigation and testing.

§20505. Reports of malfunctions and accidents

In the way and to the extent required by the Secretary of Transportation, a railroad carrier shall report to the Secretary a failure of a signal system to function as intended. If the failure results in an accident or incident causing injury to an individual or property that is required to be reported under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the carrier owning or maintaining the signal system shall report to the Secretary immediately in writing the fact of the accident or incident.

CHAPTER 207—LOCOMOTIVES

Sec.

20701. Requirements for use.
20702. Inspections, repairs, and inspection and repair reports.
20703. Accident reports and investigations.

§20701. Requirements for use

A railroad carrier may use or allow to be used a locomotive or tender on its railroad line only when the locomotive or tender and its parts and appurtenances—

(1) are in proper condition and safe to operate without unnecessary danger of personal injury;

(2) have been inspected as required under this chapter and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter; and

(3) can withstand every test prescribed by the Secretary under this chapter.

§20702. Inspections, repairs, and inspection and repair reports

(a) GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) become familiar, so far as practicable, with the condition of every locomotive and tender and its parts and appurtenances;

(2) inspect every locomotive and tender and its parts and appurtenances as necessary to carry out this chapter, but not necessarily at stated times or at regular intervals; and

(3) ensure that every railroad carrier makes inspections of locomotives and tenders and their parts and appurtenances as required by regulations prescribed by the Secretary and repairs every defect that is disclosed by an inspection before a defective locomotive, tender, part, or appurtenance is used again.

(b) NONCOMPLYING LOCOMOTIVES, TENDERS, AND PARTS.—(1) When the Secretary finds that a locomotive, tender, or locomotive or tender part or appurtenance owned or operated by a railroad carrier does not comply with this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter, the Secretary shall give the carrier written notice describing any defect resulting in noncompliance. Not later than 5 days after receiving the notice of noncompliance, the carrier may submit a written request for a reinspection. On receiving the request, the Secretary shall provide for the reinspection by an officer or employee of the Department of Transportation who did not make the original inspection. The reinspection shall be made not later than 15 days after the date the Secretary gives the notice of noncompliance.

(2) Immediately after the reinspection is completed, the Secretary shall give written notice to the railroad carrier stating whether the locomotive, tender, part, or appurtenance is in compliance. If the original finding of noncompliance is sustained, the carrier has 30 days after receipt of the notice to file an appeal with the Secretary. If the carrier files an appeal, the Secretary, after providing an opportunity for a proceeding, may revise or set aside the finding of noncompliance.

(3) A locomotive, tender, part, or appurtenance found not in compliance under this subsection may be used only after it is—

(A) repaired to comply with this chapter and regulations prescribed under this chapter; or

(B) found on reinspection or appeal to be in compliance.

(c) REPORTS.—A railroad carrier shall make and keep, in the way the Secretary prescribes by regulation, a report of every—

(1) inspection made under regulations prescribed by the Secretary; and

(2) repair made of a defect disclosed by such an inspection.

(d) CHANGES IN INSPECTION PROCEDURES.—A railroad carrier may change a rule or instruction of the carrier governing the inspection by the carrier of the locomotives and tenders and locomotive and tender parts and appurtenances of the carrier when the Secretary approves a request filed by the carrier to make the change.

§20703. Accident reports and investigations

(a) ACCIDENT REPORTS AND SCENE PRESERVATION.—When the failure of a locomotive, tender, or locomotive or tender part or appurtenance results in an accident or incident causing serious personal injury or death, the railroad carrier owning or operating the locomotive or tender—

(1) immediately shall file with the Secretary of Transportation a written statement of the fact of the accident or incident; and

(2) when the locomotive is disabled to the extent it cannot be operated under its own power, shall preserve intact all parts affected by the accident or incident, if possible without interfering with traffic, until an investigation of the accident or incident is completed.

(b) INVESTIGATIONS.—The Secretary shall—

(1) investigate each accident and incident reported under subsection (a) of this section;

(2) inspect each part affected by the accident or incident; and

(3) make a complete and detailed report on the cause of the accident or incident.

(c) PUBLICATION AND USE OF INVESTIGATION REPORTS.—When the Secretary considers publication to be in the public interest, the Secretary may publish a report of an investigation made under this section, stating the cause of the accident or incident and making appropriate recommendations. No part of a report may be admitted into evidence or used in a civil action for damages resulting from a matter mentioned in the report.

CHAPTER 209—ACCIDENTS AND INCIDENTS

Sec.

20901. Reports.
20902. Investigations.
20903. Reports not evidence in civil actions for damages.

§20901. Reports

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—Not later than 30 days after the end of each month, a railroad carrier shall file a report with the Secretary of Transportation on all accidents and incidents resulting in injury or death to an individual or damage to equipment or a roadbed arising from the carrier's operations during the month. The report shall be under oath and shall state the nature, cause, and circumstances of each reported accident or incident. If a railroad carrier assigns human error as a cause, the report shall include, at the option of each employee whose error is alleged, a statement by the employee explaining any factors the employee alleges contributed to the accident or incident.

(b) MONETARY THRESHOLD FOR REPORTING.—(1) In establishing or changing a monetary threshold for the reporting of a railroad accident or incident, the Secretary shall base damage cost calculations only on publicly available information obtained from—

(A) the Bureau of Labor Statistics; or

(B) another department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government if the information has been collected through objective, statistically sound survey methods or has been previously subject to a public notice and comment process in a proceeding of a Government department, agency, or instrumentality.

(2) If information is not available as provided in paragraph (1)(A) or (B) of this subsection, the Secretary may use any other source to obtain the information. However, use of the information shall be subject to public notice and an opportunity for written comment.

§20902. Investigations

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Transportation, or an impartial investigator authorized by the Secretary, may investigate—

(1) an accident or incident resulting in serious injury to an individual or to railroad property, occurring on the railroad line of a railroad carrier; and

(2) an accident or incident reported under section 20505 of this title.

(b) OTHER DUTIES AND POWERS.—In carrying out an investigation, the Secretary or authorized investigator may subpena witnesses, require the production of records, exhibits, and other evidence, administer oaths, and take testimony. If the accident or incident is investigated by a commission of the State in which it occurred, the Secretary, if convenient, shall carry out the investigation at the same time as, and in coordination with, the commission's investigation. The railroad carrier on whose railroad line the accident or incident occurred shall provide reasonable facilities to the Secretary for the investigation.

(c) REPORTS.—When in the public interest, the Secretary shall make a report of the investigation, stating the cause of the accident or incident and making recommendations the Secretary considers appropriate. The Secretary shall publish the report in a way the Secretary considers appropriate.

§20903. Reports not evidence in civil actions for damages

No part of an accident or incident report filed by a railroad carrier under section 20901 of this title or made by the Secretary of Transportation under section 20902 of this title may be used in a civil action for damages resulting from a matter mentioned in the report.

21101. Definitions.
21102. Nonapplication and exemption.
21103. Limitations on duty hours of train employees.
21104. Limitations on duty hours of signal employees.
21105. Limitations on duty hours of dispatching service employees.
21106. Limitations on employee sleeping quarters.

(4) "signal employee" means an individual employed by a railroad carrier who is engaged in installing, repairing, or maintaining signal systems.

(5) "train employee" means an individual engaged in or connected with the movement of a train, including a hostler.

§21102. Nonapplication and exemption

(a) GENERAL.—This chapter does not apply to a situation involving any of the following:

(1) a casualty.

(2) an unavoidable accident.

(3) an act of God.

(4) a delay resulting from a cause unknown and unforeseeable to a railroad carrier or its officer or agent in charge of the employee when the employee left a terminal.

(b) EXEMPTION.—The Secretary of Transportation may exempt a railroad carrier having not more than 15 employees covered by this chapter from the limitations imposed by this chapter. The Secretary may allow the exemption after a full hearing, for good cause shown, and on deciding that the exemption is in the public interest and will not affect safety adversely. The exemption shall be for a specific period of time and is subject to review at least annually. The exemption may not authorize a carrier to require or allow its employees to be on duty more than a total of 16 hours in a 24-hour period.

§21103. Limitations on duty hours of train employees

(a) GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a railroad carrier and its officers and agents may not require or allow a train employee to remain or go on duty—

(1) unless that employee has had at least 8 consecutive hours off duty during the prior 24 hours; or

(2) after that employee has been on duty for 12 consecutive hours, until that employee has had at least 10 consecutive hours off duty.

(b) DETERMINING TIME ON DUTY.—In determining under subsection (a) of this section the time a train employee is on or off duty, the following rules apply:

(1) Time on duty begins when the employee reports for duty and ends when the employee is finally released from duty.

(2) Time the employee is engaged in or connected with the movement of a train is time on duty.

(3) Time spent performing any other service for the railroad carrier during a 24-hour period in which the employee is engaged in or connected with the movement of a train is time on duty.

(4) Time spent in deadhead transportation to a duty assignment is time on duty, but time spent in deadhead transportation from a duty assignment to the place of final release is neither time on duty nor time off duty.

(5) An interim period available for rest at a place other than a designated terminal is time on duty.

(6) An interim period available for less than 4 hours rest at a designated terminal is time on duty.

(7) An interim period available for at least 4 hours rest at a place with suitable facilities for food and lodging is not time on duty when the employee is prevented from getting to the employee's designated terminal by any of the following:

(A) a casualty.

(B) a track obstruction.

(C) an act of God.

(D) a derailment or major equipment failure resulting from a cause that was unknown and unforeseeable to the railroad carrier or its officer or agent in charge of that employee when that employee left the designated terminal.

(c) EMERGENCIES.—A train employee on the crew of a wreck or relief train may be allowed to remain or go on duty for not more than 4 additional hours in any period of 24 consecutive hours when an emergency exists and the work of the crew is related to the emergency. In this subsection, an emergency ends when the track is cleared and the railroad line is open for traffic.

§21104. Limitations on duty hours of signal employees

(a) GENERAL.—(1) In paragraph (2)(C) of this subsection, "24-hour period" means the period beginning when a signal employee reports for duty immediately after 8 consecutive hours off duty or, when required under paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection, after 10 consecutive hours off duty.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a railroad carrier and its officers and agents may not require or allow a signal employee to remain or go on duty—

(A) unless that employee has had at least 8 consecutive hours off duty during the prior 24 hours;

(B) after that employee has been on duty for 12 consecutive hours, until that employee has had at least 10 consecutive hours off duty; or

(C) after that employee has been on duty a total of 12 hours during a 24-hour period, or after the end of that 24-hour period, whichever occurs first, until that employee has had at least 8 consecutive hours off duty.

(b) DETERMINING TIME ON DUTY.—In determining under subsection (a) of this section the time a signal employee is on duty or off duty, the following rules apply:

(1) Time on duty begins when the employee reports for duty and ends when the employee is finally released from duty.

(2) Time spent performing any other service for the railroad carrier during a 24-hour period in which the employee is engaged in installing, repairing, or maintaining signal systems is time on duty.

(3) Time spent returning from a trouble call, whether the employee goes directly to the employee's residence or by way of the employee's headquarters, is neither time on duty nor time off duty, except that up to one hour of that time spent returning from the final trouble call of a period of continuous or broken service is time off duty.

(4) If, at the end of scheduled duty hours, an employee has not completed the trip from the final outlying worksite of the duty period to the employee's headquarters or directly to the employee's residence, the time after the scheduled duty hours necessarily spent in completing the trip to the residence or headquarters is neither time on duty nor time off duty.

(5) If an employee is released from duty at an outlying worksite before the end of the employee's scheduled duty hours to comply with this section, the time necessary for the trip from the worksite to the employee's headquarters or directly to the employee's residence is neither time on duty nor time off duty.

(6) Time spent in transportation on an ontrack vehicle, including time referred to in paragraphs (3)–(5) of this subsection, is time on duty.

(7) A regularly scheduled meal period or another release period of at least 30 minutes but not more than one hour is time off duty and does not break the continuity of service of the employee under this section, but a release period of more than one hour is time off duty and does break the continuity of service.

(c) EMERGENCIES.—A signal employee may be allowed to remain or go on duty for not more than 4 additional hours in any period of 24 consecutive hours when an emergency exists and the work of that employee is related to the emergency. In this subsection, an emergency ends when the signal system is restored to service.

§21105. Limitations on duty hours of dispatching service employees

(a) APPLICATION.—This section applies, rather than section 21103 or 21104 of this title, to a train employee or signal employee during any period of time the employee is performing duties of a dispatching service employee.

(b) GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section, a dispatching service employee may not be required or allowed to remain or go on duty for more than—

(1) a total of 9 hours during a 24-hour period in a tower, office, station, or place at which at least 2 shifts are employed; or

(2) a total of 12 hours during a 24-hour period in a tower, office, station, or place at which only one shift is employed.

(c) DETERMINING TIME ON DUTY.—Under subsection (b) of this section, time spent performing any other service for the railroad carrier during a 24-hour period in which the employee is on duty in a tower, office, station, or other place is time on duty in that tower, office, station, or place.

(d) EMERGENCIES.—When an emergency exists, a dispatching service employee may be allowed to remain or go on duty for not more than 4 additional hours during a period of 24 consecutive hours for not more than 3 days during a period of 7 consecutive days.

§21106. Limitations on employee sleeping quarters

A railroad carrier and its officers and agents—

(1) may provide sleeping quarters (including crew quarters, camp or bunk cars, and trailers) for employees, and any individuals employed to maintain the right of way of a railroad carrier, only if the sleeping quarters are clean, safe, and sanitary and give those employees and individuals an opportunity for rest free from the interruptions caused by noise under the control of the carrier; and

(2) may not begin, after July 7, 1976, construction or reconstruction of sleeping quarters referred to in clause (1) of this section in an area or in the immediate vicinity of an area, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation, in which railroad switching or humping operations are performed.

§21107. Maximum duty hours and subjects of collective bargaining

The number of hours established by this chapter that an employee may be required or allowed to be on duty is the maximum number of hours consistent with safety. Shorter hours of service and time on duty of an employee are proper subjects for collective bargaining between a railroad carrier and its employees.

21304. Willfulness requirement for penalties against individuals.

SUBCHAPTER II—CRIMINAL PENALTIES

21311. Records and reports.

SUBCHAPTER I—CIVIL PENALTIES

§21301. Chapter 201 general violations

(a) PENALTY.—(1) Subject to section 21304 of this title, a person violating a regulation prescribed or order issued by the Secretary of Transportation under chapter 201 of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty. The Secretary shall impose the penalty applicable under paragraph (2) of this subsection. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(2) The Secretary shall include in, or make applicable to, each regulation prescribed and order issued under chapter 201 of this title a civil penalty for a violation. The amount of the penalty shall be at least $500 but not more than $10,000. However, when a grossly negligent violation or a pattern of repeated violations has caused an imminent hazard of death or injury to individuals, or has caused death or injury, the amount may be not more than $20,000.

(3) The Secretary may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under this subsection to not less than $500 before referring the matter to the Attorney General for collection. In determining the amount of a compromise, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue to do business; and

(C) other matters that justice requires.

(b) SETOFF.—The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this section from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(c) DEPOSIT IN TREASURY.—A civil penalty collected under this section or section 20113(b) of this title shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

§21302. Chapter 201 accident and incident violations and chapter 203–209 violations

(a) PENALTY.—(1) Subject to section 21304 of this title, a person violating a regulation prescribed or order issued under chapter 201 of this title related to accident and incident reporting or investigation, or violating chapters 203–209 of this title or a regulation or requirement prescribed or order issued under chapters 203–209, is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty. An act by an individual that causes a railroad carrier to be in violation is a violation. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation imposes a civil penalty under this subsection. The amount of the penalty shall be at least $500 but not more than $10,000. However, when a grossly negligent violation or a pattern of repeated violations has caused an imminent hazard of death or injury to individuals, or has caused death or injury, the amount may be not more than $20,000.

(3) The Secretary may compromise the amount of the civil penalty under section 3711 of title 31. In determining the amount of a compromise, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue to do business; and

(C) other matters that justice requires.

(4) If the Secretary does not compromise the amount of the civil penalty, the Secretary shall refer the matter to the Attorney General for collection.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS TO COLLECT.—The Attorney General shall bring a civil action in a district court of the United States to collect a civil penalty that is referred to the Attorney General for collection under subsection (a) of this section. The action may be brought in the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant has its principal executive office. If the action is against an individual, the action also may be brought in the judicial district in which the individual resides.

§21303. Chapter 211 violations

(a) PENALTY.—(1) Subject to section 21304 of this title, a person violating chapter 211 of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty. An act by an individual that causes a railroad carrier to be in violation is a violation. For a violation of section 21106 of this title, a separate violation occurs for each day a facility is not in compliance.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation imposes a civil penalty under this subsection. The amount of the penalty shall be at least $500 but not more than $10,000. However, when a grossly negligent violation or a pattern of repeated violations has caused an imminent hazard of death or injury to individuals, or has caused death or injury, the amount may be not more than $20,000.

(3) The Secretary may compromise the amount of the civil penalty under section 3711 of title 31. In determining the amount of a compromise, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue to do business; and

(C) other matters that justice requires.

(4) If the Secretary does not compromise the amount of the civil penalty, the Secretary shall refer the matter to the Attorney General for collection.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS TO COLLECT.—(1) The Attorney General shall bring a civil action in a district court of the United States to collect a civil penalty that is referred to the Attorney General for collection under subsection (a) of this section after satisfactory information is presented to the Attorney General. The action may be brought in the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant has its principal executive office. If the action is against an individual, the action also may be brought in the judicial district in which the individual resides.

(2) A civil action under this subsection must be brought not later than 2 years after the date of the violation unless administrative notification under section 3711 of title 31 is given within that 2-year period to the person committing the violation. However, even if notification is given, the action must be brought within the period specified in section 2462 of title 28.

§22101. Financial assistance for State projects

(a) GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall provide financial assistance to a State, as provided under this chapter, for a rail freight assistance project of the State when a rail carrier subject to subchapter I of chapter 105 of this title maintains a rail line in the State. The assistance is for the cost of—

(1) acquiring, in any way the State considers appropriate, an interest in a rail line or rail property to maintain existing, or to provide future, rail freight transportation, but only if the Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized, or exempted from the requirements of that authorization, the abandonment of, or the discontinuance of rail transportation on, the rail line related to the project;

(2) improving and rehabilitating rail property on a rail line to the extent necessary to allow adequate and efficient rail freight transportation on the line, but only if the rail carrier certifies that the rail line related to the project carried not more than 5,000,000 gross ton-miles of freight a mile in the prior year; and

(3) building rail or rail-related facilities (including new connections between at least 2 existing rail lines, intermodal freight terminals, sidings, bridges, and relocation of existing lines) to improve the quality and efficiency of the rail freight transportation, but only if the rail carrier certifies that the rail line related to the project carried not more than 5,000,000 gross ton-miles of freight a mile in the prior year.

(b) CALCULATING COST-BENEFIT RATIO.—The Secretary shall establish a methodology for calculating the ratio of benefits to costs of projects proposed under this chapter. In establishing the methodology, the Secretary shall consider the need for equitable treatment of different regions of the United States and different commodities transported by rail. The establishment of the methodology is committed to the discretion of the Secretary.

(c) CONDITIONS.—(1) Assistance for a project shall be provided under this chapter only if—

(A) a rail carrier certifies that the rail line related to the project carried more than 20 carloads a mile during the most recent year during which transportation was provided by the carrier on the line; and

(B) the ratio of benefits to costs for the project, as calculated using the methodology established under subsection (b) of this section, is more than 1.0.

(2) If the rail carrier that provided the transportation on the rail line is no longer in existence, the applicant for the project shall provide the information required by the certification under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection in the way the Secretary prescribes.

(3) The Secretary may waive the requirement of paragraph (1)(A) or (2) of this subsection if the Secretary—

(A) decides that the rail line has contractual guarantees of at least 40 carloads a mile for each of the first 2 years of operation of the proposed project; and

(B) finds that there is a reasonable expectation that the contractual guarantees will be fulfilled.

(d) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNTS.—A State may not receive more than 15 percent of the amounts provided in a fiscal year under this chapter. Not more than 20 percent of the amounts available under this chapter may be provided in a fiscal year for any one project.

§22102. Eligibility

A State is eligible to receive financial assistance under this chapter only when the State complies with regulations the Secretary of Transportation prescribes under this chapter and the Secretary decides that—

(1) the State has an adequate plan for rail transportation in the State and a suitable process for updating, revising, and modifying the plan;

(2) the State plan is administered or coordinated by a designated State authority and provides for a fair distribution of resources;

(3) the State authority—

(A) is authorized to develop, promote, supervise, and support safe, adequate, and efficient rail transportation;

(B) employs or will employ sufficient qualified and trained personnel;

(C) maintains or will maintain adequate programs of investigation, research, promotion, and development with opportunity for public participation; and

(D) is designated and directed to take all practicable steps (by itself or with other State authorities) to improve rail transportation safety and reduce energy use and pollution related to transportation; and

(4) the State has ensured that it maintains or will maintain adequate procedures for financial control, accounting, and performance evaluation for the proper use of assistance provided by the United States Government.

§22103. Applications

(a) FILING.—A State must file an application with the Secretary of Transportation for financial assistance for a project described under section 22101(a) of this title not later than January 1 of the fiscal year for which amounts have been appropriated. However, for a fiscal year for which the authorization of appropriations for assistance under this chapter has not been enacted by the first day of the fiscal year, the State must file the application not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of a law authorizing the appropriations for that fiscal year. The Secretary shall prescribe the form of the application.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In considering an application under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider the following:

(1) the percentage of rail lines that rail carriers have identified to the Interstate Commerce Commission for abandonment or potential abandonment in the State.

(2) the likelihood of future abandonments in the State.

(3) the ratio of benefits to costs for a proposed project calculated using the methodology established under section 22101(b) of this title.

(4) the likelihood that the rail line will continue operating with assistance.

(5) the impact of rail bankruptcies, rail restructuring, and rail mergers on the State.

§22104. State rail plan financing

(a) ENTITLEMENT AND USES.—On the first day of each fiscal year, each State is entitled to $36,000 of the amounts made available under section 22108 of this title during that fiscal year to be used—

(1) to establish, update, revise, and modify the State plan required by section 22102 of this title; or

(2) to carry out projects described in section 22101(a)(1), (2), or (3) of this title, as designated by the State, if those projects meet the requirements of section 22101(c)(1)(B) of this title.

(b) APPLICATIONS.—Each State must apply for amounts under this section not later than the first day of the fiscal year for which the amounts are available. However, for any fiscal year for which the authorization of appropriations for financial assistance under this chapter has not been enacted by the first day of the fiscal year, the State must apply for amounts under this section not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of a law authorizing the appropriations for that fiscal year. Not later than 60 days after receiving an application, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the application and notify the State of the approval or disapproval of the application.

(c) AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNTS.—Amounts provided under this section remain available to a State for obligation for the first 3 months after the end of the fiscal year for which the amounts were made available. Amounts not applied for under this section or that remain unobligated after the first 3 months after the end of the fiscal year for which the amounts were made available are available to the Secretary for projects meeting the requirements of this chapter.

§22105. Sharing project costs

(a) GENERAL.—(1) The United States Government's share of the costs of financial assistance for a project under this chapter is 50 percent, except that for assistance provided under section 22101(a)(2) of this title, the Government's share is 70 percent. The State may pay its share of the costs in cash or through the following benefits, to the extent that the benefits otherwise would not be provided:

(A) forgiveness of taxes imposed on a rail carrier or its property.

(B) real and tangible personal property (provided by the State or a person for the State) necessary for the safe and efficient operation of rail freight transportation.

(C) track rights secured by the State for a rail carrier.

(D) the cash equivalent of State salaries for State employees working on the State project, except overhead and general administrative costs.

(2) A State may pay more than its required percentage share of the costs of a project under this chapter. When a State, or a person acting for a State, pays more than the State share of the costs of its projects during a fiscal year, the excess amount shall be applied to the State share for the costs of the State projects for later fiscal years.

(b) AGREEMENTS TO COMBINE AMOUNTS.—States may agree to combine any part of the amounts made available under this chapter to carry out a project that is eligible for assistance under this chapter when—

(1) the project will benefit each State making the agreement; and

(2) the agreement is not a violation of State law.

§22106. Limitations on financial assistance

(a) GRANTS AND LOANS.—A State shall use financial assistance for projects under this chapter to make a grant or lend money to the owner of rail property, or a rail carrier providing rail transportation, related to a project being assisted. The State shall decide on the financial terms of the grant or loan, except that the time for making grant advances shall comply with regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury.

(b) HOLDING AND USE OF GOVERNMENT'S SHARE.—The State shall place the United States Government's share of money that is repaid in an interest-bearing account. However, the Secretary of Transportation may allow a borrower to place that money, for the benefit of the State, in a bank designated by the Secretary of the Treasury under section 10 of the Act of June 11, 1942 (12 U.S.C. 265). The State shall use the money and accumulated interest to make other grants and loans under this chapter.

(c) PAYMENT OF UNUSED MONEY AND ACCUMULATED INTEREST.—The State may pay the Secretary of Transportation the Government's share of unused money and accumulated interest at any time. However, the State must pay the unused money and accumulated interest to the Secretary when the State ends its participation under this chapter.

(d) ENCOURAGING PARTICIPATION.—To the maximum extent possible, the State shall encourage the participation of shippers, rail carriers, and local communities in paying the State share of assistance costs.

(e) RETENTION OF CONTINGENT INTEREST.—Each State shall retain a contingent interest (redeemable preference shares) for the Government's share of amounts in a rail line receiving assistance under this chapter. The State may collect its share of the amounts used for the rail line if—

(1) an application for abandonment of the rail line is filed under chapter 109 of this title; or

(2) the rail line is sold or disposed of after it has received assistance under this chapter.

§22107. Records, audits, and information

(a) RECORDS.—Each recipient of financial assistance through an arrangement under this chapter shall keep records required by the Secretary of Transportation. The records shall be kept for 3 years after a project is completed and shall disclose—

(1) the amount of, and disposition by the recipient, of the assistance;

(2) the total costs of the project for which the assistance was given or used;

(3) the amount of that part of the costs of the project paid by other sources; and

(4) any other records that will make an effective audit easier.

(b) AUDITS.—The Secretary and the Comptroller General shall make regular financial and performance audits, as provided under chapter 75 of title 31, of activities and transactions assisted under this chapter.

(c) INFORMATION.—The Interstate Commerce Commission shall provide the Secretary with information the Secretary requests to assist in carrying out this chapter. The Commission shall provide the information not later than 30 days after receiving a request from the Secretary.

(d) LIST OF RAIL LINES.—Not later than August 1 of each year, each rail carrier subject to subchapter I of chapter 105 of this title shall submit to the Secretary a list of the rail lines of the carrier that carried not more than 5,000,000 gross ton-miles of freight a mile in the prior year.

§22108. Authorization of appropriations

(a) GENERAL.—(1) Not more than the following amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation to carry out this chapter:

(A) $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993.

(B) $30,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1994.

(2) Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) of this subsection remain available until expended.

(3) No amount may be appropriated to the Secretary for any period after September 30, 1994, to carry out this chapter.

(b) DISTRIBUTION OF AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall establish procedures necessary to ensure that amounts available to the Secretary for projects under this chapter are distributed not later than April 1 of the fiscal year for which the amounts are appropriated. If any amounts are not distributed by April 1, the Secretary shall report to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate on the status of those amounts and the reasons for the delay in distribution.

(c) AVAILABILITY OF OTHER AMOUNTS.—Amounts appropriated to carry out section 5(i) of the Department of Transportation Act for fiscal year 1990 that are not applied for or that remain unobligated on January 1, 1991, are available to the Secretary for projects under this chapter.

24104. Authorization of appropriations.

§24101. Findings, purpose, and goals

(a) FINDINGS.—(1) Public convenience and necessity require that Amtrak, to the extent its budget allows, provide modern, cost-efficient, and energy-efficient intercity rail passenger transportation between crowded urban areas and in other areas of the United States.

(2) Rail passenger transportation can help alleviate overcrowding of airways and airports and on highways.

(3) A traveler in the United States should have the greatest possible choice of transportation most convenient to the needs of the traveler.

(4) A greater degree of cooperation is necessary among Amtrak, other rail carriers, State, regional, and local governments, the private sector, labor organizations, and suppliers of services and equipment to Amtrak to achieve a performance level sufficient to justify expending public money.

(5) Modern and efficient commuter rail passenger transportation is important to the viability and well-being of major urban areas and to the energy conservation and self-sufficiency goals of the United States.

(6) As a rail passenger transportation entity, Amtrak should be available to operate commuter rail passenger transportation through its subsidiary, Amtrak Commuter, under contract with commuter authorities that do not provide the transportation themselves as part of the governmental function of the State.

(7) The Northeast Corridor is a valuable resource of the United States used by intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation and freight transportation.

(8) Greater coordination between intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation is required.

(b) PURPOSE.—By using innovative operating and marketing concepts, Amtrak shall provide intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation that completely develops the potential of modern rail transportation to meet the intercity and commuter passenger transportation needs of the United States.

(c) GOALS.—Amtrak shall—

(1) use its best business judgment in acting to minimize United States Government subsidies, including—

(A) increasing fares;

(B) increasing revenue from the transportation of mail and express;

(C) reducing losses on food service;

(D) improving its contracts with operating rail carriers;

(E) reducing management costs; and

(F) increasing employee productivity;

(2) minimize Government subsidies by encouraging State, regional, and local governments and the private sector to share the cost of providing rail passenger transportation, including the cost of operating facilities;

(3) carry out strategies to achieve immediately maximum productivity and efficiency consistent with safe and efficient transportation;

(4) operate Amtrak trains, to the maximum extent feasible, to all station stops within 15 minutes of the time established in public timetables;

(5) develop transportation on rail corridors subsidized by States and private parties;

(6) implement schedules based on a system-wide average speed of at least 60 miles an hour that can be achieved with a degree of reliability and passenger comfort;

(7) encourage rail carriers to assist in improving intercity rail passenger transportation;

(8) improve generally the performance of Amtrak through comprehensive and systematic operational programs and employee incentives;

(9) carry out policies that ensure equitable access to the Northeast Corridor by intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation;

(10) coordinate the uses of the Northeast Corridor, particularly intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation; and

(11) maximize the use of its resources, including the most cost-effective use of employees, facilities, and real property.

(d) MINIMIZING GOVERNMENT SUBSIDIES.—To carry out subsection (c)(11) of this section, Amtrak is encouraged to make agreements with the private sector and undertake initiatives that are consistent with good business judgment and designed to maximize its revenues and minimize Government subsidies.

(B) "Amtrak" includes a rail carrier subsidiary of Amtrak and a lessor or lessee of Amtrak or one of its rail carrier subsidiaries.

(2) Amtrak is not required to pay an additional tax because of an expenditure to acquire or improve real property, equipment, a facility, or right-of-way material or structures used in providing rail passenger transportation, even if that use is indirect.

(l) EXEMPTION FROM TAXES LEVIED AFTER SEPTEMBER 30, 1981.—(1) Amtrak or a rail carrier subsidiary of Amtrak is exempt from a tax or fee imposed by a State, a political subdivision of a State, or a local taxing authority and levied on it after September 30, 1981. However, Amtrak is not exempt under this subsection from a tax or fee that it was required to pay as of September 10, 1982.

(2) The district courts of the United States have original jurisdiction over a civil action Amtrak brings to enforce this subsection and may grant equitable or declaratory relief requested by Amtrak.

(m) WASTE DISPOSAL.—(1) An intercity rail passenger car manufactured after October 14, 1990, shall be built to provide for the discharge of human waste only at a servicing facility. Amtrak shall retrofit each of its intercity rail passenger cars that was manufactured after May 1, 1971, and before October 15, 1990, with a human waste disposal system that provides for the discharge of human waste only at a servicing facility. Subject to appropriations—

(A) the retrofit program shall be completed not later than October 15, 1996; and

(B) a car that does not provide for the discharge of human waste only at a servicing facility shall be removed from service after that date.

(2) Section 361 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 264) and other laws of the United States, States, and local governments do not apply to waste disposal from rail carrier vehicles operated in intercity rail passenger transportation. The district courts of the United States have original jurisdiction over a civil action Amtrak brings to enforce this paragraph and may grant equitable or declaratory relief requested by Amtrak.

(n) RAIL TRANSPORTATION TREATED EQUALLY.—When authorizing transportation in the continental United States for an officer, employee, or member of the uniformed services of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government, the head of that department, agency, or instrumentality shall consider rail transportation (including transportation by extra-fare trains) the same as transportation by another authorized mode. The Administrator of General Services shall include Amtrak in the contract air program of the Administrator in markets in which transportation provided by Amtrak is competitive with other carriers on fares and total trip times.

§24302. Board of directors

(a) COMPOSITION AND TERMS.—(1) The board of directors of Amtrak is composed of the following 9 directors, each of whom must be a citizen of the United States:

(A) the Secretary of Transportation.

(B) the President of Amtrak.

(C) 3 individuals appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, as follows:

(i) one individual selected from a list of 3 qualified individuals submitted by the Railway Labor Executives Association.

(ii) one chief executive officer of a State selected from among the chief executive officers of States with an interest in rail transportation. The chief executive officer may select an individual to act as the officer's representative at board meetings.

(iii) one individual selected as a representative of business with an interest in rail transportation.

(D) 2 individuals selected by the President of the United States from a list of names consisting of one individual nominated by each commuter authority for which Amtrak Commuter provides commuter rail passenger transportation under section 24505 of this title and one individual nominated by each commuter authority in the region (as defined in section 102 of the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 702)) that provides its own commuter rail passenger transportation or makes a contract with an operator (except Amtrak Commuter), except that—

(i) one of the individuals selected must have been nominated by a commuter authority for which Amtrak Commuter provides commuter rail transportation; or

(ii) if Amtrak Commuter does not provide commuter rail passenger transportation for any authority, the 2 individuals shall be selected from a list of 5 individuals submitted by commuter authorities providing transportation over rail property of Amtrak.

(E) 2 individuals selected by the holders of the preferred stock of Amtrak.

(2) An individual appointed under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection serves for 4 years or until the individual's successor is appointed and qualified. Not more than 2 individuals appointed under paragraph (1)(C) may be members of the same political party.

(3) An individual selected under paragraph (1)(D) of this subsection serves for 2 years or until the individual's successor is selected.

(4) An individual selected under paragraph (1)(E) of this subsection serves for one year or until the individual's successor is selected.

(5) The President of Amtrak serves as Chairman of the board.

(6) The Secretary may be represented at a meeting of the board only by the Deputy Secretary of Transportation, the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration, or the General Counsel of the Department of Transportation.

(b) CUMULATIVE VOTING.—The articles of incorporation of Amtrak shall provide for cumulative voting for all stockholders.

(c) CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—When serving on the board, a director appointed by the President of the United States may not have—

(1) a financial or employment relationship with a rail carrier; and

(2) a significant financial relationship or an employment relationship with a person competing with Amtrak in providing passenger transportation.

(d) PAY AND EXPENSES.—Each director not employed by the United States Government is entitled to $300 a day when performing board duties and powers. Each director is entitled to reimbursement for necessary travel, reasonable secretarial and professional staff support, and subsistence expenses incurred in attending board meetings.

(e) VACANCIES.—A vacancy on the board is filled in the same way as the original selection, except that an individual appointed by the President of the United States under subsection (a)(1)(C) of this section to fill a vacancy occurring before the end of the term for which the predecessor of that individual was appointed is appointed for the remainder of that term. A vacancy required to be filled by appointment under subsection (a)(1)(C) must be filled not later than 120 days after the vacancy occurs.

(f) BYLAWS.—The board may adopt and amend bylaws governing the operation of Amtrak. The bylaws shall be consistent with this part and the articles of incorporation.

§24303. Officers

(a) APPOINTMENT AND TERMS.—Amtrak has a President and other officers that are named and appointed by the board of directors of Amtrak. An officer of Amtrak must be a citizen of the United States. Officers of Amtrak serve at the pleasure of the board.

(b) PAY.—The board may fix the pay of the officers of Amtrak. An officer may not be paid more than the general level of pay for officers of rail carriers with comparable responsibility.

(c) CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—When employed by Amtrak, an officer may not have a financial or employment relationship with another rail carrier, except that holding securities issued by a rail carrier is not deemed to be a violation of this subsection if the officer holding the securities makes a complete public disclosure of the holdings and does not participate in any decision directly affecting the rail carrier.

§24304. Capitalization

(a) STOCK.—Amtrak may have outstanding one issue of common stock and one issue of preferred stock. Each type of stock is eligible for a dividend. The articles of incorporation of Amtrak shall provide that—

(1) each type of stock must be fully paid and nonassessable;

(2) common stock has a par value of $10 a share; and

(3) preferred stock has a par value of $100 a share.

(b) LIMITATIONS ON OWNERSHIP AND VOTING.—(1) A rail carrier or person controlling a rail carrier—

(A) may not hold preferred stock of Amtrak; and

(B) may vote not more than one-third of the total number of shares of outstanding common stock of Amtrak.

(2) Additional common stock owned by a rail carrier or person controlling a rail carrier is deemed to be not outstanding for voting and quorum purposes.

(c) PREFERRED STOCK DIVIDENDS AND LIQUIDATION PREFERENCES.—The articles of incorporation of Amtrak shall provide that—

(1) its preferred stock has a cumulative dividend of at least 6 percent a year;

(2) if a dividend on the preferred stock is not declared and paid or set aside for payment, the deficiency shall be declared and paid or set aside for payment before a dividend or other distribution is made on its common stock;

(3) the preferred stock has a liquidation preference over the common stock entitling holders of preferred stock to receive a liquidation payment of at least par value plus all accrued unpaid dividends before a liquidation payment is made to holders of common stock; and

(4) the preferred stock may be converted to common stock.

(d) ISSUANCE OF PREFERRED STOCK TO SECRETARY.—(1) Not later than 30 days after the close of each fiscal quarter, Amtrak shall issue to the Secretary of Transportation preferred stock equal, to the nearest whole share, to the amount paid to Amtrak under section 24104(d) of this title during the quarter.

(2) Preferred stock issued under this subsection or section 304(c)(1) of the Rail Passenger Service Act is deemed to be issued on the date Amtrak receives the amounts for which the stock is issued.

(3) An amendment to the articles of incorporation of Amtrak is not required for issuing preferred stock under this subsection.

(e) TAXES AND FEES ON PREFERRED STOCK.—A tax or fee applies to preferred stock issued under this section only if specifically prescribed by Congress.

(f) NONVOTING CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS.—Amtrak may issue nonvoting certificates of indebtedness, except that an obligation with a liquidation interest superior to preferred stock issued to the Secretary or secured by a lien on property of Amtrak may be incurred when preferred stock issued to the Secretary is outstanding only if the Secretary consents.

(g) INSPECTION RIGHTS.—Stockholders of Amtrak have the rights of inspecting and copying set forth in section 45(b) of the District of Columbia Business Corporation Act (D.C. Code §29-345(b)) regardless of the amount of stock they hold.

§24305. General authority

(a) ACQUISITION AND OPERATION OF EQUIPMENT AND FACILITIES.—(1) Amtrak may acquire, operate, maintain, and make contracts for the operation and maintenance of equipment and facilities necessary for intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation, the transportation of mail and express, and auto-ferry transportation.

(2) Amtrak shall operate and control directly, to the extent practicable, all aspects of the rail passenger transportation it provides.

(b) MAINTENANCE AND REHABILITATION.—Amtrak may maintain and rehabilitate rail passenger equipment and shall maintain a regional maintenance plan that includes—

(1) a review panel at the principal office of Amtrak consisting of members the President of Amtrak designates;

(2) a systemwide inventory of spare equipment parts in each operational region;

(3) enough maintenance employees for cars and locomotives in each region;

(4) a systematic preventive maintenance program;

(5) periodic evaluations of maintenance costs, time lags, and parts shortages and corrective actions; and

(6) other elements or activities Amtrak considers appropriate.

(c) MISCELLANEOUS AUTHORITY.—Amtrak may—

(1) make and carry out appropriate agreements;

(2) transport mail and express and shall use all feasible methods to obtain the bulk mail business of the United States Postal Service;

(3) improve its reservation system and advertising;

(4) provide food and beverage services on its trains only if revenues from the services each year at least equal the cost of providing the services;

(5) conduct research, development, and demonstration programs related to the mission of Amtrak; and

(6) buy or lease rail rolling stock and develop and demonstrate improved rolling stock.

(d) THROUGH ROUTES AND JOINT FARES.—(1) Establishing through routes and joint fares between Amtrak and other intercity rail passenger carriers and motor carriers of passengers is consistent with the public interest and the transportation policy of the United States. Congress encourages establishing those routes and fares.

(2) Amtrak may establish through routes and joint fares with any domestic or international motor carrier, air carrier, or water carrier.

(e) RAIL POLICE.—Amtrak may employ rail police to provide security for rail passengers and property of Amtrak. Rail police employed by Amtrak who have complied with a State law establishing requirements applicable to rail police or individuals employed in a similar position may be employed without regard to the law of another State containing those requirements.

(f) DOMESTIC BUYING PREFERENCES.—(1) In this subsection, "United States" means the States, territories, and possessions of the United States and the District of Columbia.

(2) Amtrak shall buy only—

(A) unmanufactured articles, material, and supplies mined or produced in the United States; or

(B) manufactured articles, material, and supplies manufactured in the United States substantially from articles, material, and supplies mined, produced, or manufactured in the United States.

(3) Paragraph (2) of this subsection applies only when the cost of those articles, material, or supplies bought is at least $1,000,000.

(4) On application of Amtrak, the Secretary of Transportation may exempt Amtrak from this subsection if the Secretary decides that—

(A) for particular articles, material, or supplies—

(i) the requirements of paragraph (2) of this subsection are inconsistent with the public interest;

(ii) the cost of imposing those requirements is unreasonable; or

(iii) the articles, material, or supplies, or the articles, material, or supplies from which they are manufactured, are not mined, produced, or manufactured in the United States in sufficient and reasonably available commercial quantities and are not of a satisfactory quality; or

(B) rolling stock or power train equipment cannot be bought and delivered in the United States within a reasonable time.

§24306. Mail, express, and auto-ferry transportation

(a) ACTIONS TO INCREASE REVENUES.—Amtrak shall take necessary action to increase its revenues from the transportation of mail and express. To increase its revenues, Amtrak may provide auto-ferry transportation as part of the basic passenger transportation authorized by this part. When requested by Amtrak, a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government shall assist in carrying out this section.

(b) AUTHORITY OF OTHERS TO PROVIDE AUTO-FERRY TRANSPORTATION.—(1) A person primarily providing auto-ferry transportation and any other person not a rail carrier may provide auto-ferry transportation over any route under a certificate issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission if the Commission finds that the auto-ferry transportation—

(A) will not impair the ability of Amtrak to reduce its losses or increase its revenues; and

(B) is required to meet the public demand.

(2) A rail carrier that has not made a contract with Amtrak to provide rail passenger transportation may provide auto-ferry transportation over its own rail lines.

(3) State and local laws and regulations that impair the provision of auto-ferry transportation do not apply to Amtrak or a rail carrier providing auto-ferry transportation. A rail carrier may not refuse to participate with Amtrak in providing auto-ferry transportation because a State or local law or regulation makes the transportation unlawful.

§24307. Special transportation

(a) REDUCED FARE PROGRAM.—Amtrak shall maintain a reduced fare program for the following:

(1) individuals at least 65 years of age.

(2) individuals (except alcoholics and drug abusers) who—

(A) have a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits a major life activity of the individual;

(B) have a record of an impairment; or

(C) are regarded as having an impairment.

(b) ACTIONS TO ENSURE ACCESS.—Amtrak may act to ensure access to intercity transportation for elderly or handicapped individuals on passenger trains operated by or for Amtrak. That action may include—

(1) acquiring special equipment;

(2) conducting special training for employees;

(3) designing and acquiring new equipment and facilities;

(4) eliminating barriers in existing equipment and facilities to comply with the highest standards of design, construction, and alteration of property to accommodate elderly and handicapped individuals; and

(5) providing special assistance to elderly and handicapped individuals when getting on and off trains and in terminal areas.

(c) EMPLOYEE TRANSPORTATION.—(1) In this subsection, "rail carrier employee" means—

(A) an active full-time employee of a rail carrier or terminal company and includes an employee on furlough or leave of absence;

(B) a retired employee of a rail carrier or terminal company; and

(C) a dependent of an employee referred to in clause (A) or (B) of this paragraph.

(2) Amtrak shall ensure that a rail carrier employee eligible for free or reduced-rate rail transportation on April 30, 1971, under an agreement in effect on that date is eligible, to the greatest extent practicable, for free or reduced-rate intercity rail passenger transportation provided by Amtrak under this part, if space is available, on terms similar to those available on that date under the agreement. However, Amtrak may apply to all rail carrier employees eligible to receive free or reduced-rate transportation under any agreement a single systemwide schedule of terms that Amtrak decides applied to a majority of employees on that date under all those agreements. Unless Amtrak and a rail carrier make a different agreement, the carrier shall reimburse Amtrak at the rate of 25 percent of the systemwide average monthly yield of each revenue passenger-mile. The reimbursement is in place of costs Amtrak incurs related to free or reduced-rate transportation, including liability related to travel of a rail carrier employee eligible for free or reduced-rate transportation.

(3) This subsection does not prohibit the Interstate Commerce Commission from ordering retroactive relief in a proceeding begun or reopened after October 1, 1981.

§24308. Use of facilities and providing services to Amtrak

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) Amtrak may make an agreement with a rail carrier or regional transportation authority to use facilities of, and have services provided by, the carrier or authority under terms on which the parties agree. The terms shall include a penalty for untimely performance.

(2)(A) If the parties cannot agree and if the Interstate Commerce Commission finds it necessary to carry out this part, the Commission shall—

(i) order that the facilities be made available and the services provided to Amtrak; and

(ii) prescribe reasonable terms and compensation for using the facilities and providing the services.

(B) When prescribing reasonable compensation under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the Commission shall consider quality of service as a major factor when determining whether, and the extent to which, the amount of compensation shall be greater than the incremental costs of using the facilities and providing the services.

(C) The Commission shall decide the dispute not later than 90 days after Amtrak submits the dispute to the Commission.

(3) Amtrak's right to use the facilities or have the services provided is conditioned on payment of the compensation. If the compensation is not paid promptly, the rail carrier or authority entitled to it may bring an action against Amtrak to recover the amount owed.

(4) Amtrak shall seek immediate and appropriate legal remedies to enforce its contract rights when track maintenance on a route over which Amtrak operates falls below the contractual standard.

(b) OPERATING DURING EMERGENCIES.—To facilitate operation by Amtrak during an emergency, the Commission, on application by Amtrak, shall require a rail carrier to provide facilities immediately during the emergency. The Commission then shall promptly prescribe reasonable terms, including indemnification of the carrier by Amtrak against personal injury risk to which the carrier may be exposed. The rail carrier shall provide the facilities for the duration of the emergency.

(c) PREFERENCE OVER FREIGHT TRANSPORTATION.—Except in an emergency, intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation provided by or for Amtrak has preference over freight transportation in using a rail line, junction, or crossing unless the Secretary of Transportation orders otherwise under this subsection. A rail carrier affected by this subsection may apply to the Secretary for relief. If the Secretary, after an opportunity for a hearing under section 553 of title 5, decides that preference for intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation materially will lessen the quality of freight transportation provided to shippers, the Secretary shall establish the rights of the carrier and Amtrak on reasonable terms.

(d) ACCELERATED SPEEDS.—If a rail carrier refuses to allow accelerated speeds on trains operated by or for Amtrak, Amtrak may apply to the Secretary for an order requiring the carrier to allow the accelerated speeds. The Secretary shall decide whether accelerated speeds are unsafe or impracticable and which improvements would be required to make accelerated speeds safe and practicable. After an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary shall establish the maximum allowable speeds of Amtrak trains on terms the Secretary decides are reasonable.

(e) ADDITIONAL TRAINS.—(1) When a rail carrier does not agree to provide, or allow Amtrak to provide, for the operation of additional trains over a rail line of the carrier, Amtrak may apply to the Secretary for an order requiring the carrier to provide or allow for the operation of the requested trains. After a hearing on the record, the Secretary may order the carrier, within 60 days, to provide or allow for the operation of the requested trains on a schedule based on legally permissible operating times. However, if the Secretary decides not to hold a hearing, the Secretary, not later than 30 days after receiving the application, shall publish in the Federal Register the reasons for the decision not to hold the hearing.

(2) The Secretary shall consider—

(A) when conducting a hearing, whether an order would impair unreasonably freight transportation of the rail carrier, with the carrier having the burden of demonstrating that the additional trains will impair the freight transportation; and

(B) when establishing scheduled running times, the statutory goal of Amtrak to implement schedules that attain a system-wide average speed of at least 60 miles an hour that can be adhered to with a high degree of reliability and passenger comfort.

(3) Unless the parties have an agreement that establishes the compensation Amtrak will pay the carrier for additional trains provided under an order under this subsection, the Commission shall decide the dispute under subsection (a) of this section.

§24309. Retaining and maintaining facilities

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "facility" means a rail line, right of way, fixed equipment, facility, or real property related to a rail line, right of way, fixed equipment, or facility, including a signal system, passenger station and repair tracks, a station building, a platform, and a related facility, including a water, fuel, steam, electric, and air line.

(2) downgrading a facility means reducing a track classification as specified in the Federal Railroad Administration track safety standards or altering a facility so that the time required for rail passenger transportation to be provided over the route on which a facility is located may be increased.

(b) APPROVAL REQUIRED FOR DOWNGRADING OR DISPOSAL.—A facility of a rail carrier or regional transportation authority that Amtrak used to provide rail passenger transportation on February 1, 1979, may be downgraded or disposed of only after approval by the Secretary of Transportation under this section.

(c) NOTIFICATION AND ANALYSIS.—(1) A rail carrier intending to downgrade or dispose of a facility Amtrak currently is not using to provide transportation shall notify Amtrak of its intention. If, not later than 60 days after Amtrak receives the notice, Amtrak and the carrier do not agree to retain or maintain the facility or to convey an interest in the facility to Amtrak, the carrier may apply to the Secretary for approval to downgrade or dispose of the facility.

(2) After a rail carrier notifies Amtrak of its intention to downgrade or dispose of a facility, Amtrak shall survey population centers with rail passenger transportation facilities to assist in preparing a valid and timely analysis of the need for the facility and shall update the survey as appropriate. Amtrak also shall maintain a system for collecting information gathered in the survey. The system shall collect the information based on geographic regions and on whether the facility would be part of a short haul or long haul route. The survey should facilitate an analysis of—

(A) ridership potential by ascertaining existing and changing travel patterns that would provide maximum efficient rail passenger transportation;

(B) the quality of transportation of competitors or likely competitors;

(C) the likelihood of Amtrak offering transportation at a competitive fare;

(D) opportunities to target advertising and fares to potential classes of riders;

(E) economic characteristics of rail passenger transportation related to the facility and the extent to which the characteristics are consistent with sound economic principles of short haul or long haul rail transportation; and

(F) the feasibility of applying effective internal cost controls to the facility and route served by the facility to improve the ratio of passenger revenue to transportation expenses (excluding maintenance of tracks, structures, and equipment and depreciation).

(d) APPROVAL OF APPLICATION AND PAYMENT OF AVOIDABLE COSTS.—(1) If Amtrak does not object to an application not later than 30 days after it is submitted, the Secretary shall approve the application promptly.

(2) If Amtrak objects to an application, the Secretary shall decide by not later than 180 days after the objection those costs the rail carrier may avoid if it does not have to retain or maintain a facility in the condition Amtrak requests. If Amtrak does not agree by not later than 60 days after the decision to pay the carrier these avoidable costs, the Secretary shall approve the application. When deciding whether to pay a carrier the avoidable costs of retaining or maintaining a facility, Amtrak shall consider—

(A) the potential importance of restoring rail passenger transportation on the route on which the facility is located;

(B) the market potential of the route;

(C) the availability, adequacy, and energy efficiency of an alternate rail line or alternate mode of transportation to provide passenger transportation to or near the places that would be served by the route;

(D) the extent to which major population centers would be served by the route;

(E) the extent to which providing transportation over the route would encourage the expansion of an intercity rail passenger system in the United States; and

(F) the possibility of increased ridership on a rail line that connects with the route.

(e) COMPLIANCE WITH OTHER OBLIGATIONS.—Downgrading or disposing of a facility under this section does not relieve a rail carrier from complying with its other common carrier or legal obligations related to the facility.

§24310. Assistance for upgrading facilities

(a) TO CORRECT DANGEROUS CONDITIONS.—(1) Amtrak or the owner of a facility presenting a danger to the employees, passengers, or property of Amtrak may petition the Secretary of Transportation for assistance to the owner for relocation or other measures undertaken after December 31, 1977, to minimize or eliminate the danger.

(2) The Secretary shall recommend to Congress that Congress authorize amounts for the relocation or other measures if the Secretary decides that—

(A) the facility presents a danger of death or serious injury to an employee or passenger or of serious damage to that property; and

(B) the owner should not be expected to bear the cost of that relocation or other measures.

(b) TO CORRECT STATE AND LOCAL VIOLATIONS.—(1) Amtrak, by itself or jointly with an owner or operator of a rail station Amtrak uses to provide rail passenger transportation, may apply to the Secretary for amounts that may be appropriated under paragraph (2) of this subsection to pay or reimburse expenses incurred after October 1, 1987, related to the station complying with an official notice received before October 1, 1987, from a State or local authority stating that the station violates or allegedly violates the building, construction, fire, electric, sanitation, mechanical, or plumbing code.

(2) Not more than $1,000,000, may be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out paragraph (1) of this subsection. Amounts appropriated under this paragraph remain available until expended.

§24311. Acquiring interests in property by eminent domain

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) To the extent financial resources are available, Amtrak may acquire by eminent domain under subsection (b) of this section interests in property—

(A) necessary for intercity rail passenger transportation, except property of a rail carrier, a State, a political subdivision of a State, or a governmental authority; or

(B) requested by the Secretary of Transportation in carrying out the Secretary's duty to design and build an intermodal transportation terminal at Union Station in the District of Columbia if the Secretary assures Amtrak that the Secretary will reimburse Amtrak.

(2) Amtrak may exercise the power of eminent domain only if it cannot—

(A) acquire the interest in the property by contract; or

(B) agree with the owner on the purchase price for the interest.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS.—(1) A civil action to acquire an interest in property by eminent domain under subsection (a) of this section must be brought in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the property is located or, if a single piece of property is located in more than one judicial district, in any judicial district in which any piece of the property is located. An interest is condemned and taken by Amtrak for its use when a declaration of taking is filed under this subsection and an amount of money estimated in the declaration to be just compensation for the interest is deposited in the court. The declaration may be filed with the complaint in the action or at any time before judgment. The declaration must contain or be accompanied by—

(A) a statement of the public use for which the interest is taken;

(B) a description of the property sufficient to identify it;

(C) a statement of the interest in the property taken;

(D) a plan showing the interest taken; and

(E) a statement of the amount of money Amtrak estimates is just compensation for the interest.

(2) When the declaration is filed and the deposit is made under paragraph (1) of this subsection, title to the property vests in Amtrak in fee simple absolute or in the lesser interest shown in the declaration, and the right to the money vests in the person entitled to the money. When the declaration is filed, the court may decide—

(A) the time by which, and the terms under which, possession of the property is given to Amtrak; and

(B) the disposition of outstanding charges related to the property.

(3) After a hearing, the court shall make a finding on the amount that is just compensation for the interest in the property and enter judgment awarding that amount and interest on it. The rate of interest is 6 percent a year and is computed on the amount of the award less the amount deposited in the court from the date of taking to the date of payment.

(4) On application of a party, the court may order immediate payment of any part of the amount deposited in the court for the compensation to be awarded. If the award is more than the amount received, the court shall enter judgment against Amtrak for the deficiency.

(c) AUTHORITY TO CONDEMN RAIL CARRIER PROPERTY INTERESTS.—(1) If Amtrak and a rail carrier cannot agree on a sale to Amtrak of an interest in property of a rail carrier necessary for intercity rail passenger transportation, Amtrak may apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an order establishing the need of Amtrak for the interest and requiring the carrier to convey the interest on reasonable terms, including just compensation. The need of Amtrak is deemed to be established, and the Commission, after holding an expedited proceeding and not later than 120 days after receiving the application, shall order the interest conveyed unless the Commission decides that—

(A) conveyance would impair significantly the ability of the carrier to carry out its obligations as a common carrier; and

(B) the obligations of Amtrak to provide modern, efficient, and economical rail passenger transportation can be met adequately by acquiring an interest in other property, either by sale or by exercising its right of eminent domain under subsection (a) of this section.

(2) If the amount of compensation is not determined by the date of the Commission's order, the order shall require, as part of the compensation, interest at 6 percent a year from the date prescribed for the conveyance until the compensation is paid.

(3) Amtrak subsequently may reconvey to a third party an interest conveyed to Amtrak under this subsection or prior comparable provision of law if the Commission decides that the reconveyance will carry out the purposes of this part, regardless of when the proceeding was brought (including a proceeding pending before a United States court on November 28, 1990).

§24312. Labor standards

(a) PREVAILING WAGES AND HEALTH AND SAFETY STANDARDS.—(1) Amtrak shall ensure that laborers and mechanics employed by contractors and subcontractors in construction work financed under an agreement made under section 24308(a), 24701(a), or 24704(b)(2) of this title will be paid wages not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality, as determined by the Secretary of Labor under the Act of March 3, 1931 (known as the Davis-Bacon Act) (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5). Amtrak may make such an agreement only after being assured that required labor standards will be maintained on the construction work. Health and safety standards prescribed by the Secretary under section 107 of the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act (40 U.S.C. 333) apply to all construction work performed under such an agreement, except for construction work performed by a rail carrier.

(2) Wage rates in a collective bargaining agreement negotiated under the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.) are deemed to comply with the Act of March 3, 1931 (known as the Davis-Bacon Act) (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5).

(b) CONTRACTING OUT.—(1) Amtrak may not contract out work normally performed by an employee in a bargaining unit covered by a contract between a labor organization and Amtrak or a rail carrier that provided intercity rail passenger transportation on October 30, 1970, if contracting out results in the layoff of an employee in the bargaining unit.

(2) This subsection does not apply to food and beverage services provided on trains of Amtrak.

§24313. Rail safety system program

In consultation with rail labor organizations, Amtrak shall maintain a rail safety system program for employees working on property owned by Amtrak. The program shall be a model for other rail carriers to use in developing safety programs. The program shall include—

(1) periodic analyses of accident information, including primary and secondary causes;

(2) periodic evaluations of the activities of the program, particularly specific steps taken in response to an accident;

(3) periodic reports on amounts spent for occupational health and safety activities of the program;

(4) periodic reports on reduced costs and personal injuries because of accident prevention activities of the program;

(5) periodic reports on direct accident costs, including claims related to accidents; and

(6) reports and evaluations of other information Amtrak considers appropriate.

§24314. Demonstration of new technology

(a) PLAN.—Amtrak shall develop a plan for demonstrating new technology in rail passenger equipment. The plan shall provide that new equipment that Amtrak procures that may increase train speed significantly over existing rail facilities shall be demonstrated, to the extent practicable, throughout the intercity rail passenger system.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than September 30, 1993, Amtrak shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report summarizing the plan developed under subsection (a) of this section, including its goals, locations for technology demonstration, and a schedule for carrying out the plan.

(c) COOPERATION.—To make efforts to increase train speed throughout the intercity rail passenger system easier, Amtrak shall consult and cooperate, to the extent feasible, on request of eligible applicants proposing a technology demonstration authorized and financed under a law of the United States, with those applicants.

§24315. Reports and audits

(a) AMTRAK ANNUAL OPERATIONS REPORT.—Not later than February 15 of each year, Amtrak shall submit to Congress a report that—

(1) for each route on which Amtrak provided intercity rail passenger transportation during the prior fiscal year, includes information on—

(A) ridership;

(B) passenger-miles;

(C) the short-term avoidable profit or loss for each passenger-mile;

(D) the revenue-to-cost ratio;

(E) revenues;

(F) the United States Government subsidy;

(G) the subsidy not provided by the United States Government; and

(H) on-time performance;

(2) provides relevant information about a decision to pay an officer of Amtrak more than the rate for level I of the Executive Schedule under section 5312 of title 5; and

(3) specifies—

(A) significant operational problems Amtrak identifies; and

(B) proposals by Amtrak to solve those problems.

(b) AMTRAK GENERAL AND LEGISLATIVE ANNUAL REPORT.—(1) Not later than February 15 of each year, Amtrak shall submit to the President and Congress a complete report of its operations, activities, and accomplishments, including a statement of revenues and expenditures for the prior fiscal year. The report—

(A) shall include a discussion and accounting of Amtrak's success in meeting the goal of section 24902(b) of this title; and

(B) may include recommendations for legislation, including the amount of financial assistance needed for operations and capital improvements, the method of computing the assistance, and the sources of the assistance.

(2) Amtrak may submit reports to the President and Congress at other times Amtrak considers desirable.

(c) SECRETARY'S REPORT ON EFFECTIVENESS OF THIS PART.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prepare a report on the effectiveness of this part in meeting the requirements for a balanced transportation system in the United States. The report may include recommendations for legislation. The Secretary shall include this report as part of the annual report the Secretary submits under section 308(a) of this title.

(d) INDEPENDENT AUDITS.—An independent certified public accountant shall audit the financial statements of Amtrak each year. The audit shall be carried out at the place at which the financial statements normally are kept and under generally accepted auditing standards. A report of the audit shall be included in the report required by subsection (a) of this section.

(e) COMPTROLLER GENERAL AUDITS.—The Comptroller General may conduct performance audits of the activities and transactions of Amtrak. Each audit shall be conducted at the place at which the Comptroller General decides and under generally accepted management principles. The Comptroller General may prescribe regulations governing the audit.

(f) AVAILABILITY OF RECORDS AND PROPERTY OF AMTRAK AND RAIL CARRIERS.—Amtrak and, if required by the Comptroller General, a rail carrier with which Amtrak has made a contract for intercity rail passenger transportation shall make available for an audit under subsection (d) or (e) of this section all records and property of, or used by, Amtrak or the carrier that are necessary for the audit. Amtrak and the carrier shall provide facilities for verifying transactions with the balances or securities held by depositories, fiscal agents, and custodians. Amtrak and the carrier may keep all reports and property.

(g) COMPTROLLER GENERAL'S REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on each audit, giving comments and information necessary to inform Congress on the financial operations and condition of Amtrak and recommendations related to those operations and conditions. The report also shall specify any financial transaction or undertaking the Comptroller General considers is carried out without authority of law. When the Comptroller General submits a report to Congress, the Comptroller General shall submit a copy of it to the President, the Secretary, and Amtrak at the same time.

24501. Status and applicable laws.
24502. Board of directors.
24503. Officers.
24504. General authority.
24505. Commuter rail passenger transportation.
24506. Certain duties and powers unaffected.

§24501. Status and applicable laws

(a) STATUS.—Amtrak Commuter—

(1) is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Amtrak;

(2) provides by contract commuter rail passenger transportation for a commuter authority with which Amtrak Commuter makes a contract to provide the transportation under this chapter;

(3) has no common carrier obligations to provide rail passenger or rail freight transportation; and

(4) is not a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government.

(b) APPLICATION OF SAFETY AND EMPLOYEE RELATIONS LAWS AND REGULATIONS.—Chapter 105 of this title does not apply to Amtrak Commuter. However, laws and regulations governing safety, employee representation for collective bargaining purposes, the handling of disputes between carriers and employees, employee retirement, annuity, and unemployment systems, and other dealings with employees that apply to a rail carrier providing transportation subject to subchapter I of chapter 105 apply to Amtrak Commuter.

(c) APPLICATION OF CERTAIN ADDITIONAL LAWS.—This part and, to the extent consistent with this part, the District of Columbia Business Corporation Act (D.C. Code §29–301 et seq.) apply to Amtrak Commuter.

(d) NONAPPLICATION OF RATE, ROUTE, AND SERVICE LAWS.—A State or other law related to rates, routes, or service in connection with rail passenger transportation does not apply to Amtrak Commuter.

(e) PREEMPTION RELATED TO EMPLOYEE WORK REQUIREMENTS.—A State may not adopt or continue in force a law, rule, regulation, order, or standard requiring Amtrak Commuter to employ a specified number of individuals to perform a particular task, function, or operation.

(f) EXEMPTION FROM ADDITIONAL TAXES.—(1) In this subsection, "additional tax" means a tax or fee—

(A) on the acquisition, improvement, ownership, or operation of personal property by Amtrak Commuter; and

(B) on real property, except a tax or fee on the acquisition of real property or on the value of real property not attributable to improvements made, or the operation of those improvements, by Amtrak Commuter.

(2) Amtrak Commuter is not required to pay an additional tax because of an expenditure to acquire or improve real property, equipment, a facility, or right-of-way material or structures used to provide rail passenger transportation.

(g) TAX EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN COMMUTER AUTHORITIES.—A commuter authority with which Amtrak Commuter could have made a contract to provide commuter rail passenger transportation under this chapter but which decided to provide its own rail passenger transportation beginning on January 1, 1983, is exempt, effective October 1, 1981, from paying a tax or fee to the same extent Amtrak is exempt.

(h) NONAPPLICATION OF AGREEMENTS FOR FINANCIAL SUPPORT AND TRACKAGE RIGHTS.—An agreement under which financial support was provided on January 2, 1974, to a commuter authority to continue rail passenger transportation does not apply to Amtrak Commuter. However, Amtrak and the Consolidated Rail Corporation retain appropriate trackage rights over rail property owned or leased by the authority. Compensation for the rights shall be reasonable.

§24502. Board of directors

(a) COMPOSITION.—The board of directors of Amtrak Commuter is composed of the following directors:

(1) the President of Amtrak Commuter.

(2) one individual from the board of directors of Amtrak selected as a representative of commuter authorities that make contracts with Amtrak Commuter for the operation of commuter rail passenger transportation.

(3) 2 individuals selected by the board of directors of Amtrak.

(4) 2 individuals selected by commuter authorities for which Amtrak Commuter provides commuter rail transportation under this chapter. However, only one individual shall be selected under this clause if Amtrak Commuter provides the transportation for only one authority.

(b) TERMS.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, individuals shall serve for 2 years.

(c) CHAIRMAN.—The board shall select annually one of its members to serve as Chairman.

(d) PAY AND EXPENSES.—Each director not employed by the United States Government is entitled to $300 a day when performing board duties and powers. Each director is entitled to reimbursement for necessary travel, reasonable secretarial and professional staff support, and subsistence expenses incurred in attending board meetings.

(e) VACANCIES.—A vacancy on the board is filled in the same way as the original selection.

(f) BYLAWS.—The board may adopt and amend bylaws governing the operation of Amtrak Commuter. The bylaws shall be consistent with this part and the articles of incorporation.

§24503. Officers

(a) APPOINTMENT AND TERMS.—Amtrak Commuter has a President and other officers that are named and appointed by the board of directors of Amtrak Commuter. An officer of Amtrak Commuter must be a citizen of the United States. Officers of Amtrak Commuter serve at the pleasure of the board.

(b) PAY.—The board may fix the pay of the officers of Amtrak Commuter. An officer may be paid not more than the general level of pay for officers of rail carriers with comparable responsibility.

(c) CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—When employed by Amtrak Commuter, an officer may not have a financial or employment relationship with a rail carrier, except that holding securities issued by a rail carrier is not deemed to be a violation of this subsection if the officer holding the securities makes a complete public disclosure of the holdings and does not participate in any decision directly affecting the rail carrier.

§24504. General authority

(a) GENERAL.—Amtrak Commuter may—

(1) acquire, operate, maintain, and make contracts for the operation of equipment and facilities necessary for commuter rail passenger transportation;

(2) conduct research and development related to the mission of Amtrak Commuter; and

(3) issue common stock to Amtrak.

(b) OPERATION AND CONTROL.—To the extent consistent with this part and with an agreement with a commuter authority, Amtrak Commuter shall operate and control all aspects of the commuter rail passenger transportation it provides.

(c) AGREEMENT TO AVOID DUPLICATING EMPLOYEE FUNCTIONS.—To the maximum extent practicable, Amtrak Commuter and Amtrak shall make an agreement that avoids duplicating employee functions and voluntarily establishes a consolidated work force.

§24505. Commuter rail passenger transportation

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—Amtrak Commuter—

(1) shall provide commuter rail passenger transportation that the Consolidated Rail Corporation was obligated to provide on August 13, 1981, under section 303(b)(2) or 304(e) of the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 743(b)(2), 744(e)); and

(2) may provide other commuter rail passenger transportation if the commuter authority for which the transportation will be provided offers to provide a commuter rail passenger transportation payment equal to the—

(A) avoidable costs of providing the transportation (including the avoidable cost of necessary capital improvements) and a reasonable return on the value; less

(B) revenue attributable to the transportation.

(b) OFFER REQUIREMENTS.—(1) A commuter authority making an offer under subsection (a)(2) of this section shall—

(A) show that it has obtained access to all rail property necessary to provide the additional commuter rail passenger transportation; and

(B) make the offer according to regulations the Rail Services Planning Office prescribes under section 10362(b)(5)(A) and (6) of this title.

(2) The Office may revise and update the regulations when necessary to carry out this section.

(c) ADDITIONAL EMPLOYEE REQUIREMENTS.—Additional employee requirements shall be met through existing seniority arrangements agreed to in the implementing agreement negotiated under section 508 of the Rail Passenger Service Act.

(d) WHEN OBLIGATION DOES NOT APPLY.—Amtrak Commuter is not obligated to provide commuter rail passenger transportation if a commuter authority provides the transportation or makes a contract under which a person, except Amtrak Commuter, will provide the transportation. When appropriate, Amtrak Commuter shall give the authority or person access to the rail property needed to provide the transportation.

(e) DISCONTINUANCE OF COMMUTER RAIL PASSENGER TRANSPORTATION.—(1) Amtrak Commuter may discontinue commuter rail passenger transportation provided under this section on 60 days' notice if—

(A) a commuter authority does not offer a commuter rail passenger transportation payment under subsection (a)(2) of this section; or

(B) a payment is not paid when due.

(2) The Office shall prescribe regulations on the necessary contents of the notice required under this subsection.

(f) COMPENSATION FOR RIGHT-OF-WAY RELATED COSTS.—Compensation by a commuter authority to Amtrak or Amtrak Commuter for right-of-way related costs for transportation over property Amtrak owns shall be determined under a method the Interstate Commerce Commission establishes under section 1163 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (45 U.S.C. 1111) or to which the parties agree.

(g) APPLICATION OF OTHER LAWS.—All laws related to commuter rail passenger transportation apply to a commuter authority providing commuter rail passenger transportation under this section.

§24506. Certain duties and powers unaffected

This chapter does not affect a duty or power of the Consolidated Rail Corporation or its successor and any bi-state commuter authority under an agreement, lease, or contract under which property was conveyed to the Corporation under the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 701 et seq.).

CHAPTER 247—AMTRAK ROUTE SYSTEM

Sec.
24701. Operation of basic system.
24702. Improving rail passenger transportation.
24703. Route and service criteria.
24704. Transportation requested by States, authorities, and other persons.
24705. Additional qualifying routes.
24706. Discontinuance.
24707. Cost and performance review.
24708. Special commuter transportation.
24709. International transportation.

§24701. Operation of basic system

(a) BY AMTRAK.—Amtrak shall provide intercity rail passenger transportation within the basic system unless the transportation is provided by—

(1) a rail carrier with which Amtrak did not make a contract under section 401(a) of the Rail Passenger Service Act; or

(2) a regional transportation authority under contract with Amtrak.

(b) BY OTHERS WITH CONSENT OF AMTRAK.—Except as provided in section 24306 of this title, a person may provide intercity rail passenger transportation over a route over which Amtrak provides scheduled intercity rail passenger transportation under a contract under section 401(a) of the Act only with the consent of Amtrak.

§24702. Improving rail passenger transportation

(a) PLAN TO IMPROVE TRANSPORTATION.—Amtrak shall continue to carry out its plan, submitted under section 305(f) of the Rail Passenger Service Act, to improve intercity rail passenger transportation provided in the basic system. The plan shall include—

(1) a zero-based assessment of all operating practices;

(2) changes to achieve the minimum use of employees consistent with safe operations and adequate transportation;

(3) a systematic program for achieving the greatest ratio of train size to passenger demand;

(4) a systematic program to reduce trip time in the basic system;

(5) establishing training programs to achieve on-time departures;

(6) establishing priorities for passenger trains over freight trains;

(7) adjusting the buying and pricing of food and beverages so that food and beverage services ultimately will be profitable;

(8) cooperative marketing opportunities between Amtrak and governmental authorities that have intercity rail passenger transportation; and

(9) cooperative marketing campaigns sponsored by Amtrak and the Secretary of Energy, the Administrator of the Federal Highway Administration, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(b) STATE AND LOCAL SPEED RESTRICTIONS.—Amtrak shall—

(1) identify any speed restriction a State or local government imposes on a train of Amtrak that Amtrak decides impedes Amtrak from achieving high-speed intercity rail passenger transportation; and

(2) consult with that State or local government—

(A) to evaluate alternatives to the speed restriction, considering the local safety hazard that is the basis for the restriction; and

(B) to consider modifying or eliminating the restriction to allow safe operation at higher speeds.

(c) HIGH-SPEED RAIL TRANSPORTATION DEVELOPMENT.—On reasonable request by a State, political subdivision of a State, regional partnership, private sector representative, or other qualified person, Amtrak shall consult and cooperate to the extent feasible with that person to assist the efforts of that person to achieve high-speed rail transportation through equipment upgrades, grade-crossing safety improvements, and incremental infrastructure improvements on existing rail facilities that Amtrak uses (except the Northeast Corridor facilities). Not later than September 30, 1993, Amtrak shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on its efforts under this subsection.

(d) ROUTES CONNECTING CORRIDORS.—Amtrak shall begin or improve appropriate rail passenger transportation on a route between corridors that Amtrak decides is justified because it will increase ridership on trains of Amtrak on the route and in the connecting corridors.

§24703. Route and service criteria

(a) ROUTE DISCONTINUANCES AND ADDITIONS.—Except as provided in this part, route discontinuances and route additions shall comply with the route and service criteria.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW OF CRITERIA AMENDMENTS.—(1) Amtrak shall submit to Congress a draft of an amendment to the route and service criteria when Amtrak decides an amendment is appropriate. The amendment is effective at the end of the first period of 120 calendar days of continuous session of Congress after it is submitted unless there is enacted into law during the period a joint resolution stating Congress does not approve the amendment.

(2) In this subsection—

(A) a continuous session of Congress is broken only by an adjournment sine die; and

(B) the 120-day period does not include days on which either House is not in session because of adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain.

(c) NONAPPLICATION.—The route and service criteria do not apply to—

(1) increasing or, because of construction schedules or other temporary disruptive facts or seasonal fluctuations in ridership, decreasing the number of trains on an existing route or a part of an existing route or on a route on which additional trains are being tested;

(2) carrying out the recommendations developed under section 4 of the Amtrak Improvement Act of 1978;

(3) rerouting transportation between major population centers on an existing route; or

(4)(A) modifying transportation operations under section 24707(a) of this title; and

(B) modifying the route system or discontinuing transportation under section 24707(b) of this title.

§24704. Transportation requested by States, authorities, and other persons

(a) APPLICATIONS TO BEGIN OR KEEP TRANSPORTATION.—(1) A State, a regional or local authority, or another person may apply to Amtrak and request Amtrak to provide rail passenger transportation or keep any part of a train, route, or service that Amtrak intends to discontinue under section 24706(a) or (b) or 24707(a) or (b) of this title. An application shall—

(A) assure Amtrak that the State, authority, or person has sufficient resources to meet its share of the cost of the transportation for the time the transportation will be provided;

(B) contain a market analysis acceptable to Amtrak to ensure that there is adequate demand for the transportation; and

(C) commit the State, authority, or person to provide at least 45 percent of the short term avoidable loss of providing the transportation the first year the transportation is provided and at least 65 percent of the short term avoidable loss each of the following years, and, except as provided in section 24104(a) of this title, at least 50 percent of associated capital costs each year the transportation is provided.

(2) An application submitted by more than one State shall be considered in the same way as an application submitted by one State, without it being necessary for each State to comply with paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(b) ACTIONS ON APPLICATIONS.—(1) Amtrak shall review each application submitted under subsection (a) of this section to decide whether—

(A) the application complies with subsection (a); and

(B) there is a reasonable probability that Amtrak can provide the transportation from available resources.

(2) Amtrak may make an agreement with an applicant under this section to begin or keep the transportation if Amtrak decides that the transportation can be provided with resources available to Amtrak. An agreement may be renewed for additional periods of not more than 2 years each.

(c) SELECTING AMONG COMPETING APPLICATIONS.—If more than one application is made for transportation consistent with the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, but all the transportation applied for cannot be provided with the available resources of Amtrak, the board of directors of Amtrak shall select the transportation that best serves the public interest and can be provided with the available resources of Amtrak.

(d) FARE INCREASES.—(1) Before increasing a fare applicable to transportation provided under subsection (b)(2) of this section by more than 5 percent during a 6-month period, Amtrak shall consult with officials of each State affected by the increase and explain why the increase is necessary.

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, a fare increase described in paragraph (1) of this subsection takes effect 90 days after Amtrak first consults with the affected States. However, not later than 30 days after the first consultation, a State may submit proposals to Amtrak for reducing costs and increasing revenues of the transportation. Amtrak shall consider the proposals in deciding how much of the proposed increase shall go into effect.

(3)(A) Amtrak may increase a fare without regard to the restrictions of this subsection during—

(i) the first month of a fiscal year if the authorization of appropriations and the appropriations for Amtrak are not enacted at least 90 days before the beginning of the fiscal year; or

(ii) the 30 days following enactment of an appropriation for Amtrak or a rescission of an appropriation.

(B) Amtrak shall notify each affected State of an increase under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph as soon as possible after Amtrak decides to increase a fare.

(e) DETERMINING LOSS, COSTS, AND REVENUES.—After consulting with officials of each State contributing to providing transportation under subsection (b)(2) of this section, the board shall establish the basis for determining short term avoidable loss and associated capital costs of, and revenues from, the transportation. Amtrak shall give State officials the basis for determining the loss, cost, and revenue for each route on which transportation is provided under subsection (b)(2).

(f) AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNTS.—Amounts provided by Amtrak under an agreement with an applicant under subsection (b)(2) of this section that are allocated for associated capital costs remain available until expended.

(g) ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION.—At least 2 percent but not more than 5 percent of the revenue generated by transportation provided under subsection (b)(2) of this section shall be used for advertising and promotion at the local level.

§24705. Additional qualifying routes

(a) ROUTES RECOMMENDED FOR DISCONTINUANCE.—(1) To maintain a national intercity rail passenger system in the United States and if a reduction in operating expenses can be achieved, Amtrak shall provide rail passenger transportation over each route the Secretary of Transportation recommended be discontinued under section 4 of the Amtrak Improvement Act of 1978 and may restructure a route to serve a major population center as an ending place or principal intermediate place. Transportation over a long distance route shall be maintained if the Amtrak estimate for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1980, was that the short term avoidable loss for each passenger mile on the route was not more than 7 cents. Transportation over a short distance route shall be maintained if the Amtrak estimate for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1980, was that the short term avoidable loss for each passenger mile on the route was not more than 9 cents.

(2) For all routes, Amtrak shall calculate short term avoidable loss for each passenger-mile based on consistently defined factors. Calculations shall be based on the most recent available statistics for a 90-day period, except that Amtrak may use historical information adjusted to reflect the most recent available statistics.

(b) DEFERRAL OF SECRETARY'S RECOMMENDATIONS.—(1) To provide equivalent or improved transportation consistent with the goals of section 4(a) of the Act, Amtrak may defer carrying out a recommendation of the Secretary under section 4 of the Act that requires providing transportation over a rail line not used in intercity rail passenger transportation on May 24, 1979, requires using a new facility, or requires making a new labor agreement, until any necessary capital improvements are made in the line or facility or the agreement is made.

(2) Notwithstanding another law and the route and service criteria, during the period a decision of the Secretary under section 4 of the Act is deferred, Amtrak shall provide substitute transportation over existing routes recommended for restructuring and over other existing feasible routes. Except for transportation concentrating on commuter ridership over a short haul route, transportation provided under this paragraph may be provided only if the route complies with subsection (a) of this section, adjusted to reflect constant 1979 dollars.

(c) SHORT HAUL DEMONSTRATION ROUTES.—Notwithstanding this part, Amtrak may provide short haul trains on additional routes totaling not more than 200 miles that link at least 2 major metropolitan areas—

(1) on a demonstration basis to establish the feasibility and benefits of the transportation; and

(2) to the extent available resources allow.

(d) ROUTES DISCONTINUED BY RAIL CARRIERS.—Amtrak may undertake to provide rail passenger transportation between places served by a rail carrier filing a notice of discontinuance under section 10908 or 10909 of this title.

§24706. Discontinuance

(a) NOTICE OF DISCONTINUANCE.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, at least 90 days before a discontinuance under section 24704 or 24707(a) or (b) of this title, Amtrak shall give notice of the discontinuance in the way Amtrak decides will give a State, a regional or local authority, or another person the opportunity to agree to share the cost of any part of the train, route, or service to be discontinued.

(2) Notice of the discontinuance under section 24704 or 24707(a) or (b) of this title shall be posted in all stations served by the train to be discontinued at least 14 days before the discontinuance.

(b) DISCONTINUANCE FOR LACK OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) Amtrak may discontinue service under section 24704 or 24707(a) or (b) of this title during—

(A) the first month of a fiscal year if the authorization of appropriations and the appropriations for Amtrak are not enacted at least 90 days before the beginning of the fiscal year; and

(B) the 30 days following enactment of an appropriation for Amtrak or a rescission of an appropriation.

(2) Amtrak shall notify each affected State or regional or local transportation authority of a discontinuance under this subsection as soon as possible after Amtrak decides to discontinue the service.

(c) EMPLOYEE PROTECTIVE ARRANGEMENTS.—(1) Amtrak or a rail carrier (including a terminal company) shall provide fair and equitable arrangements to protect the interests of employees of Amtrak or a rail carrier, as the case may be, affected by a discontinuance of intercity rail passenger service, including a discontinuance of service provided by a rail carrier under a facility or service agreement under section 24308(a) of this title under a modification or ending of the agreement or because Amtrak begins providing that service. Arrangements shall include provisions that may be necessary for—

(A) the preservation of rights, privileges, and benefits (including continuation of pension rights and benefits) under existing collective bargaining agreements or otherwise;

(B) the continuation of collective bargaining rights;

(C) the protection of individual employees against a worsening of their positions related to employment;

(D) assurances of priority of reemployment of employees whose employment is ended or who are laid off; and

(E) paid training and retraining programs.

(2) With respect to Amtrak's obligations under this subsection and in an agreement to carry out this subsection involving only Amtrak and its employees, a discontinuance of intercity rail passenger service does not include an adjustment in frequency, or seasonal suspension of intercity rail passenger trains that causes a temporary suspension of service, unless the adjustment or suspension reduces passenger train operations on a particular route to fewer than 3 round trips a week at any time during a calendar year.

(3) Arrangements under this subsection shall provide benefits at least equal to benefits established under section 11347 of this title.

(4) A contract under this chapter or section 24308(a) of this title shall specify the terms of protective arrangements.

(5) This subsection does not impose on Amtrak an obligation of a rail carrier related to a right, privilege, or benefit earned by an employee because of previous service performed for the carrier.

(6) This subsection does not apply to Amtrak Commuter.

§24707. Cost and performance review

(a) ROUTE REVIEWS.—Amtrak shall review annually each route in the basic system to decide if the route meets the long distance or short distance route criterion, as appropriate, under section 24705(a)(1) of this title, adjusted to reflect constant 1979 dollars. The review shall include an evaluation of the potential market demand for, and the cost of providing transportation on, a part of the route and an alternative route. Amtrak shall submit the results of the review to the House of Representatives, the Senate, and the Secretary of Transportation. If Amtrak decides that a route will not meet the criterion under section 24705(a)(1), as adjusted, Amtrak shall modify or discontinue rail passenger transportation operations on the route so that it will meet the criterion.

(b) FINANCIAL REQUIREMENTS AND PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.—Not later than 30 days after the beginning of each fiscal year, Amtrak shall evaluate the financial requirements for operating the basic system and the progress in achieving the system-wide performance standards prescribed under this part during the fiscal year. If Amtrak decides amounts available for the fiscal year are not enough to meet estimated operating costs, or if Amtrak estimates it cannot meet the performance standards, Amtrak shall act to reduce costs and improve performance. Action under this subsection shall be designed to continue the maximum level of transportation practicable, including—

(1) changing the frequency of transportation;

(2) increasing fares;

(3) reducing the cost of sleeper car and dining car service on certain routes;

(4) increasing the passenger capacity of cars used on certain routes; and

(5) modifying the route system or discontinuing transportation over routes, considering short term avoidable loss and the number of passengers served on those routes.

(c) COST LIMITATIONS AND REVENUE GOALS.—Annual costs of Amtrak may not be more than amounts, including grants made under section 24104 of this title, contributions of States, regional and local authorities, and other persons, and revenues, available to Amtrak in the fiscal year. Amtrak annually shall set a goal of recovering an amount so that its revenues, including contributions, is at least 61 percent of its costs, except capital costs.

(d) CONDUCTOR REPORTS.—To assess the operational performance of trains, the President of Amtrak may direct the conductor on any train of Amtrak to report to Amtrak any inadequacy of train operation. The report shall be signed by the conductor, contain sufficient information to locate equipment or personnel failures, and be submitted promptly to Amtrak.

§24708. Special commuter transportation

(a) TRANSPORTATION TO BE CONTINUED IF CRITERION MET.—Amtrak shall continue to provide rail passenger transportation provided under section 403(d) of the Rail Passenger Service Act before October 1, 1981, if, after considering estimated fare increases and State and local contributions to the transportation, the transportation meets the short distance route criterion under section 24705(a)(1) of this title, as adjusted. Transportation continued under this section shall be financed consistent with the method of financing in effect on September 30, 1981. If the transportation is not estimated to meet the criterion, as adjusted, Amtrak may modify or discontinue the transportation so that the criterion is met.

(b) TRANSPORTATION WITH SHORT-TERM AVOIDABLE LOSS.—Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section, if after September 30, 1993, and before October 1, 1995, transportation provided under subsection (a) on a route during the prior 6 months has a short-term avoidable loss (excluding the cost of providing passenger equipment needed to provide the transportation), Amtrak may choose to consider modifying or discontinuing the transportation. If Amtrak does make such a choice, Amtrak shall solicit public comment for at least 30 days on alternatives to the modification or discontinuance. Not later than 60 days after the comment period ends, Amtrak may modify or discontinue the transportation so that there is no short-term avoidable loss under this section for providing the transportation on the route.

§24709. International transportation

Amtrak may develop and operate international intercity rail passenger transportation between the United States and Canada and between the United States and Mexico. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney General, in cooperation with Amtrak, shall maintain, consistent with the effective enforcement of the immigration and customs laws, en route customs inspection and immigration procedures for international intercity rail passenger transportation that will—

(1) be convenient for passengers; and

(2) result in the quickest possible international intercity rail passenger transportation.

(2) "rail carrier" means an express carrier and a rail carrier as defined in section 10102 of this title, including Amtrak.

§24902. Goals and requirements

(a) NORTHEAST CORRIDOR IMPROVEMENT PLAN.—To the extent of amounts appropriated under section 24909 of this title, Amtrak shall carry out a Northeast Corridor improvement program to achieve the following goals:

(1) establish not later than September 30, 1985, regularly scheduled and dependable intercity rail passenger transportation between—

(A) Boston, Massachusetts, and New York, New York, in not more than 3 hours and 40 minutes, including intermediate stops; and

(B) New York, New York, and the District of Columbia, in not more than 2 hours and 40 minutes, including intermediate stops;

(2) improve facilities, under route criteria approved by Congress, on routes to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Albany, New York, and Atlantic City, New Jersey, from the Northeast Corridor main line, and to Boston, Massachusetts, and New Haven, Connecticut, from Springfield, Massachusetts, to make those facilities more compatible with improved high-speed transportation provided on the Northeast Corridor main line;

(3) improve nonoperational parts of stations, related facilities, and fencing used in intercity rail passenger transportation;

(4) facilitate improvements in, and usage of, commuter rail passenger, rail rapid transit, and local public transportation, to the extent compatible with clauses (1)–(3) of this subsection and subsections (f) and (h) of this section;

(5) maintain and improve rail freight transportation in or adjacent to the Northeast Corridor and through-freight transportation in the Northeast Corridor, to the extent compatible with clauses (1)–(4) of this subsection and subsections (f) and (h) of this section;

(6) continue and improve passenger radio mobile telephone service on high-speed rail passenger transportation between Boston, Massachusetts, and the District of Columbia, to the extent compatible with clauses (1)–(3) of this subsection and subsections (f) and (h) of this section; and

(7) eliminate to the maximum extent practicable congestion in rail freight and rail passenger transportation at the Baltimore and Potomac Tunnel in Baltimore, Maryland, by rehabilitating and improving the tunnel and the rail lines approaching the tunnel.

(b) MANAGING COSTS AND REVENUES.—Amtrak shall manage its operating costs, pricing policies, and other factors with the goal of having revenues derived each fiscal year from providing intercity rail passenger transportation over the Northeast Corridor route between the District of Columbia and Boston, Massachusetts, equal at least the operating costs of providing that transportation in that fiscal year.

(c) COST SHARING FOR NONOPERATIONAL FACILITIES.—(1) Fifty percent of the cost of improvements under subsection (a)(3) of this section shall be paid by a State, local or regional transportation authority or other responsible party. However, Amtrak may finance entirely a safety-related improvement.

(2) When a part of the cost of improvements under subsection (a)(3) of this section will be paid by a responsible party under paragraph (1) of this subsection, Amtrak may make an agreement with the party under which Amtrak—

(A) shall carry out the improvements with amounts appropriated under section 24909 of this title and the party shall reimburse Amtrak; and

(B) to the extent provided in an appropriation law, may incur obligations for contracts to carry out the improvements in anticipation of reimbursement.

(3) Amounts reimbursed to Amtrak under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be credited to the appropriation originally charged for the cost of the improvements and are available for further obligation.

(d) PASSENGER RADIO MOBILE TELEPHONE SERVICE.—The President and departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government shall assist Amtrak under subsection (a)(6) of this section, subject to the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq.) and radio services standards, when the Federal Communications Commission decides the assistance is in the public interest, convenience, and necessity.

(e) PRIORITIES IN SELECTING AND SCHEDULING PROJECTS.—When selecting and scheduling specific projects, Amtrak shall apply the following considerations, in the following order of priority:

(1) Safety-related items should be completed before other items because the safety of the passengers and users of the Northeast Corridor is paramount.

(2) Activities that benefit the greatest number of passengers should be completed before activities involving fewer passengers.

(3) Reliability of intercity rail passenger transportation must be emphasized.

(4) Trip-time requirements of this section must be achieved to the extent compatible with the priorities referred to in paragraphs (1)–(3) of this subsection.

(5) Improvements that will pay for the investment by achieving lower operating or maintenance costs should be carried out before other improvements.

(6) Construction operations should be scheduled so that the fewest possible passengers are inconvenienced, transportation is maintained, and the on-time performance of Northeast Corridor commuter rail passenger and rail freight transportation is optimized.

(7) Planning should focus on completing activities that will provide immediate benefits to users of the Northeast Corridor.

(f) COMPATIBILITY WITH FUTURE IMPROVEMENTS AND PRODUCTION OF MAXIMUM LABOR BENEFITS.—Improvements under this section shall be compatible with future improvements in transportation and shall produce the maximum labor benefit from hiring individuals presently unemployed.

(g) AUTOMATIC TRAIN CONTROL SYSTEMS.—A train operating on the Northeast Corridor main line or between the main line and Atlantic City shall be equipped with an automatic train control system designed to slow or stop the train in response to an external signal.

(h) HIGH-SPEED TRANSPORTATION.—If practicable, Amtrak shall establish intercity rail passenger transportation in the Northeast Corridor that carries out section 703(1)(E) of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976 (Public Law 94–210, 90 Stat. 121).

(i) EQUIPMENT DEVELOPMENT.—Amtrak shall develop economical and reliable equipment compatible with track, operating, and marketing characteristics of the Northeast Corridor, including the capability to meet reliable trip times under section 703(1)(E) of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976 (Public Law 94–210, 90 Stat. 121) in regularly scheduled revenue transportation in the Corridor, when the Northeast Corridor improvement program is completed. Amtrak must decide that equipment complies with this subsection before buying equipment with financial assistance of the Government. Amtrak shall submit a request for an authorization of appropriations for production of the equipment.

(j) AGREEMENTS FOR OFF-CORRIDOR ROUTING OF RAIL FREIGHT TRANSPORTATION.—(1) Amtrak may make an agreement with a rail freight carrier or a regional transportation authority under which the carrier will carry out an alternate off-corridor routing of rail freight transportation over rail lines in the Northeast Corridor between the District of Columbia and New York metropolitan areas, including intermediate points. The agreement shall be for at least 5 years.

(2) Amtrak shall apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission for approval of the agreement and all related agreements accompanying the application as soon as the agreement is made. If the Commission finds that approval is necessary to carry out this chapter, the Commission shall approve the application and related agreements not later than 90 days after receiving the application.

(3) If an agreement is not made under paragraph (1) of this subsection, Amtrak, with the consent of the other parties, may apply to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Not later than 90 days after the application, the Commission shall decide on the terms of an agreement if it decides that doing so is necessary to carry out this chapter. The decision of the Commission is binding on the other parties.

(k) COORDINATION.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall coordinate—

(A) transportation programs related to the Northeast Corridor to ensure that the programs are integrated and consistent with the Northeast Corridor improvement program; and

(B) amounts from departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government to achieve urban redevelopment and revitalization in the vicinity of urban rail stations in the Northeast Corridor served by intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation.

(2) If the Secretary finds significant noncompliance with this section, the Secretary may deny financing to a noncomplying program until the noncompliance is corrected.

(l) COMPLETION.—Amtrak shall give the highest priority to completing the program.

§24903. Program master plan for Boston-New York main line

(a) CONTENTS.—Not later than October 27, 1993, in consultation with Amtrak and the commuter and freight rail carriers operating over the Northeast Corridor main line between Boston, Massachusetts, and New York, New York, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a program master plan for a coordinated program of improvements to that main line that will allow the establishment of regularly scheduled, safe, and dependable rail passenger transportation between Boston, Massachusetts, and New York, New York, in not more than 3 hours, including intermediate stops. The plan shall include—

(1) a description of the implications of the improvements for the regional transportation system, including the probable effects on general travel trends and on travel volumes in other transportation modes and the implications for State and local governments in achieving compliance with the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.);

(2) an identification of the coordinated program of improvements and the specific projects of that program, including the estimated costs, schedules, timing, and relationship of those projects with other projects;

(3) an identification of the financial responsibility for the specific projects of that program and the sources of the amounts for the projects;

(4) an operating plan for the construction period of the improvements that shows a coordinated approach to scheduling intercity and commuter trains;

(5) an operating plan for the coordinated scheduling of intercity and commuter trains for the period after the program is completed, including priority scheduling, dispatching, and occupancy of tracks for appropriately frequent, regularly scheduled intercity rail passenger transportation between Boston, Massachusetts, and New York, New York, in not more than 3 hours, including intermediate stops;

(6) a comprehensive plan to control future congestion in the Northeast Corridor attributable to increases in intercity and commuter rail passenger transportation;

(7) an assessment of long-term operational safety needs and a list of specific projects designed to maximize operational safety; and

(8) comments that Amtrak submits to the Secretary on the plan.

(b) SUBMITTING MODIFICATIONS OF PLAN TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress any modification made to the program master plan and comments that Amtrak submits on the modification.

§24904. General authority

(a) GENERAL.—To carry out this chapter and the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 701 et seq.), Amtrak may—

(1) acquire, maintain, and dispose of any interest in property used to provide improved high-speed rail transportation under section 24902 of this title;

(2) acquire any interest in real property that Amtrak considers necessary to carry out the goals of section 24902;

(3) provide for rail freight, intercity rail passenger, and commuter rail passenger transportation over property acquired under this section;

(4) improve rail rights of way between Boston, Massachusetts, and the District of Columbia (including the route through Springfield, Massachusetts, and routes to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and Albany, New York, from the Northeast Corridor main line) to achieve the goals of section 24902 of providing improved high-speed rail passenger transportation between Boston, Massachusetts, and the District of Columbia, and intermediate intercity markets;

(5) acquire, build, improve, and install passenger stations, communications and electric power facilities and equipment, public and private highway and pedestrian crossings, and other facilities and equipment necessary to provide improved high-speed rail passenger transportation over rights of way improved under clause (4) of this subsection;

(6) make agreements with other carriers and commuter authorities to grant, acquire, or make arrangements for rail freight or commuter rail passenger transportation over, rights of way and facilities acquired under the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 701 et seq.) and the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976 (45 U.S.C. 801 et seq.);

(7) appoint a general manager of the Northeast Corridor improvement program; and

(8) make agreements with telecommunications common carriers, subject to the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq.), to continue existing, and establish new and improved, passenger radio mobile telephone service in the high-speed rail passenger transportation area specified in section 24902(a)(1) and (2).

(b) COMPENSATORY AGREEMENTS.—Rail freight and commuter rail passenger transportation provided under subsection (a)(3) of this section shall be provided under compensatory agreements with the responsible carriers.

(c) COMPENSATION FOR TRANSPORTATION OVER CERTAIN RIGHTS OF WAY AND FACILITIES.—(1) An agreement under subsection (a)(6) of this section shall provide for reasonable reimbursement of costs but may not cross-subsidize intercity rail passenger, commuter rail passenger, and rail freight transportation.

(2) If the parties do not agree, the Interstate Commerce Commission shall order that the transportation continue over facilities acquired under the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 701 et seq.) and the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976 (45 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) and shall determine compensation (without allowing cross-subsidization between intercity rail passenger and rail freight transportation) for the transportation not later than 120 days after the dispute is submitted. The Commission shall assign to a rail freight carrier obtaining transportation under this subsection the costs Amtrak incurs only for the benefit of the carrier, plus a proportionate share of all other costs of providing transportation under this paragraph incurred for the common benefit of Amtrak and the carrier. The proportionate share shall be based on relative measures of volume of car operations, tonnage, or other factors that reasonably reflect the relative use of rail property covered by this subsection.

(3) This subsection does not prevent the parties from making an agreement under subsection (a)(6) of this section after the Commission makes a decision under this subsection.

§24905. Coordination board and safety committee

(a) NORTHEAST CORRIDOR COORDINATION BOARD.—(1) The Northeast Corridor Coordination Board is composed of the following members:

(A) one individual from each commuter authority (as defined in section 1135(a) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (45 U.S.C. 1104)) that provides or makes a contract to provide commuter rail passenger transportation over the main line of the Northeast Corridor.

(B) 2 individuals selected by Amtrak.

(C) one individual selected by the Consolidated Rail Corporation.

(2) The Board shall recommend to Amtrak—

(A) policies that ensure equitable access to the Northeast Corridor, considering the need for equitable access by commuter and intercity rail passenger transportation and the requirements of section 24308(c) of this title; and

(B) equitable policies for the Northeast Corridor related to—

(i) dispatching;

(ii) public information;

(iii) maintaining equipment and facilities;

(iv) major capital facility investments; and

(v) harmonizing equipment acquisitions, rates, and schedules.

(3) The Board may recommend to the board of directors and President of Amtrak action necessary to resolve differences on providing transportation, except for facilities and transportation matters under section 24308(a) or 24904(a)(5) and (c) of this title.

(b) NORTHEAST CORRIDOR SAFETY COMMITTEE.—(1) The Northeast Corridor Safety Committee is composed of members appointed by the Secretary of Transportation. The members shall be representatives of—

(A) the Secretary;

(B) Amtrak;

(C) freight carriers operating more than 150,000 train miles a year on the main line of the Northeast Corridor;

(D) commuter agencies;

(E) rail passengers;

(F) rail labor; and

(G) other individuals and organizations the Secretary decides have a significant interest in rail safety.

(2) The Secretary shall consult with the Committee about safety improvements on the Northeast Corridor main line. The Committee shall meet at least once every 2 years to consider safety matters on the main line.

(3) At the beginning of the first session of each Congress, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the status of efforts to improve safety on the Northeast Corridor main line. The report shall include the safety recommendations of the Committee and the comments of the Secretary on those recommendations.

(4) The Committee shall cease to exist on January 1, 1999, or on another date the Secretary decides is appropriate. The Secretary shall notify Congress in writing of a decision to terminate the Committee on another date.

§24906. Eliminating highway at-grade crossings

(a) PLAN.—In consultation with the States on the main line of the Northeast Corridor, the Secretary of Transportation shall develop a plan not later than September 30, 1993, to eliminate all highway at-grade crossings of the main line by not later than December 31, 1997. The plan may provide that eliminating a crossing is not required if—

(1) impracticable or unnecessary; and

(2) using the crossing is consistent with conditions the Secretary considers appropriate to ensure safety.

(b) AMTRAK'S SHARE OF COSTS.—Amtrak shall pay 20 percent of the cost of eliminating each highway at-grade crossing under the plan.

§24907. Note and mortgage

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—To secure amounts expended by the United States Government to acquire and improve rail property designated under section 206(c)(1)(C) and (D) of the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 (45 U.S.C. 716(c)(1)(C) and (D)), the Secretary of Transportation may obtain a note of indebtedness from, and make a mortgage agreement with, Amtrak to establish a mortgage lien on the property for the Government. The note and mortgage may not supersede section 24904 of this title.

(b) EXEMPTIONS FROM LAWS AND REGULATIONS.—The note and agreement under subsection (a) of this section, and a transaction related to the note or agreement, are exempt from any United States, State, or local law or regulation that regulates securities or the issuance of securities. The note, agreement, or transaction under this section has the same immunities from other laws that section 601 of the Act (45 U.S.C. 791) gives to transactions that comply with or carry out the final system plan. The transfer of rail property because of the note, agreement, or transaction has the same exemptions, privileges, and immunities that the Act (45 U.S.C. 701 et seq.) gives to a transfer ordered or approved by the special court under section 303(b) of the Act (45 U.S.C. 743(b)).

(c) IMMUNITY FROM LIABILITY AND INDEMNIFICATION.—Amtrak, its board of directors, and its individual directors are not liable because Amtrak has given or issued the note or agreement to the Government under subsection (a) of this section. Immunity granted under this subsection also applies to a transaction related to the note or agreement. The Government shall indemnify Amtrak, its board, and individual directors against costs and expenses actually and reasonably incurred in defending a civil action testing the validity of the note, agreement, or transaction.

§24908. Transfer taxes and levies and recording charges

A transfer of an interest in rail property under this chapter is exempt from a tax or levy related to the transfer that is imposed by the United States Government, a State, or a political subdivision of a State. On payment of the appropriate and generally applicable charge for the service performed, a transferee or transferor may record an instrument and, consistent with the final system plan, the release or removal of a pre-existing lien or encumbrance of record related to the interest transferred.

§24909. Authorization of appropriations

(a) GENERAL.—(1) Not more than $2,313,000,000 may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation to achieve the goals of section 24902(a)(1) of this title. From this amount, the following amounts shall be expended by Amtrak:

26101. Rail police officers.

26102. Limit on certain accident or incident liability.

§26101. Rail police officers

Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation, a rail police officer who is employed by a rail carrier and certified or commissioned as a police officer under the laws of a State may enforce the laws of any jurisdiction in which the rail carrier owns property, to the extent of the authority of a police officer certified or commissioned under the laws of that jurisdiction, to protect—

(1) employees, passengers, or patrons of the rail carrier;

(2) property, equipment, and facilities owned, leased, operated, or maintained by the rail carrier;

(3) property moving in interstate or foreign commerce in the possession of the rail carrier; and

(4) personnel, equipment, and material moving by rail that are vital to the national defense.

§26102. Limit on certain accident or incident liability

(a) GENERAL.—When a publicly financed commuter transportation authority established under Virginia law makes a contract to indemnify Amtrak for liability for operations conducted by or for the authority or to indemnify a rail carrier over whose tracks those operations are conducted, liability against Amtrak, the authority, or the carrier for all claims (including punitive damages) arising from an accident or incident in the District of Columbia related to those operations may not be more than the limits of the liability coverage the authority maintains to indemnify Amtrak or the carrier.

(b) MINIMUM REQUIRED LIABILITY COVERAGE.—A publicly financed commuter transportation authority referred to in subsection (a) of this section must maintain a total minimum liability coverage of at least $200,000,000.

(c) EFFECTIVENESS.—This section is effective only after Amtrak or a rail carrier seeking an indemnification contract under this section makes an operating agreement with a publicly financed commuter transportation authority established under Virginia law to provide access to its property for revenue transportation related to the operations of the authority.

(A) "adequate repair" does not include repair resulting in substantially impaired operation of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment;

(B) "first purchaser" means the first purchaser of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment other than for resale;

(C) "original equipment" means motor vehicle equipment (including a tire) installed in or on a motor vehicle at the time of delivery to the first purchaser;

(D) "replacement equipment" means motor vehicle equipment (including a tire) that is not original equipment;

(E) a brand name owner of a tire marketed under a brand name not owned by the manufacturer of the tire is deemed to be the manufacturer of the tire;

(F) a defect in original equipment, or noncompliance of original equipment with a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter, is deemed to be a defect or noncompliance of the motor vehicle in or on which the equipment was installed at the time of delivery to the first purchaser;

(G) a manufacturer of a motor vehicle in or on which original equipment was installed when delivered to the first purchaser is deemed to be the manufacturer of the equipment; and

(H) a retreader of a tire is deemed to be the manufacturer of the tire.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations changing paragraph (1)(C), (D), (F), or (G) of this subsection.

§30103. Relationship to other laws

(a) UNIFORMITY OF REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may not prescribe a safety regulation related to a motor vehicle subject to subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title that differs from a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter. However, the Secretary may prescribe, for a motor vehicle operated by a carrier subject to subchapter II of chapter 105, a safety regulation that imposes a higher standard of performance after manufacture than that required by an applicable standard in effect at the time of manufacture.

(b) PREEMPTION.—(1) When a motor vehicle safety standard is in effect under this chapter, a State or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe or continue in effect a standard applicable to the same aspect of performance of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment only if the standard is identical to the standard prescribed under this chapter. However, the United States Government, a State, or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe a standard for a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment obtained for its own use that imposes a higher performance requirement than that required by the otherwise applicable standard under this chapter.

(2) A State may enforce a standard that is identical to a standard prescribed under this chapter.

(c) ANTITRUST LAWS.—This chapter does not—

(1) exempt from the antitrust laws conduct that is unlawful under those laws; or

(2) prohibit under the antitrust laws conduct that is lawful under those laws.

(d) WARRANTY OBLIGATIONS AND ADDITIONAL LEGAL RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.—Sections 30117(b), 30118–30121, 30166(f), and 30167(a) and (b) of this title do not establish or affect a warranty obligation under a law of the United States or a State. A remedy under those sections and sections 30161 and 30162 of this title is in addition to other rights and remedies under other laws of the United States or a State.

(e) COMMON LAW LIABILITY.—Compliance with a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter does not exempt a person from liability at common law.

§30104. Authorization of appropriations

The following amounts may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to carry out this chapter:

(1) $71,333,436 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993.

(2) $74,044,106 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1994.

(3) $76,857,782 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1995.

SUBCHAPTER II—STANDARDS AND COMPLIANCE

§30111. Standards

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe motor vehicle safety standards. Each standard shall be practicable, meet the need for motor vehicle safety, and be stated in objective terms.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS AND CONSULTATION.—When prescribing a motor vehicle safety standard under this chapter, the Secretary shall—

(1) consider relevant available motor vehicle safety information;

(2) consult with the agency established under the Act of August 20, 1958 (Public Law 85–684, 72 Stat. 635), and other appropriate State or interstate authorities (including legislative committees);

(3) consider whether a proposed standard is reasonable, practicable, and appropriate for the particular type of motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment for which it is prescribed; and

(4) consider the extent to which the standard will carry out section 30101 of this title.

(c) COOPERATION.—The Secretary may advise, assist, and cooperate with departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, States, and other public and private agencies in developing motor vehicle safety standards.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES OF STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall specify the effective date of a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter in the order prescribing the standard. A standard may not become effective before the 180th day after the standard is prescribed or later than one year after it is prescribed. However, the Secretary may prescribe a different effective date after finding, for good cause shown, that a different effective date is in the public interest and publishing the reasons for the finding.

(e) 5-YEAR PLAN FOR TESTING STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall establish and periodically review and update on a continuing basis a 5-year plan for testing motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter that the Secretary considers capable of being tested. In developing the plan and establishing testing priorities, the Secretary shall consider factors the Secretary considers appropriate, consistent with section 30101 of this title and the Secretary's other duties and powers under this chapter. The Secretary may change at any time those priorities to address matters the Secretary considers of greater priority. The initial plan may be the 5-year plan for compliance testing in effect on December 18, 1991.

§30112. Prohibitions on manufacturing, selling, and importing noncomplying motor vehicles and equipment

(a) GENERAL.—Except as provided in this section, sections 30113 and 30114 of this title, and subchapter III of this chapter, a person may not manufacture for sale, sell, offer for sale, introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States, any motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment manufactured on or after the date an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter takes effect unless the vehicle or equipment complies with the standard and is covered by a certification issued under section 30115 of this title.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—This section does not apply to—

(1) the sale, offer for sale, or introduction or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment after the first purchase of the vehicle or equipment in good faith other than for resale;

(2) a person—

(A) establishing that the person had no reason to know, despite exercising reasonable care, that a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment does not comply with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter; or

(B) holding, without knowing about the noncompliance and before the vehicle or equipment is first purchased in good faith other than for resale, a certificate issued by a manufacturer or importer stating the vehicle or equipment complies with applicable standards prescribed under this chapter;

(3) a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment intended only for export, labeled for export on the vehicle or equipment and on the outside of any container of the vehicle or equipment, and exported;

(4) a motor vehicle the Secretary of Transportation decides under section 30141 of this title is capable of complying with applicable standards prescribed under this chapter;

(5) a motor vehicle imported for personal use by an individual who receives an exemption under section 30142 of this title;

(6) a motor vehicle under section 30143 of this title imported by an individual employed outside the United States;

(7) a motor vehicle under section 30144 of this title imported on a temporary basis;

(8) a motor vehicle or item of motor vehicle equipment under section 30145 of this title requiring further manufacturing; or

(9) a motor vehicle that is at least 25 years old.

§30113. General exemptions

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "low-emission motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle meeting the standards for new motor vehicles applicable to the vehicle under section 202 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7521) when the vehicle is manufactured and emitting an air pollutant in an amount significantly below one of those standards.

(b) AUTHORITY TO EXEMPT AND PROCEDURES.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may exempt, on a temporary basis, motor vehicles from a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter on terms the Secretary considers appropriate. An exemption may be renewed. A renewal may be granted only on reapplication and must conform to the requirements of this subsection.

(2) The Secretary may begin a proceeding under this subsection when a manufacturer applies for an exemption or a renewal of an exemption. The Secretary shall publish notice of the application and provide an opportunity to comment. An application for an exemption or for a renewal of an exemption shall be filed at a time and in the way, and contain information, this section and the Secretary require.

(3) The Secretary may act under this subsection on finding that—

(A) an exemption is consistent with the public interest and this chapter; and

(B)(i) compliance with the standard would cause substantial economic hardship to a manufacturer that has tried to comply with the standard in good faith;

(ii) the exemption would make easier the development or field evaluation of a new motor vehicle safety feature providing a safety level at least equal to the safety level of the standard;

(iii) the exemption would make the development or field evaluation of a low-emission motor vehicle easier and would not unreasonably lower the safety level of that vehicle; or

(iv) compliance with the standard would prevent the manufacturer from selling a motor vehicle with an overall safety level at least equal to the overall safety level of nonexempt vehicles.

(c) CONTENTS OF APPLICATIONS.—A manufacturer applying for an exemption under subsection (b) of this section shall include the following information in the application:

(1) if the application is made under subsection (b)(3)(B)(i) of this section, a complete financial statement describing the economic hardship and a complete description of the manufacturer's good faith effort to comply with each motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter from which the manufacturer is requesting an exemption.

(2) if the application is made under subsection (b)(3)(B)(ii) of this section, a record of the research, development, and testing establishing the innovative nature of the safety feature and a detailed analysis establishing that the safety level of the feature at least equals the safety level of the standard.

(3) if the application is made under subsection (b)(3)(B)(iii) of this section, a record of the research, development, and testing establishing that the motor vehicle is a low-emission motor vehicle and that the safety level of the vehicle is not lowered unreasonably by exemption from the standard.

(4) if the application is made under subsection (b)(3)(B)(iv) of this section, a detailed analysis showing how the vehicle provides an overall safety level at least equal to the overall safety level of nonexempt vehicles.

(d) ELIGIBILITY.—A manufacturer is eligible for an exemption under subsection (b)(3)(B)(i) of this section only if the Secretary determines that the manufacturer's total motor vehicle production in the most recent year of production is not more than 10,000. A manufacturer is eligible for an exemption under subsection (b)(3)(B)(ii), (iii), or (iv) of this section only if the Secretary determines the exemption is for not more than 2,500 vehicles to be sold in the United States in any 12-month period.

(e) MAXIMUM PERIOD.—An exemption or renewal under subsection (b)(3)(B)(i) of this section may be granted for not more than 3 years. An exemption or renewal under subsection (b)(3)(B)(ii), (iii), or (iv) of this section may be granted for not more than 2 years.

(f) DISCLOSURE.—The Secretary may make public, by the 10th day after an application is filed, information contained in the application or relevant to the application unless the information concerns or is related to a trade secret or other confidential information not relevant to the application.

(g) NOTICE OF DECISION.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a notice of each decision granting an exemption under this section and the reasons for granting it.

(h) PERMANENT LABEL REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall require a permanent label to be fixed to a motor vehicle granted an exemption under this section. The label shall either name or describe each motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter from which the vehicle is exempt. The Secretary may require that written notice of an exemption be delivered by appropriate means to the dealer and the first purchaser of the vehicle other than for resale.

§30114. Special exemptions

The Secretary of Transportation may exempt a motor vehicle or item of motor vehicle equipment from section 30112(a) of this title on terms the Secretary decides are necessary for research, investigations, demonstrations, training, or competitive racing events.

§30115. Certification of compliance

A manufacturer or distributor of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment shall certify to the distributor or dealer at delivery that the vehicle or equipment complies with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter. A person may not issue the certificate if, in exercising reasonable care, the person has reason to know the certificate is false or misleading in a material respect. Certification of a vehicle must be shown by a label or tag permanently fixed to the vehicle. Certification of equipment may be shown by a label or tag on the equipment or on the outside of the container in which the equipment is delivered.

§30116. Defects and noncompliance found before sale to purchaser

(a) Actions Required of Manufacturers and Distributors.—If, after a manufacturer or distributor sells a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment to a distributor or dealer and before the distributor or dealer sells the vehicle or equipment, it is decided that the vehicle or equipment contains a defect related to motor vehicle safety or does not comply with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter—

(1) the manufacturer or distributor immediately shall repurchase the vehicle or equipment at the price paid by the distributor or dealer, plus transportation charges and reasonable reimbursement of at least one percent a month of the price paid prorated from the date of notice of noncompliance or defect to the date of repurchase; or

(2) if a vehicle, the manufacturer or distributor immediately shall give to the distributor or dealer at the manufacturer's or distributor's own expense, the part or equipment needed to make the vehicle comply with the standards or correct the defect.

(b) Distributor or Dealer Installation.—The distributor or dealer shall install the part or equipment referred to in subsection (a)(2) of this section. If the distributor or dealer installs the part or equipment with reasonable diligence after it is received, the manufacturer shall reimburse the distributor or dealer for the reasonable value of the installation and a reasonable reimbursement of at least one percent a month of the manufacturer's or distributor's selling price prorated from the date of notice of noncompliance or defect to the date the motor vehicle complies with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter or the defect is corrected.

(c) Establishing Amount Due and Civil Actions.—The parties shall establish the value of installation and the amount of reimbursement under this section. If the parties do not agree, or if a manufacturer or distributor refuses to comply with subsection (a) or (b) of this section, the distributor or dealer purchasing the motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment may bring a civil action. The action may be brought in a United States district court for the judicial district in which the manufacturer or distributor resides, is found, or has an agent, to recover damages, court costs, and a reasonable attorney's fee. An action under this section must be brought not later than 3 years after the claim accrues.

§30117. Providing information to, and maintaining records on, purchasers

(a) Providing Information and Notice.—The Secretary of Transportation may require that each manufacturer of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment provide technical information related to performance and safety required to carry out this chapter. The Secretary may require the manufacturer to give the following notice of that information when the Secretary decides it is necessary:

(1) to each prospective purchaser of a vehicle or equipment before the first sale other than for resale at each location at which the vehicle or equipment is offered for sale by a person having a legal relationship with the manufacturer, in a way the Secretary decides is appropriate.

(2) to the first purchaser of a vehicle or equipment other than for resale when the vehicle or equipment is bought, in printed matter placed in the vehicle or attached to or accompanying the equipment.

(b) Maintaining Purchaser Records and Procedures.—(1) A manufacturer of a motor vehicle or tire (except a retreaded tire) shall cause to be maintained a record of the name and address of the first purchaser of each vehicle or tire it produces and, to the extent prescribed by regulations of the Secretary, shall cause to be maintained a record of the name and address of the first purchaser of replacement equipment (except a tire) that the manufacturer produces. The Secretary may prescribe by regulation the records to be maintained and reasonable procedures for maintaining the records under this subsection, including procedures to be followed by distributors and dealers to assist the manufacturer in obtaining the information required by this subsection. A procedure shall be reasonable for the type of vehicle or tire involved, and shall provide reasonable assurance that a customer list of a distributor or dealer, or similar information, will be made available to a person (except the distributor or dealer) only when necessary to carry out this subsection and sections 30118–30121, 30166(f), and 30167(a) and (b) of this title. Availability of assistance from a distributor or dealer does not affect an obligation of a manufacturer under this subsection.

(2)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, the Secretary may require a distributor or dealer to maintain a record under paragraph (1) of this subsection only if the business of the distributor or dealer is owned or controlled by a manufacturer of tires.

(B) The Secretary shall require each distributor and dealer whose business is not owned or controlled by a manufacturer of tires to give a registration form (containing the tire identification number) to the first purchaser of a tire. The Secretary shall prescribe the form, which shall be standardized for all tires and designed to allow the purchaser to complete and return it directly to the manufacturer of the tire. The manufacturer shall give sufficient copies of forms to distributors and dealers.

(3)(A) The Secretary shall evaluate from time to time how successful the procedures under paragraph (2) of this subsection have been in helping to maintain records about first purchasers of tires. After each evaluation, the Secretary shall decide—

(i) the extent to which distributors and dealers have complied with the procedures;

(ii) the extent to which distributors and dealers have encouraged first purchasers of tires to register the tires; and

(iii) whether to prescribe for manufacturers, distributors, or dealers other requirements that the Secretary decides will increase significantly the percentage of first purchasers of tires about whom records are maintained.

(B) The Secretary may prescribe a requirement under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph only if the Secretary decides it is necessary to reduce the risk to motor vehicle safety, after considering—

(i) the cost of the requirement to manufacturers and the burden of the requirement on distributors and dealers, compared to the increase in the percentage of first purchasers of tires about whom records would be maintained as a result of the requirement;

(ii) the extent to which distributors and dealers have complied with the procedures in paragraph (2) of this subsection; and

(iii) the extent to which distributors and dealers have encouraged first purchasers of tires to register the tires.

(C) A manufacturer of tires shall reimburse distributors and dealers of that manufacturer's tires for all reasonable costs incurred by the distributors and dealers in complying with a requirement prescribed by the Secretary under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.

(D) After making a decision under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the Secretary shall submit to each House of Congress a report containing a detailed statement of the decision and an explanation of the reasons for the decision.

§30118. Notification of defects and noncompliance

(a) Notification by Secretary.—The Secretary of Transportation shall notify the manufacturer of a motor vehicle or replacement equipment immediately after making an initial decision (through testing, inspection, investigation, or research carried out under this chapter, examining communications under section 30166(f) of this title, or otherwise) that the vehicle or equipment contains a defect related to motor vehicle safety or does not comply with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter. The notification shall include the information on which the decision is based. The Secretary shall publish a notice of each decision under this subsection in the Federal Register. Subject to section 30167(a) of this title, the notification and information are available to any interested person.

(b) Defect and Noncompliance Proceedings and Orders.—(1) The Secretary may make a final decision that a motor vehicle or replacement equipment contains a defect related to motor vehicle safety or does not comply with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter only after giving the manufacturer an opportunity to present information, views, and arguments showing that there is no defect or noncompliance or that the defect does not affect motor vehicle safety. Any interested person also shall be given an opportunity to present information, views, and arguments.

(2) If the Secretary decides under paragraph (1) of this subsection that the vehicle or equipment contains the defect or does not comply, the Secretary shall order the manufacturer to—

(A) give notification under section 30119 of this title to the owners, purchasers, and dealers of the vehicle or equipment of the defect or noncompliance; and

(B) remedy the defect or noncompliance under section 30120 of this title.

(c) Notification by Manufacturer.—A manufacturer of a motor vehicle or replacement equipment shall notify the Secretary by certified mail, and the owners, purchasers, and dealers of the vehicle or equipment as provided in section 30119(d) of this section, if the manufacturer—

(1) learns the vehicle or equipment contains a defect and decides in good faith that the defect is related to motor vehicle safety; or

(2) decides in good faith that the vehicle or equipment does not comply with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter.

(d) Exemptions.—On application of a manufacturer, the Secretary shall exempt the manufacturer from this section if the Secretary decides a defect or noncompliance is inconsequential to motor vehicle safety. The Secretary may take action under this subsection only after notice in the Federal Register and an opportunity for any interested person to present information, views, and arguments.

(e) Hearings About Meeting Notification Requirements.—On the motion of the Secretary or on petition of any interested person, the Secretary may conduct a hearing to decide whether the manufacturer has reasonably met the notification requirements under this section. Any interested person may make written and oral presentations of information, views, and arguments on whether the manufacturer has reasonably met the notification requirements. If the Secretary decides that the manufacturer has not reasonably met the notification requirements, the Secretary shall order the manufacturer to take specified action to meet those requirements and may take any other action authorized under this chapter.

§30119. Notification procedures

(a) CONTENTS OF NOTIFICATION.—Notification by a manufacturer required under section 30118 of this title of a defect or noncompliance shall contain—

(1) a clear description of the defect or noncompliance;

(2) an evaluation of the risk to motor vehicle safety reasonably related to the defect or noncompliance;

(3) the measures to be taken to obtain a remedy of the defect or noncompliance;

(4) a statement that the manufacturer giving notice will remedy the defect or noncompliance without charge under section 30120 of this title;

(5) the earliest date on which the defect or noncompliance will be remedied without charge, and for tires, the period during which the defect or noncompliance will be remedied without charge under section 30120 of this title;

(6) the procedure the recipient of a notice is to follow to inform the Secretary of Transportation when a manufacturer, distributor, or dealer does not remedy the defect or noncompliance without charge under section 30120 of this title; and

(7) other information the Secretary prescribes by regulation.

(b) EARLIEST REMEDY DATE.—The date specified by a manufacturer in a notification under subsection (a)(5) of this section or section 30121(c)(2) of this title is the earliest date that parts and facilities reasonably can be expected to be available to remedy the defect or noncompliance. The Secretary may disapprove the date.

(c) TIME FOR NOTIFICATION.—Notification required under section 30118 of this title shall be given within a reasonable time—

(1) prescribed by the Secretary, after the manufacturer receives notice of a final decision under section 30118(b) of this title; or

(2) after the manufacturer first decides that a safety-related defect or noncompliance exists under section 30118(c) of this title.

(d) MEANS OF PROVIDING NOTIFICATION.—(1) Notification required under section 30118 of this title about a motor vehicle shall be sent by first class mail—

(A) to each person registered under State law as the owner and whose name and address are reasonably ascertainable by the manufacturer through State records or other available sources; or

(B) if a registered owner is not notified under clause (A) of this paragraph, to the most recent purchaser known to the manufacturer.

(2) Notification required under section 30118 of this title about replacement equipment (except a tire) shall be sent by first class mail to the most recent purchaser known to the manufacturer. In addition, if the Secretary decides that public notice is required for motor vehicle safety, public notice shall be given in the way required by the Secretary after consulting with the manufacturer.

(3) Notification required under section 30118 of this title about a tire shall be sent by first class mail (or, if the manufacturer prefers, by certified mail) to the most recent purchaser known to the manufacturer. In addition, if the Secretary decides that public notice is required for motor vehicle safety, public notice shall be given in the way required by the Secretary after consulting with the manufacturer. In deciding whether public notice is required, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the magnitude of the risk to motor vehicle safety caused by the defect or noncompliance; and

(B) the cost of public notice compared to the additional number of owners the notice may reach.

(4) A dealer to whom a motor vehicle or replacement equipment was delivered shall be notified by certified mail or quicker means if available.

(e) SECOND NOTIFICATION.—If the Secretary decides that a notification sent by a manufacturer under this section has not resulted in an adequate number of motor vehicles or items of replacement equipment being returned for remedy, the Secretary may order the manufacturer to send a 2d notification in the way the Secretary prescribes by regulation.

(f) NOTIFICATION BY LESSOR TO LESSEE.—(1) In this subsection, "leased motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle that is leased to a person for at least 4 months by a lessor that has leased at least 5 motor vehicles in the 12 months before the date of the notification.

(2) A lessor that receives a notification required by section 30118 of this title about a leased motor vehicle shall provide a copy of the notification to the lessee in the way the Secretary prescribes by regulation.

§30120. Remedies for defects and noncompliance

(a) WAYS TO REMEDY.—(1) Subject to subsections (f) and (g) of this section, when notification of a defect or noncompliance is required under section 30118(b) or (c) of this title, the manufacturer of the defective or noncomplying motor vehicle or replacement equipment shall remedy the defect or noncompliance without charge when the vehicle or equipment is presented for remedy. Subject to subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the manufacturer shall remedy the defect or noncompliance in any of the following ways the manufacturer chooses:

(A) if a vehicle—

(i) by repairing the vehicle;

(ii) by replacing the vehicle with an identical or reasonably equivalent vehicle; or

(iii) by refunding the purchase price, less a reasonable allowance for depreciation.

(B) if replacement equipment, by repairing the equipment or replacing the equipment with identical or reasonably equivalent equipment.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations to allow the manufacturer to impose conditions on the replacement of a motor vehicle or refund of its price.

(b) TIRE REMEDIES.—(1) A manufacturer of a tire, including an original equipment tire, shall remedy a defective or noncomplying tire if the owner or purchaser presents the tire for remedy not later than 60 days after the later of—

(A) the day the owner or purchaser receives notification under section 30119 of this title; or

(B) if the manufacturer decides to replace the tire, the day the owner or purchaser receives notification that a replacement is available.

(2) If the manufacturer decides to replace the tire and the replacement is not available during the 60-day period, the owner or purchaser must present the tire for remedy during a subsequent 60-day period that begins only after the owner or purchaser receives notification that a replacement will be available during the subsequent period. If tires are available during the subsequent period, only a tire presented for remedy during that period must be remedied.

(c) ADEQUACY OF REPAIRS.—(1) If a manufacturer decides to repair a defective or noncomplying motor vehicle or replacement equipment and the repair is not done adequately within a reasonable time, the manufacturer shall—

(A) replace the vehicle or equipment without charge with an identical or reasonably equivalent vehicle or equipment; or

(B) for a vehicle, refund the purchase price, less a reasonable allowance for depreciation.

(2) Failure to repair a motor vehicle or replacement equipment adequately not later than 60 days after its presentation is prima facie evidence of failure to repair within a reasonable time. However, the Secretary may extend, by order, the 60-day period if good cause for an extension is shown and the reason is published in the Federal Register before the period ends. Presentation of a vehicle or equipment for repair before the date specified by a manufacturer in a notice under section 30119(a)(5) or 30121(c)(2) of this title is not a presentation under this subsection.

(d) FILING MANUFACTURER'S REMEDY PROGRAM.—A manufacturer shall file with the Secretary a copy of the manufacturer's program under this section for remedying a defect or noncompliance. The Secretary shall make the program available to the public and publish a notice of availability in the Federal Register.

(e) HEARINGS ABOUT MEETING REMEDY REQUIREMENTS.—On the motion of the Secretary or on application by any interested person, the Secretary may conduct a hearing to decide whether the manufacturer has reasonably met the remedy requirements under this section. Any interested person may make written and oral presentations of information, views, and arguments on whether the manufacturer has reasonably met the remedy requirements. If the Secretary decides a manufacturer has not reasonably met the remedy requirements, the Secretary shall order the manufacturer to take specified action to meet those requirements and may take any other action authorized under this chapter.

(f) FAIR REIMBURSEMENT TO DEALERS.—A manufacturer shall pay fair reimbursement to a dealer providing a remedy without charge under this section.

(g) NONAPPLICATION.—(1) The requirement that a remedy be provided without charge does not apply if the motor vehicle or replacement equipment was bought by the first purchaser more than 8 calendar years, or the tire, including an original equipment tire, was bought by the first purchaser more than 3 calendar years, before notice is given under section 30118(c) of this title or an order is issued under section 30118(b) of this title, whichever is earlier.

(2) This section does not apply during any period in which enforcement of an order under section 30118(b) of this title is restrained or the order is set aside in a civil action to which section 30121(d) of this title applies.

(h) EXEMPTIONS.—On application of a manufacturer, the Secretary shall exempt the manufacturer from this section if the Secretary decides a defect or noncompliance is inconsequential to motor vehicle safety. The Secretary may take action under this subsection only after notice in the Federal Register and an opportunity for any interested person to present information, views, and arguments.

(i) LIMITATION ON SALE OR LEASE.—(1) If notification is required by an order under section 30118(b) of this title or is required under section 30118(c) of this title and the manufacturer has provided to a dealer notification about a new motor vehicle or new item of replacement equipment in the dealer's possession at the time of notification that contains a defect related to motor vehicle safety or does not comply with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter, the dealer may sell or lease the motor vehicle or item of replacement equipment only if—

(A) the defect or noncompliance is remedied as required by this section before delivery under the sale or lease; or

(B) when the notification is required by an order under section 30118(b) of this title, enforcement of the order is restrained or the order is set aside in a civil action to which section 30121(d) of this title applies.

(2) This subsection does not prohibit a dealer from offering for sale or lease the vehicle or equipment.

§30121. Provisional notification and civil actions to enforce

(a) PROVISIONAL NOTIFICATION.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may order a manufacturer to issue a provisional notification if a civil action about an order issued under section 30118(b) of this title has been brought under section 30163 of this title. The provisional notification shall contain—

(A) a statement that the Secretary has decided that a defect related to motor vehicle safety or noncompliance with a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter exists and that the manufacturer is contesting the decision in a civil action in a United States district court;

(B) a clear description of the Secretary's stated basis for the decision;

(C) the Secretary's evaluation of the risk to motor vehicle safety reasonably related to the defect or noncompliance;

(D) measures the Secretary considers necessary to avoid an unreasonable risk to motor vehicle safety resulting from the defect or noncompliance;

(E) a statement that the manufacturer will remedy the defect or noncompliance without charge under section 30120 of this title, but that the requirement to remedy without charge is conditioned on the outcome of the civil action; and

(F) other information the Secretary prescribes by regulation or includes in the order requiring the notice.

(2) A notification under this subsection does not relieve a manufacturer of liability for not giving notification required by an order under section 30118(b) of this title.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS FOR NOT NOTIFYING.—(1) A manufacturer that does not notify owners and purchasers under section 30119(c) and (d) of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty, unless the manufacturer prevails in a civil action referred to in subsection (a) of this section or the court in that action enjoins enforcement of the order. Enforcement may be enjoined only if the court decides that the failure to notify is reasonable and that the manufacturer has demonstrated the likelihood of prevailing on the merits. If enforcement is enjoined, the manufacturer is not liable during the time the order is stayed.

(2) A manufacturer that does not notify owners and purchasers as required under subsection (a) of this section is liable for a civil penalty regardless of whether the manufacturer prevails in an action on the validity of the order issued under section 30118(b) of this title.

(c) ORDERS TO MANUFACTURERS.—If the Secretary prevails in a civil action referred to in subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall order the manufacturer—

(1) to notify each owner, purchaser, and dealer described in section 30119(d) of this title of the outcome of the action and other information the Secretary requires, and notification under this clause may be combined with notification required under section 30118(b) of this title;

(2) to specify the earliest date under section 30119(b) of this title on which the defect or noncompliance will be remedied without charge under section 30120 of this title; and

(3) if notification was required under subsection (a) of this section, to reimburse an owner or purchaser for reasonable and necessary expenses (in an amount that is not more than the amount specified in the order of the Secretary under subsection (a)) incurred for repairing the defect or noncompliance during the period beginning on the date that notification was required to be issued and ending on the date the owner or purchaser receives the notification under this subsection.

(d) VENUE.—Notwithstanding section 30163(c) of this title, a civil action about an order issued under section 30118(b) of this title must be brought in the United States district court for a judicial district in the State in which the manufacturer is incorporated or the District of Columbia. On motion of a party, the court may transfer the action to another district court if good cause is shown. All actions related to the same order under section 30118(b) shall be consolidated in an action in one judicial district under an order of the court in which the first action was brought. If the first action is transferred to another court, that court shall issue the consolidation order.

§30122. Making safety devices and elements inoperative

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "motor vehicle repair business" means a person holding itself out to the public to repair for compensation a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment.

(b) PROHIBITION.—A manufacturer, distributor, dealer, or motor vehicle repair business may not knowingly make inoperative any part of a device or element of design installed on or in a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment in compliance with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter unless the manufacturer, distributor, dealer, or repair business reasonably believes the vehicle or equipment will not be used (except for testing or a similar purpose during maintenance or repair) when the device or element is inoperative.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations—

(1) to exempt a person from this section if the Secretary decides the exemption is consistent with motor vehicle safety and section 30101 of this title; and

(2) to define "make inoperative".

(d) NONAPPLICATION.—This section does not apply to a safety belt interlock or buzzer designed to indicate a safety belt is not in use as described in section 30124 of this title.

§30123. Tires

(a) LABELING REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of Transportation shall require that a pneumatic tire subject to a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter be labeled permanently and conspicuously with safety information the Secretary decides is necessary to carry out section 30101 of this title.

(b) CONTENTS OF LABEL.—Labeling required on a tire under subsection (a) of this section shall include—

(1)(A) identification of the manufacturer;

(B) for a retreaded tire, identification of the retreader; or

(C) for a tire containing a brand name (other than the name of the manufacturer), a code mark allowing a seller to identify the manufacturer to the purchaser;

(2) the composition of material used in the ply of the tire;

(3) the number of plies in the tire;

(4) the maximum allowable load for the tire; and

(5)(A) a statement that the tire complies with minimum safe performance standards prescribed under this chapter; or

(B) a mark or symbol the Secretary prescribes for use by a manufacturer or retreader complying with those standards.

(c) ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—The Secretary may require that additional safety information be disclosed to a purchaser when a tire is sold.

(d) REGROOVED TIRE LIMITATIONS.—(1) In this subsection, "regrooved tire" means a tire with a new tread produced by cutting into the tread of a worn tire.

(2) The Secretary may authorize the sale, offer for sale, introduction for sale, or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce, of a regrooved tire or a motor vehicle equipped with regrooved tires if the Secretary decides the tires are designed and made in a way consistent with section 30101 of this title. A person may not sell, offer for sale, introduce for sale, or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, a regrooved tire or a vehicle equipped with regrooved tires unless authorized by the Secretary.

(e) UNIFORM QUALITY GRADING SYSTEM, NOMENCLATURE, AND MARKETING PRACTICES.—The Secretary shall prescribe through standards a uniform quality grading system for motor vehicle tires to help consumers make an informed choice when purchasing tires. The Secretary also shall cooperate with industry and the Federal Trade Commission to the greatest extent practicable to eliminate deceptive and confusing tire nomenclature and marketing practices. A tire standard or regulation prescribed under this chapter supersedes an order or administrative interpretation of the Commission.

(f) MAXIMUM LOAD STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall require a motor vehicle to be equipped with tires that meet maximum load standards when the vehicle is loaded with a reasonable amount of luggage and the total number of passengers the vehicle is designed to carry. The vehicle shall be equipped with those tires by the manufacturer or by the first purchaser when the vehicle is first bought in good faith other than for resale.

§30124. Buzzers indicating nonuse of safety belts

A motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter may not require or allow a manufacturer to comply with the standard by using a safety belt interlock designed to prevent starting or operating a motor vehicle if an occupant is not using a safety belt or a buzzer designed to indicate a safety belt is not in use, except a buzzer that operates only during the 8-second period after the ignition is turned to the "start" or "on" position.

§30125. Schoolbuses and schoolbus equipment

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "schoolbus" means a passenger motor vehicle designed to carry a driver and more than 10 passengers, that the Secretary of Transportation decides is likely to be used significantly to transport preprimary, primary, and secondary school students to or from school or an event related to school.

(2) "schoolbus equipment" means equipment designed primarily for a schoolbus or manufactured or sold to replace or improve a system, part, or component of a schoolbus or as an accessory or addition to a schoolbus.

(b) STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall prescribe motor vehicle safety standards for schoolbuses and schoolbus equipment manufactured in, or imported into, the United States. Standards shall include minimum performance requirements for—

(1) emergency exits;

(2) interior protection for occupants;

(3) floor strength;

(4) seating systems;

(5) crashworthiness of body and frame (including protection against rollover hazards);

(6) vehicle operating systems;

(7) windows and windshields; and

(8) fuel systems.

(c) TEST DRIVING BY MANUFACTURERS.—The Secretary may require by regulation a schoolbus to be test-driven by a manufacturer before introduction in commerce.

§30126. Used motor vehicles

To ensure a continuing and effective national safety program, it is the policy of the United States Government to encourage and strengthen State inspection of used motor vehicles. Therefore, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe uniform motor vehicle safety standards applicable to all used motor vehicles. The standards shall be stated in terms of motor vehicle safety performance.

§30127. Automatic occupant crash protection and seat belt use

(a) Definitions.—In this section—

(1) "bus" means a motor vehicle with motive power (except a trailer) designed to carry more than 10 individuals.

(2) "multipurpose passenger vehicle" means a motor vehicle with motive power (except a trailer), designed to carry not more than 10 individuals, that is constructed either on a truck chassis or with special features for occasional off-road operation.

(3) "passenger car" means a motor vehicle with motive power (except a multipurpose passenger vehicle, motorcycle, or trailer) designed to carry not more than 10 individuals.

(4) "truck" means a motor vehicle with motive power (except a trailer) designed primarily to transport property or special purpose equipment.

(b) Inflatable Restraint Requirements.—(1) Not later than September 1, 1993, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe under this chapter an amendment to Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard 208 issued under the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966. The amendment shall require that the automatic occupant crash protection system for both of the front outboard seating positions for each of the following vehicles be an inflatable restraint (with lap and shoulder belts) complying with the occupant protection requirements under section 4.1.2.1 of Standard 208:

(A) 95 percent of each manufacturer's annual production of passenger cars manufactured after August 31, 1996, and before September 1, 1997.

(B) 80 percent of each manufacturer's annual production of buses, multipurpose passenger vehicles, and trucks (except walk-in van-type trucks and vehicles designed to be sold only to the United States Postal Service) with a gross vehicle weight rating of not more than 8,500 pounds and an unloaded vehicle weight of not more than 5,500 pounds manufactured after August 31, 1997, and before September 1, 1998.

(C) 100 percent of each manufacturer's annual production of passenger cars manufactured after August 31, 1997.

(D) 100 percent of each manufacturer's annual production of vehicles described in clause (B) of this paragraph manufactured after August 31, 1998.

(2) Manufacturers may not use credits and incentives available before September 1, 1998, under the provisions of Standard 208 (as amended by this section) to comply with the requirements of paragraph (1)(D) of this subsection after August 31, 1998.

(c) Owner Manual Requirements.—In amending Standard 208, the Secretary of Transportation shall require, to be effective as soon as possible after the amendment is prescribed, that owner manuals for passenger cars, buses, multipurpose passenger vehicles, and trucks equipped with an inflatable restraint include a statement in an easily understandable format stating that—

(1) either or both of the front outboard seating positions of the vehicle are equipped with an inflatable restraint referred to as an "airbag" and a lap and shoulder belt;

(2) the "airbag" is a supplemental restraint and is not a substitute for lap and shoulder belts;

(3) lap and shoulder belts also must be used correctly by an occupant in a front outboard seating position to provide restraint or protection from frontal crashes as well as other types of crashes or accidents; and

(4) occupants should always wear their lap and shoulder belts, if available, or other safety belts, whether or not there is an inflatable restraint.

(d) Seat Belt Use Laws.—Congress finds that it is in the public interest for each State to adopt and enforce mandatory seat belt use laws and for the United States Government to adopt and enforce mandatory seat belt use regulations.

(e) Temporary Exemptions.—(1) On application of a manufacturer, the Secretary of Transportation may exempt, on a temporary basis, motor vehicles of that manufacturer from any requirement under subsections (b) and (c) of this section on terms the Secretary considers appropriate. An exemption may be renewed.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may grant an exemption under paragraph (1) of this subsection if the Secretary finds that there has been a disruption in the supply of any component of an inflatable restraint or in the use and installation of that component by the manufacturer because of an unavoidable event not under the control of the manufacturer that will prevent the manufacturer from meeting its anticipated production volume of vehicles with those restraints.

(3) Only an affected manufacturer may apply for an exemption. The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe in the amendment to Standard 208 required under this section the information an affected manufacturer must include in its application under this subsection. The manufacturer shall specify in the application the models, lines, and types of vehicles affected. The Secretary may consolidate similar applications from different manufacturers.

(4) An exemption or renewal of an exemption is conditioned on the commitment of the manufacturer to recall the exempted vehicles for installation of the omitted inflatable restraints within a reasonable time that the manufacturer proposes and the Secretary of Transportation approves after the components become available in sufficient quantities to satisfy both anticipated production and recall volume requirements.

(5) The Secretary of Transportation shall publish in the Federal Register a notice of each application under this subsection and each decision to grant or deny a temporary exemption and the reasons for the decision.

(6) The Secretary of Transportation shall require a label for each exempted vehicle that can be removed only after recall and installation of the required inflatable restraint. The Secretary shall require that written notice of the exemption be provided to the dealer and the first purchaser of each exempted vehicle other than for resale, with the notice being provided in a way, and containing the information, the Secretary considers appropriate.

(f) Application.—(1) This section revises, but does not replace, Standard 208 as in effect on December 18, 1991, including the amendment of March 26, 1991 (56 Fed. Reg. 12472), to Standard 208, extending the requirements for automatic crash protection, with incentives for more innovative automatic crash protection, to trucks, buses, and multipurpose passenger vehicles. This section may not be construed as—

(A) affecting another provision of law carried out by the Secretary of Transportation applicable to passenger cars, buses, multipurpose passenger vehicles, or trucks; or

(B) establishing a precedent related to developing or prescribing a Government motor vehicle safety standard.

(2) This section and amendments to Standard 208 made under this section may not be construed as indicating an intention by Congress to affect any liability of a motor vehicle manufacturer under applicable law related to vehicles with or without inflatable restraints.

(g) Report.—(1) On October 1, 1992, and every 6 months after that date through October 1, 2000, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit reports on the effectiveness of occupant restraint systems expressed as a percentage reduction in fatalities or injuries of restrained occupants compared to unrestrained occupants for—

(A) a combination of inflated restraints and lap and shoulder belts;

(B) inflated restraints only; and

(C) lap and shoulder belts only.

(2) In consultation with the Secretaries of Labor and Defense, the Secretary of Transportation also shall provide information and analysis on lap and shoulder belt use, nationally and in each State by—

(A) military personnel;

(B) Government, State, and local law enforcement officers;

(C) other Government and State employees; and

(D) the public.

(h) Airbags for Government Cars.—In cooperation with the Administrator of General Services and the heads of appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, the Secretary of Transportation shall establish a program, consistent with applicable procurement laws of the Government and available appropriations, requiring that all passenger cars acquired—

(1) after September 30, 1994, for use by the Government be equipped, to the maximum extent practicable, with driver-side inflatable restraints; and

(2) after September 30, 1996, for use by the Government be equipped, to the maximum extent practicable, with inflatable restraints for both front outboard seating positions.

SUBCHAPTER III—IMPORTING NON-COMPLYING MOTOR VEHICLES AND EQUIPMENT

§30141. Importing motor vehicles capable of complying with standards

(a) General.—Section 30112(a) of this title does not apply to a motor vehicle if—

(1) on the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or on petition of a manufacturer or importer registered under subsection (c) of this section, the Secretary decides—

(A) the vehicle is—

(i) substantially similar to a motor vehicle originally manufactured for import into and sale in the United States;

(ii) certified under section 30115 of this title;

(iii) the same model year (as defined under regulations of the Secretary of Transportation) as the model of the motor vehicle it is being compared to; and

(iv) capable of being readily altered to comply with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter; or

(B) if there is no substantially similar United States motor vehicle, the safety features of the vehicle comply with or are capable of being altered to comply with those standards based on destructive test information or other evidence the Secretary of Transportation decides is adequate;

(2) the vehicle is imported by a registered importer; and

(3) the registered importer pays the annual fee the Secretary of Transportation establishes under subsection (e) of this section to pay for the costs of carrying out the registration program for importers under subsection (c) of this section and any other fees the Secretary of Transportation establishes to pay for the costs of—

(A) processing bonds provided to the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (d) of this section; and

(B) making the decisions under this subchapter.

(b) PROCEDURES ON DECIDING ON MOTOR VEHICLE CAPABILITY.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish by regulation procedures for making a decision under subsection (a)(1) of this section and the information a petitioner must provide to show clearly that the motor vehicle is capable of being brought into compliance with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter. In establishing the procedures, the Secretary shall provide for a minimum period of public notice and written comment consistent with ensuring expeditious, but complete, consideration and avoiding delay by any person. In making a decision under those procedures, the Secretary shall consider test information and other information available to the Secretary, including any information provided by the manufacturer. If the Secretary makes a negative decision, the Secretary may not make another decision for the same model until at least 3 calendar months have elapsed after the negative decision.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall publish each year in the Federal Register a list of all decisions made under subsection (a)(1) of this section. Each published decision applies to the model of the motor vehicle for which the decision was made. A positive decision permits another importer registered under subsection (c) of this section to import a vehicle of the same model under this section if the importer complies with all the terms of the decision.

(c) REGISTRATION.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish procedures for registering a person who complies with requirements prescribed by the Secretary by regulation under this subsection, including—

(A) recordkeeping requirements;

(B) inspection of records and facilities related to motor vehicles the person has imported, altered, or both; and

(C) requirements that ensure that the importer (or a successor in interest) will be able technically and financially to carry out responsibilities under sections 30117(b), 30118–30121, and 30166(f) of this title.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall deny registration to a person whose registration is revoked under paragraph (4) of this subsection.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation may deny registration to a person that is or was owned or controlled by, or under common ownership or control with, a person whose registration was revoked under paragraph (4) of this subsection.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation shall establish procedures for—

(A) revoking or suspending a registration issued under paragraph (1) of this subsection for not complying with a requirement of this subchapter or section 30112, 30115, 30117–30122, 30125(c), 30127, or 30166 of this title or regulations prescribed under this subchapter or those sections;

(B) automatically suspending a registration for not paying a fee under subsection (a)(3) of this section in a timely manner or for knowingly filing a false or misleading certification under section 30146 of this title; and

(C) reinstating suspended registrations.

(d) BONDS.—(1) A person importing a motor vehicle under this section shall provide a bond to the Secretary of the Treasury (acting for the Secretary of Transportation) and comply with the terms the Secretary of Transportation decides are appropriate to ensure that the vehicle—

(A) will comply with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter within a reasonable time (specified by the Secretary of Transportation) after the vehicle is imported; or

(B) will be exported (at no cost to the United States Government) by the Secretary of the Treasury or abandoned to the Government.

(2) The amount of the bond provided under this subsection shall be at least equal to the dutiable value of the motor vehicle (as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury) but not more than 150 percent of that value.

(e) FEE REVIEW, ADJUSTMENT, AND USE.—The Secretary of Transportation shall review and make appropriate adjustments at least every 2 years in the amounts of the fees required to be paid under subsection (a)(3) of this section. The Secretary of Transportation shall establish the fees for each fiscal year before the beginning of that year. All fees collected remain available until expended without fiscal year limit to the extent provided in advance by appropriation laws. The amounts are only for use by the Secretary of Transportation—

(1) in carrying out this section and sections 30146(a)–(c)(1), (d), and (e) and 30147(b) of this title; and

(2) in advancing to the Secretary of the Treasury amounts for costs incurred under this section and section 30146 of this title to reimburse the Secretary of the Treasury for those costs.

§30142. Importing motor vehicles for personal use

(a) GENERAL.—Section 30112(a) of this title does not apply to an imported motor vehicle if—

(1) the vehicle is imported for personal use, and not for resale, by an individual (except an individual described in sections 30143 and 30144 of this title);

(2) the vehicle is imported after January 31, 1990; and

(3) the individual takes the actions required under subsection (b) of this section to receive an exemption.

(b) EXEMPTIONS.—(1) To receive an exemption under subsection (a) of this section, an individual must—

(A) provide the Secretary of the Treasury (acting for the Secretary of Transportation) with—

(i) an appropriate bond in an amount determined under section 30141(d) of this title;

(ii) a copy of an agreement with an importer registered under section 30141(c) of this title for bringing the motor vehicle into compliance with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter; and

(iii) a certification that the vehicle meets the requirement of section 30141(a)(1)(A) or (B) of this title; and

(B) comply with appropriate terms the Secretary of Transportation imposes to ensure that the vehicle—

(i) will be brought into compliance with those standards within a reasonable time (specified by the Secretary of Transportation) after the vehicle is imported; or

(ii) will be exported (at no cost to the United States Government) by the Secretary of the Treasury or abandoned to the Government.

(2) For good cause shown, the Secretary of Transportation may allow an individual additional time, but not more than 30 days after the day on which the motor vehicle is offered for import, to comply with paragraph (1)(A)(ii) of this subsection.

§30143. Motor vehicles imported by individuals employed outside the United States

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "assigned place of employment" means—

(1) the principal location at which an individual is permanently or indefinitely assigned to work; and

(2) for a member of the uniformed services, the individual's permanent duty station.

(b) GENERAL.—Section 30112(a) of this title does not apply to a motor vehicle imported for personal use, and not for resale, by an individual—

(1) whose assigned place of employment was outside the United States as of October 31, 1988, and who has not had an assigned place of employment in the United States from that date through the date the vehicle is imported into the United States;

(2) who previously had not imported a motor vehicle into the United States under this section or section 108(g) of the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 or, before October 31, 1988, under section 108(b)(3) of that Act;

(3) who acquired, or made a binding contract to acquire, the vehicle before October 31, 1988;

(4) who imported the vehicle into the United States not later than October 31, 1992; and

(5) who satisfies section 108(b)(3) of that Act as in effect on October 30, 1988.

(c) CERTIFICATION.—Subsection (b) of this section is carried out by certification in the form the Secretary of Transportation or the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

§30144. Importing motor vehicles on a temporary basis

(a) GENERAL.—Section 30112(a) of this title does not apply to a motor vehicle imported on a temporary basis for personal use by an individual who is a member of—

(1)(A) the personnel of the government of a foreign country on assignment in the United States or a member of the Secretariat of a public international organization designated under the International Organization Immunities Act (22 U.S.C. 288 et seq.); and

(B) the class of individuals for whom the Secretary of State has authorized free importation of motor vehicles; or

(2) the armed forces of a foreign country on assignment in the United States.

(b) VERIFICATION.—The Secretary of Transportation or the Secretary of the Treasury may require verification, that the Secretary of Transportation considers appropriate, that an individual is a member described under subsection (a) of this section. The Secretary of Transportation shall ensure that a motor vehicle imported under this section will be exported (at no cost to the United States Government) or abandoned to the Government when the individual no longer—

(1) resides in the United States; and

(2) is a member described under subsection (a) of this section.

(c) SALE IN THE UNITED STATES.—A motor vehicle imported under this section may not be sold when in the United States.

§30145. Importing motor vehicles or equipment requiring further manufacturing

Section 30112(a) of this title does not apply to a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment if the vehicle or equipment—

(1) requires further manufacturing to perform its intended function as decided under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation; and

(2) is accompanied at the time of importation by a written statement issued by the manufacturer indicating the applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter with which it does not comply.

§30146. Release of motor vehicles and bonds

(a) COMPLIANCE CERTIFICATION AND BOND.—(1) Except as provided in subsections (c) and (d) of this section, an importer registered under section 30141(c) of this title may license or register an imported motor vehicle for use on public streets, roads, or highways, or release custody of a motor vehicle imported by the registered importer or imported by an individual under section 30142 of this title and altered by the registered importer to meet applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter to a person for license or registration for use on public streets, roads, or highways, only after 30 days after the registered importer certifies to the Secretary of Transportation, in the way the Secretary prescribes, that the motor vehicle complies with each standard prescribed in the year the vehicle was manufactured and that applies in that year to that vehicle. A vehicle may not be released if the Secretary gives written notice before the end of the 30-day period that the Secretary will inspect the vehicle under subsection (c) of this section.

(2) The Secretaries of Transportation and the Treasury shall prescribe regulations—

(A) ensuring the release of a motor vehicle and bond required under section 30141(d) of this title at the end of the 30-day period, unless the Secretary of Transportation issues a notice of an inspection under subsection (c) of this section; and

(B) providing that the Secretary of Transportation shall release the vehicle and bond promptly after an inspection under subsection (c) of this section showing compliance with the standards applicable to the vehicle.

(3) Each registered importer shall include on each motor vehicle released under this subsection a label prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation identifying the importer and stating that the vehicle has been altered by the importer to comply with the standards applicable to the vehicle.

(b) RELIANCE ON MANUFACTURER'S CERTIFICATION.—In making a certification under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the registered importer may rely on the manufacturer's certification for the model to which the motor vehicle involved is substantially similar if the importer certifies that any alteration made by the importer did not affect the compliance of the safety features of the vehicle and the importer keeps records verifying the certification for the period the Secretary of Transportation prescribes.

(c) EVIDENCE OF COMPLIANCE.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may require that the certification under subsection (a)(1) of this section be accompanied by evidence of compliance the Secretary considers appropriate or may inspect the certified motor vehicle, or both. If the Secretary gives notice of an inspection, an importer may release the vehicle only after—

(A) an inspection showing the motor vehicle complies with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter for which the inspection was made; and

(B) release of the vehicle by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall inspect periodically a representative number of motor vehicles for which certifications have been filed under subsection (a)(1) of this section. In carrying out a motor vehicle testing program under this chapter, the Secretary shall include a representative number of motor vehicles for which certifications have been filed under subsection (a)(1).

(d) CHALLENGING THE CERTIFICATION.—A motor vehicle or bond may not be released under subsection (a) of this section if the Secretary of Transportation, not later than 30 days after receiving a certification under subsection (a)(1) of this section, gives written notice that the Secretary believes or has reason to believe that the certification is false or contains a mispresentation. The vehicle and bond may be released only after the Secretary is satisfied with the certification and any modification of the certification.

(e) BOND RELEASE.—A release of a bond required under section 30141(d) of this title is deemed an acceptance of a certification or completion of an inspection under this section but is not a decision by the Secretary of Transportation under section 30118(a) or (b) of this title of compliance with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under this chapter.

§30147. Responsibility for defects and noncompliance

(a) DEEMING DEFECT OR NONCOMPLIANCE TO CERTAIN VEHICLES AND IMPORTER AS MANUFACTURER.—(1) In carrying out sections 30117(b), 30118–30121, and 30166(f) of this title—

(A) for a defect or noncompliance with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter for a motor vehicle originally manufactured for import into the United States, an imported motor vehicle having a valid certification under section 30146(a)(1) of this title and decided to be substantially similar to that motor vehicle shall be deemed as having the same defect or as not complying with the same standard unless the manufacturer or importer registered under section 30141(c) of this title demonstrates otherwise to the Secretary of Transportation; and

(B) the registered importer shall be deemed to be the manufacturer of any motor vehicle that the importer imports or brings into compliance with the standards for an individual under section 30142 of this title.

(2) The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register notice of any defect or noncompliance under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection.

(b) FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall require by regulation each registered importer (including any successor in interest) to provide and maintain evidence, satisfactory to the Secretary, of sufficient financial responsibility to meet its obligations under sections 30117(b), 30118–30121, and 30166(f) of this title.

SUBCHAPTER IV—ENFORCEMENT AND ADMINISTRATIVE

§30161. Judicial review of standards

(a) FILING AND VENUE.—A person adversely affected by an order prescribing a motor vehicle safety standard under this chapter may apply for review of the order by filing a petition for review in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. The petition must be filed not later than 59 days after the order is issued.

(b) NOTIFYING SECRETARY.—The clerk of the court shall send immediately a copy of the petition to the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary shall file with the court a record of the proceeding in which the order was prescribed.

(c) ADDITIONAL PROCEEDINGS.—(1) On request of the petitioner, the court may order the Secretary to receive additional evidence and evidence in rebuttal if the court is satisfied that the additional evidence is material and there were reasonable grounds for not presenting the evidence in the proceeding before the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may modify findings of fact or make new findings because of the additional evidence presented. The Secretary shall file a modified or new finding, a recommendation to modify or set aside the order, and the additional evidence with the court.

(d) CERTIFIED COPIES OF RECORDS OF PROCEEDINGS.—The Secretary shall give any interested person a certified copy of the transcript of the record in a proceeding under this section on request and payment of costs. A certified copy of the record of the proceeding is admissible in a proceeding arising out of a matter under this chapter, regardless of whether the proceeding under this section has begun or becomes final.

(e) FINALITY OF JUDGMENT AND SUPREME COURT REVIEW.—A judgment of a court under this section is final and may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28.

§30162. Petitions by interested persons for standards and enforcement

(a) FILING.—Any interested person may file a petition with the Secretary of Transportation requesting the Secretary to begin a proceeding—

(1) to prescribe a motor vehicle safety standard under this chapter; or

(2) to decide whether to issue an order under section 30118(b) of this title.

(b) STATEMENT OF FACTS.—The petition must state facts that the person claims establish that a motor vehicle safety standard or order referred to in subsection (a) of this section is necessary and briefly describe the order the Secretary should issue.

(c) PROCEEDINGS.—The Secretary may hold a public hearing or conduct an investigation or proceeding to decide whether to grant the petition.

(d) ACTIONS OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall grant or deny a petition not later than 120 days after the petition is filed. If a petition is granted, the Secretary shall begin the proceeding promptly. If a petition is denied, the Secretary shall publish the reasons for the denial in the Federal Register.

§30163. Actions by the Attorney General

(a) CIVIL ACTIONS TO ENFORCE.—The Attorney General may bring a civil action in a United States district court to enjoin—

(1) a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter; and

(2) the sale, offer for sale, or introduction or delivery for introduction, in interstate commerce, or the importation into the United States, of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment for which it is decided, before the first purchase in good faith other than for resale, that the vehicle or equipment—

(A) contains a defect related to motor vehicle safety about which notice was given under section 30118(c) of this title or an order was issued under section 30118(b) of this title; or

(B) does not comply with an applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter.

(b) PRIOR NOTICE.—When practicable, the Secretary of Transportation shall notify a person against whom a civil action under subsection (a) of this section is planned, give the person an opportunity to present that person's views, and, except for a knowing and willful violation of this chapter, give the person a reasonable opportunity to remedy the defect or comply with the applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter. Failure to give notice and an opportunity to remedy the defect or comply with the applicable motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter does not prevent a court from granting appropriate relief.

(c) VENUE.—Except as provided in section 30121(d) of this title, a civil action under this section or section 30165(a) of this title may be brought in the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant is found, resides, or does business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found.

(d) JURY TRIAL DEMAND.—In a trial for criminal contempt for violating an injunction or restraining order issued under subsection (a) of this section, the violation of which is also a violation of this chapter, the defendant may demand a jury trial. The defendant shall be tried as provided in rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (18 App. U.S.C.).

(e) SUBPENAS FOR WITNESSES.—In a civil action brought under this section, a subpena for a witness may be served in any judicial district.

§30164. Service of process

(a) DESIGNATING AGENTS.—A manufacturer offering a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment for import shall designate an agent on whom service of notices and process in administrative and judicial proceedings may be made. The designation shall be in writing and filed with the Secretary of Transportation. The designation may be changed in the same way as originally made.

(b) SERVICE.—An agent may be served at the agent's office or usual place of residence. Service on the agent is deemed to be service on the manufacturer. If a manufacturer does not designate an agent, service may be made by posting the notice or process in the office of the Secretary.

§30165. Civil penalty

(a) PENALTY.—A person that violates section 30112, 30115, 30117–30122, 30123(d), 30125(c), 30127, 30141–30147, or 30166 of this title or a regulation prescribed under those sections is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each motor vehicle or item of motor vehicle equipment and for each failure or refusal to allow or perform an act required by those sections. The maximum penalty under this subsection for a related series of violations is $800,000.

(b) COMPROMISE AND SETOFF.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under this section.

(2) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this section from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(c) CONSIDERATIONS.—In determining the amount of a civil penalty or compromise, the appropriateness of the penalty or compromise to the size of the business of the person charged and the gravity of the violation shall be considered.

(d) SUBPENAS FOR WITNESSES.—In a civil action brought under this section, a subpena for a witness may be served in any judicial district.

§30166. Inspections, investigations, and records

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "motor vehicle accident" means an occurrence associated with the maintenance or operation of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment resulting in personal injury, death, or property damage.

(b) AUTHORITY TO INSPECT AND INVESTIGATE.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may conduct an inspection or investigation—

(A) that may be necessary to enforce this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter; or

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall cooperate with State and local officials to the greatest extent possible in an inspection or investigation under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection.

(c) MATTERS THAT CAN BE INSPECTED AND IMPOUNDMENT.—In carrying out this chapter, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary of Transportation—

(1) at reasonable times, may inspect and copy any record related to this chapter;

(2) on request, may inspect records of a manufacturer, distributor, or dealer to decide whether the manufacturer, distributor, or dealer has complied or is complying with this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter; and

(3) at reasonable times, in a reasonable way, and on display of proper credentials and written notice to an owner, operator, or agent in charge, may—

(C) inspect with reasonable promptness that vehicle or equipment; and

(D) impound for not more than 72 hours a vehicle or equipment involved in a motor vehicle accident.

(d) REASONABLE COMPENSATION.—When a motor vehicle (except a vehicle subject to subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title) or motor vehicle equipment is inspected or temporarily impounded under subsection (c)(3) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall pay reasonable compensation to the owner of the vehicle if the inspection or impoundment results in denial of use, or reduction in value, of the vehicle.

(e) RECORDS AND MAKING REPORTS.—The Secretary of Transportation reasonably may require a manufacturer of a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment to keep records, and a manufacturer, distributor, or dealer to make reports, to enable the Secretary to decide whether the manufacturer, distributor, or dealer has complied or is complying with this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. This subsection does not impose a recordkeeping requirement on a distributor or dealer in addition to those imposed under subsection (f) of this section and section 30117(b) of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under subsection (f) or section 30117(b).

(f) PROVIDING COPIES OF COMMUNICATIONS ABOUT DEFECTS AND NONCOMPLIANCE.—A manufacturer shall give the Secretary of Transportation a true or representative copy of each communication to the manufacturer's dealers or to owners or purchasers of a motor vehicle or replacement equipment produced by the manufacturer about a defect or noncompliance with a motor vehicle safety standard prescribed under this chapter in a vehicle or equipment that is sold or serviced.

(g) ADMINISTRATIVE AUTHORITY ON REPORTS, ANSWERS, AND HEARINGS.—(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(A) require, by general or special order, any person to file reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(B) conduct hearings, administer oaths, take testimony, and require (by subpena or otherwise) the appearance and testimony of witnesses and the production of records the Secretary considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(h) CIVIL ACTIONS TO ENFORCE AND VENUE.—A civil action to enforce a subpena or order under subsection (g) of this section may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding is conducted. The court may punish a failure to obey an order of the court to comply with a subpena or order as a contempt of court.

(i) GOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION.—The Secretary of Transportation may request a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government to provide records the Secretary considers necessary to carry out this chapter. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall provide the record on request, may detail personnel on a reimbursable basis, and otherwise shall cooperate with the Secretary. This subsection does not affect a law limiting the authority of a department, agency, or instrumentality to provide information to another department, agency, or instrumentality.

(j) COOPERATION OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary of Transportation may advise, assist, and cooperate with departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government, States, and other public and private agencies in developing a method for inspecting and testing to determine compliance with a motor vehicle safety standard.

(k) PROVIDING INFORMATION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall provide the Attorney General and, when appropriate, the Secretary of the Treasury, information obtained that indicates a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter.

§30167. Disclosure of information by the Secretary of Transportation

(a) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—Information obtained under this chapter related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only in the following ways:

(1) to other officers and employees carrying out this chapter.

(2) when relevant to a proceeding under this chapter.

(3) to the public if the confidentiality of the information is preserved.

(4) to the public when the Secretary of Transportation decides that disclosure is necessary to carry out section 30101 of this title.

(b) DEFECT AND NONCOMPLIANCE INFORMATION.—Subject to subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall disclose information obtained under this chapter related to a defect or noncompliance that the Secretary decides will assist in carrying out sections 30117(b) and 30118–30121 of this title or that is required to be disclosed under section 30118(a) of this title. A requirement to disclose information under this subsection is in addition to the requirements of section 552 of title 5.

(c) INFORMATION ABOUT MANUFACTURER'S INCREASED COSTS.—A manufacturer opposing an action of the Secretary under this chapter because of increased cost shall submit to the Secretary information about the increased cost, including the manufacturer's cost and the cost to retail purchasers, that allows the public and the Secretary to evaluate the manufacturer's statement. The Secretary shall evaluate the information promptly and, subject to subsection (a) of this section, shall make the information and evaluation available to the public. The Secretary shall publish a notice in the Federal Register that the information is available.

(d) WITHHOLDING INFORMATION FROM CONGRESS.—This section does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§30168. Research, testing, development, and training

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct research, testing, development, and training necessary to carry out this chapter. The research, development, testing, and training shall include—

(2) The Secretary may carry out this subsection through grants to States, interstate authorities, and nonprofit institutions.

(b) USE OF PUBLIC AGENCIES.—In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary shall use the services, research, and testing facilities of public agencies to the maximum extent practicable to avoid duplication.

(c) FACILITIES.—The Secretary may plan, design, and build a new facility or modify an existing facility to conduct research, development, and testing in traffic safety, highway safety, and motor vehicle safety. An expenditure of more than $100,000 for planning, design, or construction may be made only if the planning, design, or construction is approved by substantially similar resolutions by the Committees on Energy and Commerce and Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Environment and Public Works of the Senate. To obtain that approval, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a prospectus on the proposed facility. The prospectus shall include—

(1) a brief description of the facility being planned, designed, or built;

(2) the location of the facility;

(3) an estimate of the maximum cost of the facility;

(4) a statement identifying private and public agencies that will use the facility and the contribution each agency will make to the cost of the facility; and

(5) a justification of the need for the facility.

(d) INCREASING COSTS OF APPROVED FACILITIES.—The estimated maximum cost of a facility approved under subsection (c) of this section may be increased by an amount equal to the percentage increase in construction costs from the date the prospectus is submitted to Congress. However, the increase in the cost of the facility may not be more than 10 percent of the estimated maximum cost included in the prospectus. The Secretary shall decide what increase in construction costs has occurred.

(e) AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION, PATENTS, AND DEVELOPMENTS.—When the United States Government makes more than a minimal contribution to a research or development activity under this chapter, the Secretary shall include in the arrangement for the activity a provision to ensure that all information, patents, and developments related to the activity are available to the public. However, the owner of a background patent may not be deprived of a right under the patent.

(7) "salvage automobile" means an automobile that is damaged by collision, fire, flood, accident, trespass, or other event, to the extent that its fair salvage value plus the cost of repairing the automobile for legal operation on public streets, roads, and highways would be more than the fair market value of the automobile immediately before the event that caused the damage.

(8) "salvage yard" means an individual or entity engaged in the business of acquiring or owning salvage automobiles for—

(A) resale in their entirety or as spare parts; or

(B) rebuilding, restoration, or crushing.

(9) "State" means a State of the United States or the District of Columbia.

§30502. National Automobile Title Information System

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OR DESIGNATION.—(1) In cooperation with the States and not later than January 31, 1996, the Secretary of Transportation shall establish a National Automobile Title Information System that will provide individuals and entities referred to in subsection (e) of this section with instant and reliable access to information maintained by the States related to automobile titling described in subsection (d) of this section. However, if the Secretary decides that the existing information system meets the requirements of subsections (d) and (e) of this section and will permit the Secretary to carry out this chapter as early as possible, the Secretary, in consultation with the Attorney General, may designate an existing information system as the National Automobile Title Information System.

(2) In cooperation with the Attorney General and the States, the Secretary shall ascertain the extent to which title and related information to be included in the system established under paragraph (1) of this subsection will be adequate, timely, reliable, uniform, and capable of assisting in efforts to prevent the introduction or reintroduction of stolen vehicles and parts into interstate commerce.

(b) OPERATION.—The Secretary may authorize the operation of the System established or designated under subsection (a)(1) of this section by agreement with one or more States, or by designating, after consulting with the States, a third party that represents the interests of the States.

(c) USER FEES.—Operation of the System established or designated under subsection (a)(1) of this section shall be paid for by user fees and should be self-sufficient and not be dependent on amounts from the United States Government. The amount of fees the operator collects and keeps under this subsection subject to annual appropriation laws, excluding fees the operator collects and pays to an entity providing information to the operator, may be not more than the costs of operating the System.

(d) INFORMATION REQUIREMENTS.—The System established or designated under subsection (a)(1) of this section shall permit a user of the System at least to establish instantly and reliably—

(1) the validity and status of a document purporting to be a certificate of title;

(2) whether an automobile bearing a known vehicle identification number is titled in a particular State;

(3) whether an automobile known to be titled in a particular State is or has been a junk automobile or a salvage automobile;

(4) for an automobile known to be titled in a particular State, the odometer mileage disclosure required under section 32705 of this title for that automobile on the date the certificate of title for that automobile was issued and any later mileage information, if noted by the State; and

(5) whether an automobile bearing a known vehicle identification number has been reported as a junk automobile or a salvage automobile under section 30504 of this title.

(e) AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION.—(1) The operator shall make available—

(A) to a participating State on request of that State, information in the System about any automobile;

(B) to a Government, State, or local law enforcement official on request of that official, information in the System about a particular automobile, junk yard, or salvage yard;

(C) to a prospective purchaser of an automobile on request of that purchaser, including an auction company or entity engaged in the business of purchasing used automobiles, information in the System about that automobile; and

(D) to a prospective or current insurer of an automobile on request of that insurer, information in the System about that automobile.

(2) The operator may release only the information reasonably necessary to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (1) of this subsection. The operator may not collect an individual's social security account number or permit users of the System to obtain an individual's address or social security account number.

§30503. State participation

(a) STATE INFORMATION.—Each State shall make titling information maintained by that State available for use in operating the National Automobile Title Information System established or designated under section 30502 of this title.

(b) VERIFICATION CHECKS.—Each State shall establish a practice of performing an instant title verification check before issuing a certificate of title to an individual or entity claiming to have purchased an automobile from an individual or entity in another State. The check shall consist of—

(1) communicating to the operator—

(A) the vehicle identification number of the automobile for which the certificate of title is sought;

(B) the name of the State that issued the most recent certificate of title for the automobile; and

(C) the name of the individual or entity to whom the certificate of title was issued; and

(2) giving the operator an opportunity to communicate to the participating State the results of a search of the information.

(c) GRANTS TO STATES.—(1) In cooperation with the States and not later than January 1, 1994, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(A) conduct a review of systems used by the States to compile and maintain information about the titling of automobiles; and

(B) determine for each State the cost of making titling information maintained by that State available to the operator to meet the requirements of section 30502(d) of this title.

(2) The Secretary may make grants to participating States to be used in making titling information maintained by those States available to the operator if—

(A) the grant to a State is not more than the lesser of—

(i) 25 percent of the cost of making titling information maintained by that State available to the operator as determined by the Secretary under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection; or

(ii) $300,000; and

(B) the Secretary decides that the grants are reasonable and necessary to establish the System.

(d) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than January 1, 1997, the Secretary shall report to Congress on which States have met the requirements of this section. If a State has not met the requirements, the Secretary shall describe the impediments that have resulted in the State's failure to meet the requirements.

§30504. Reporting requirements

(a) JUNK YARD AND SALVAGE YARD OPERATORS.—(1) Beginning at a time established by the Secretary of Transportation that is not sooner than the 3d month before the establishment or designation of the National Automobile Title Information System under section 30502 of this title, an individual or entity engaged in the business of operating a junk yard or salvage yard shall file a monthly report with the operator of the System. The report shall contain an inventory of all junk automobiles or salvage automobiles obtained by the junk yard or salvage yard during the prior month. The inventory shall contain—

(A) the vehicle identification number of each automobile obtained;

(B) the date on which the automobile was obtained;

(C) the name of the individual or entity from whom the automobile was obtained; and

(D) a statement of whether the automobile was crushed or disposed of for sale or other purposes.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply to an individual or entity—

(A) required by State law to report the acquisition of junk automobiles or salvage automobiles to State or local authorities if those authorities make that information available to the operator; or

(B) issued a verification under section 33110 of this title stating that the automobile or parts from the automobile are not reported as stolen.

(b) INSURANCE CARRIERS.—Beginning at a time established by the Secretary that is not sooner than the 3d month before the establishment or designation of the System, an individual or entity engaged in business as an insurance carrier shall file a monthly report with the operator. The report may be filed directly or through a designated agent. The report shall contain an inventory of all automobiles of the current model year or any of the 4 prior model years that the carrier, during the prior month, has obtained possession of and has decided are junk automobiles or salvage automobiles. The inventory shall contain—

(1) the vehicle identification number of each automobile obtained;

(2) the date on which the automobile was obtained;

(3) the name of the individual or entity from whom the automobile was obtained; and

(4) the name of the owner of the automobile at the time of the filing of the report.

(c) PROCEDURES AND PRACTICES.—The Secretary shall establish by regulation procedures and practices to facilitate reporting in the least burdensome and costly fashion.

§30505. Penalties and enforcement

(a) PENALTY.—An individual or entity violating this chapter is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation.

(b) COLLECTION AND COMPROMISE.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall impose a civil penalty under this section. The Attorney General shall bring a civil action to collect the penalty. The Secretary may compromise the amount of the penalty. In determining the amount of the penalty or compromise, the Secretary shall consider the appropriateness of the penalty to the size of the business of the individual or entity charged and the gravity of the violation.

(2) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this section from amounts it owes the individual or entity liable for the penalty.

SUBCHAPTER I—STATE GRANTS

§31101. Definitions

In this subchapter—

(1) "commercial motor vehicle" means (except in section 31106) a self-propelled or towed vehicle used on the highways in commerce principally to transport passengers or cargo, if the vehicle—

(A) has a gross vehicle weight rating of at least 10,000 pounds;

(B) is designed to transport more than 10 passengers including the driver; or

(C) is used in transporting material found by the Secretary of Transportation to be hazardous under section 5103 of this title.

(2) "employee" means a driver of a commercial motor vehicle (including an independent contractor when personally operating a commercial motor vehicle), a mechanic, a freight handler, or an individual not an employer, who—

(A) directly affects commercial motor vehicle safety in the course of employment by a commercial motor carrier; and

(B) is not an employee of the United States Government, a State, or a political subdivision of a State acting in the course of employment.

(3) "employer"—

(A) means a person engaged in a business affecting commerce that owns or leases a commercial motor vehicle in connection with that business, or assigns an employee to operate the vehicle in commerce; but

(B) does not include the Government, a State, or a political subdivision of a State.

(4) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

§31102. Grants to States

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—Subject to this section and the availability of amounts, the Secretary of Transportation may make grants to States for the development or implementation of programs for the enforcement of regulations, standards, and orders of the United States Government on commercial motor vehicle safety and compatible State regulations, standards, and orders.

(b) STATE PLAN PROCEDURES AND CONTENTS.—(1) The Secretary shall prescribe procedures for a State to submit a plan under which the State agrees to adopt and assume responsibility for enforcing regulations, standards, and orders of the Government on commercial motor vehicle safety or compatible State regulations, standards, and orders. The Secretary shall approve the plan if the Secretary decides the plan is adequate to promote the objectives of this section and the plan—

(A) designates the State motor vehicle safety agency responsible for administering the plan throughout the State;

(B) contains satisfactory assurances the agency has or will have the legal authority, resources, and qualified personnel necessary to enforce the regulations, standards, and orders;

(C) contains satisfactory assurances the State will devote adequate amounts to the administration of the plan and enforcement of the regulations, standards, and orders;

(D) provides that the total expenditure of amounts of the State and its political subdivisions (not including amounts of the Government) for commercial motor vehicle safety programs for enforcement of commercial motor vehicle size and weight limitations, drug interdiction, and State traffic safety laws and regulations under subsection (c) of this section will be maintained at a level at least equal to the average level of that expenditure for its last 3 full fiscal years before December 18, 1991;

(E) provides a right of entry and inspection to carry out the plan;

(F) provides that all reports required under this section be submitted to the agency and that the agency will make the reports available to the Secretary on request;

(G) provides that the agency will adopt the reporting requirements and use the forms for recordkeeping, inspections, and investigations the Secretary prescribes;

(H) requires registrants of commercial motor vehicles to make a declaration of knowledge of applicable safety regulations, standards, and orders of the Government and the State;

(I) provides that the State will grant maximum reciprocity for inspections conducted under the North American Inspection Standard through the use of a nationally accepted system that allows ready identification of previously inspected commercial motor vehicles;

(J) ensures that activities described in subsection (c) of this section, if financed with grants under subsection (a) of this section, will not diminish the effectiveness of the development and implementation of commercial motor vehicle safety programs described in subsection (a);

(K) ensures that fines imposed and collected by the State for violations of commercial motor vehicle safety regulations will be reasonable and appropriate and that, to the maximum extent practicable, the State will attempt to implement the recommended fine schedule published by the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance;

(L) ensures that the State agency will coordinate the plan prepared under this section with the State highway safety plan under section 402 of title 23;

(M) ensures participation by the 48 contiguous States in SAFETYNET not later than January 1, 1994;

(N) provides satisfactory assurances that the State will undertake efforts that will emphasize and improve enforcement of State and local traffic safety laws and regulations related to commercial motor vehicle safety;

(O) provides satisfactory assurances that the State will promote activities—

(i) to remove impaired commercial motor vehicle drivers from the highways of the United States through adequate enforcement of regulations on the use of alcohol and controlled substances and by ensuring ready roadside access to alcohol detection and measuring equipment;

(ii) to provide an appropriate level of training to State motor carrier safety assistance program officers and employees on recognizing drivers impaired by alcohol or controlled substances;

(iii) to promote enforcement of the requirements related to the licensing of commercial motor vehicle drivers, including checking the status of commercial drivers' licenses; and

(iv) to improve enforcement of hazardous material transportation regulations by encouraging more inspections of shipper facilities affecting highway transportation and more comprehensive inspection of the loads of commercial motor vehicles transporting hazardous material; and

(P) provides satisfactory assurances that the State will promote effective—

(i) interdiction activities affecting the transportation of controlled substances by commercial motor vehicle drivers and training on appropriate strategies for carrying out those interdiction activities; and

(ii) use of trained and qualified officers and employees of political subdivisions and local governments, under the supervision and direction of the State motor vehicle safety agency, in the enforcement of regulations affecting commercial motor vehicle safety and hazardous material transportation safety.

(2) If the Secretary disapproves a plan under this subsection, the Secretary shall give the State a written explanation and allow the State to modify and resubmit the plan for approval.

(3) In estimating the average level of State expenditure under paragraph (1)(D) of this subsection, the Secretary—

(A) may allow the State to exclude State expenditures for Government-sponsored demonstration or pilot programs; and

(B) shall require the State to exclude Government amounts and State matching amounts used to receive Government financing under subsection (a) of this section.

(c) USE OF GRANTS TO ENFORCE OTHER LAWS.—A State may use amounts received under a grant under subsection (a) of this section for the following activities if the activities are carried out in conjunction with an appropriate inspection of the commercial motor vehicle to enforce Government or State commercial motor vehicle safety regulations:

(1) enforcement of commercial motor vehicle size and weight limitations at locations other than fixed weight facilities, at specific locations such as steep grades or mountainous terrains where the weight of a commercial motor vehicle can significantly affect the safe operation of the vehicle, or at ports where intermodal shipping containers enter and leave the United States.

(2) detection of the unlawful presence of a controlled substance (as defined under section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)) in a commercial motor vehicle or on the person of any occupant (including the operator) of the vehicle.

(3) enforcement of State traffic laws and regulations designed to promote the safe operation of commercial motor vehicles.

(d) CONTINUOUS EVALUATION OF PLANS.—On the basis of reports submitted by a State motor vehicle safety agency of a State with a plan approved under this section and the Secretary's own investigations, the Secretary shall make a continuing evaluation of the way the State is carrying out the plan. If the Secretary finds, after notice and opportunity for comment, the State plan previously approved is not being followed or has become inadequate to ensure enforcement of the regulations, standards, or orders, the Secretary shall withdraw approval of the plan and notify the State. The plan stops being effective when the notice is received. A State adversely affected by the withdrawal may seek judicial review under chapter 7 of title 5. Notwithstanding the withdrawal, the State may retain jurisdiction in administrative or judicial proceedings begun before the withdrawal if the issues involved are not related directly to the reasons for the withdrawal.

§31103. United States Government's share of costs

The Secretary of Transportation shall reimburse a State, from a grant made under this subchapter, an amount that is not more than 80 percent of the costs incurred by the State in a fiscal year in developing and implementing programs to enforce commercial motor vehicle regulations, standards, or orders adopted under this subchapter or subchapter II of this chapter. In determining those costs, the Secretary shall include in-kind contributions by the State. Amounts of the State and its political subdivisions required to be expended under section 31102(b)(1)(D) of this title may not be included as part of the share not provided by the United States Government. The Secretary may allocate among the States whose applications for grants have been approved those amounts appropriated for grants to support those programs, under criteria that may be established.

§31104. Availability of amounts

(a) GENERAL.—Subject to section 9503(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9503(c)(1)), the following amounts are available from the Highway Trust Fund (except the Mass Transit Account) for the Secretary of Transportation to incur obligations to carry out section 31102 of this title:

(1) not more than $76,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993.

(2) not more than $80,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1994.

(3) not more than $83,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1995.

(5) not more than $90,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1997.

(b) AVAILABILITY AND REALLOCATION OF AMOUNTS.—(1) Amounts made available under subsection (a) of this section remain available until expended. Allocations to a State remain available for expenditure in the State for the fiscal year in which they are allocated and for the next fiscal year. Amounts not expended by a State during those 2 fiscal years are released to the Secretary for reallocation.

(2) Amounts made available under section 404(a)(2) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 before October 1, 1991, that are not obligated on October 1, 1992, are available for reallocation and obligation under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT FOR GOVERNMENT'S SHARE OF COSTS.—Amounts made available under subsection (a) of this section shall be used to reimburse States proportionately for the United States Government's share of costs incurred.

(d) GRANTS AS CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATIONS.—Approval by the Secretary of a grant to a State under section 31102 of this title is a contractual obligation of the Government for payment of the Government's share of costs incurred by the State in developing, implementing, or developing and implementing programs to enforce commercial motor vehicle regulations, standards, and orders.

(e) DEDUCTION FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—On October 1 of each fiscal year or as soon after that date as practicable, the Secretary may deduct, from amounts made available under subsection (a) of this section for that fiscal year, not more than 1.25 percent of those amounts for administrative expenses incurred in carrying out section 31102 of this title in that fiscal year. The Secretary shall use at least 75 percent of those deducted amounts to train non-Government employees and to develop related training materials in carrying out section 31102.

(f) ALLOCATION CRITERIA.—On October 1 of each fiscal year or as soon after that date as practicable, the Secretary, after making the deduction described in subsection (e) of this section, shall allocate under criteria the Secretary establishes the amounts available for that fiscal year among the States with plans approved under section 31102 of this title. However, the Secretary may designate specific eligible States among which to allocate those amounts in allocating amounts available—

(1) for research, development, and demonstration under subsection (g)(1)(F) of this section; and

(2) for public education under subsection (g)(1)(G) of this section.

(g) SPECIFIC ALLOCATIONS.—(1) Of amounts made available under subsection (a) of this section—

(A) for each fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1992, the Secretary shall obligate at least $1,500,000 to make grants to States for training inspectors to enforce regulations prescribed by the Secretary related to the transportation of hazardous material by commercial motor vehicles;

(B) for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1993–1997, the Secretary may obligate not more than $2,000,000 to carry out section 31106 of this title;

(C) for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1993–1997, the Secretary may obligate not more than $2,000,000 to carry out section 31107 of this title;

(D) for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1993–1995, the Secretary shall obligate at least $4,250,000, and for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1996, and 1997, the Secretary shall obligate at least $5,000,000, for traffic enforcement activities related to commercial motor vehicle drivers that are carried out in conjunction with an appropriate inspection of a commercial motor vehicle for compliance with Government or State commercial motor vehicle safety regulations;

(E) for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1993–1995, the Secretary shall obligate at least $1,000,000 to increase enforcement of the licensing requirements of chapter 313 of this title by motor carrier safety assistance program officers and employees, including the cost of purchasing equipment for, and conducting, inspections to check the current status of licenses issued under chapter 313;

(F) for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall obligate at least $500,000 for research, development, and demonstration of technologies, methodologies, analyses, or information systems designed to carry out section 31102 of this title and that are beneficial to all jurisdictions; and

(G) for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall obligate at least $350,000 to educate the motoring public on how to share the road safely with commercial motor vehicles.

(2) The Secretary shall announce publicly amounts obligated under paragraph (1)(F) of this subsection and award those amounts competitively, when practicable, to any eligible State for up to 100 percent of the State costs or to other persons as the Secretary decides.

(3) In carrying out educational activities referred to in paragraph (1)(G) of this subsection, the Secretary shall consult with appropriate industry representatives.

(h) PAYMENT TO STATES FOR COSTS.—Each State shall submit vouchers for costs the State incurs under this section and section 31102 of this title. The Secretary shall pay the State an amount not more than the Government share of costs incurred as of the date of the vouchers.

(i) IMPROVED ALLOCATION FORMULA.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to develop an improved formula and process for allocating amounts made available for grants under section 31102(a) of this title among States eligible for those amounts. In prescribing those regulations, the Secretary shall—

(1) consider ways to provide incentives to States that demonstrate innovative, successful, cost-efficient, or cost-effective programs to promote commercial motor vehicle safety and hazardous material transportation safety;

(2) place special emphasis on incentives to States that conduct traffic safety enforcement activities that are coupled with motor carrier safety inspections; and

(3) consider ways to provide incentives to States that increase compatibility of State commercial motor vehicle safety and hazardous material transportation regulations with Government safety regulations and promote other factors intended to promote effectiveness and efficiency the Secretary decides are appropriate.

(j) INTRASTATE COMPATIBILITY.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations specifying tolerance guidelines and standards for ensuring compatibility of intrastate commercial motor vehicle safety laws and regulations with Government motor carrier safety regulations to be enforced under section 31102(a) of this title. To the extent practicable, the guidelines and standards shall allow for maximum flexibility while ensuring the degree of uniformity that will not diminish transportation safety. In reviewing State plans and allocating amounts or making grants under section 153 of title 23, the Secretary shall ensure that the guidelines and standards are applied uniformly.

§31105. Employee protections

(a) PROHIBITIONS.—(1) A person may not discharge an employee, or discipline or discriminate against an employee regarding pay, terms, or privileges of employment, because—

(A) the employee, or another person at the employee's request, has filed a complaint or begun a proceeding related to a violation of a commercial motor vehicle safety regulation, standard, or order, or has testified or will testify in such a proceeding; or

(B) the employee refuses to operate a vehicle because—

(i) the operation violates a regulation, standard, or order of the United States related to commercial motor vehicle safety or health; or

(ii) the employee has a reasonable apprehension of serious injury to the employee or the public because of the vehicle's unsafe condition.

(2) Under paragraph (1)(B)(ii) of this subsection, an employee's apprehension of serious injury is reasonable only if a reasonable individual in the circumstances then confronting the employee would conclude that the unsafe condition establishes a real danger of accident, injury, or serious impairment to health. To qualify for protection, the employee must have sought from the employer, and been unable to obtain, correction of the unsafe condition.

(b) FILING COMPLAINTS AND PROCEDURES.—(1) An employee alleging discharge, discipline, or discrimination in violation of subsection (a) of this section, or another person at the employee's request, may file a complaint with the Secretary of Labor not later than 180 days after the alleged violation occurred. On receiving the complaint, the Secretary shall notify the person alleged to have committed the violation of the filing of the complaint.

(2)(A) Not later than 60 days after receiving a complaint, the Secretary shall conduct an investigation, decide whether it is reasonable to believe the complaint has merit, and notify the complainant and the person alleged to have committed the violation of the findings. If the Secretary decides it is reasonable to believe a violation occurred, the Secretary shall include with the decision findings and a preliminary order for the relief provided under paragraph (3) of this subsection.

(B) Not later than 30 days after the notice under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the complainant and the person alleged to have committed the violation may file objections to the findings or preliminary order, or both, and request a hearing on the record. The filing of objections does not stay a reinstatement ordered in the preliminary order. If a hearing is not requested within the 30 days, the preliminary order is final and not subject to judicial review.

(C) A hearing shall be conducted expeditiously. Not later than 120 days after the end of the hearing, the Secretary shall issue a final order. Before the final order is issued, the proceeding may be ended by a settlement agreement made by the Secretary, the complainant, and the person alleged to have committed the violation.

(3)(A) If the Secretary decides, on the basis of a complaint, a person violated subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall order the person to—

(i) take affirmative action to abate the violation;

(ii) reinstate the complainant to the former position with the same pay and terms and privileges of employment; and

(iii) pay compensatory damages, including back pay.

(B) If the Secretary issues an order under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph and the complainant requests, the Secretary may assess against the person against whom the order is issued the costs (including attorney's fees) reasonably incurred by the complainant in bringing the complaint. The Secretary shall determine the costs that reasonably were incurred.

(c) JUDICIAL REVIEW AND VENUE.—A person adversely affected by an order issued after a hearing under subsection (b) of this section may file a petition for review, not later than 60 days after the order is issued, in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the violation occurred or the person resided on the date of the violation. The review shall be heard and decided expeditiously. An order of the Secretary subject to review under this subsection is not subject to judicial review in a criminal or other civil proceeding.

(d) CIVIL ACTIONS TO ENFORCE.—If a person fails to comply with an order issued under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary shall bring a civil action to enforce the order in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the violation occurred.

§31106. Commercial motor vehicle information system program

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "commercial motor vehicle" means a self-propelled or towed vehicle used on highways in intrastate or interstate commerce to transport passengers or property, if the vehicle—

(1) has a gross vehicle weight rating of at least 10,001 pounds;

(2) is designed to transport more than 15 passengers, including the driver; or

(3) is used in transporting material found by the Secretary of Transportation to be hazardous under section 5103 of this title and that material is transported in a quantity requiring placarding under regulations the Secretary prescribes under section 5103.

(b) INFORMATION SYSTEM.—(1) In cooperation with the States, the Secretary may establish as part of the motor carrier safety information network system of the Department of Transportation and similar State systems, an information system to serve as a clearinghouse and depository of information related to State registration and licensing of commercial motor vehicles and the safety fitness of the commercial motor vehicle registrants. The Secretary shall include in the system information on the safety fitness of each of the registrants and other information the Secretary considers appropriate, including information on vehicle inspections and out-of-service orders.

(2) The operation of the information system established under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be paid for by a schedule of user fees. The Secretary may authorize the operation of the information system by contract, through an agreement with one or more States, or by designating, after consulting with the States, a third party that represents the interests of the States.

(3) The Secretary shall prescribe standards to ensure—

(A) uniform information collection and reporting by the States necessary to carry out this section; and

(B) the availability and reliability of the information to the States and the Secretary from the information system.

(c) DEMONSTRATION PROJECT.—The Secretary shall make grants to States to carry out a project to demonstrate ways of establishing an information system that will link the motor carrier safety information network system of the Department and similar State systems with the motor vehicle registration and licensing systems of the States. The project shall be designed—

(1) to allow a State when issuing license plates for a commercial motor vehicle to establish through use of the information system the safety fitness of the person seeking to register the vehicle; and

(2) to decide on types of sanctions that may be imposed on the registrant, or the types of conditions or limitations that may be imposed on the operations of the registrant, to ensure the safety fitness of the registrant.

(d) REVIEW OF STATE SYSTEMS.—Not later than December 18, 1992, the Secretary, in cooperation with the States, shall review State motor vehicle registration systems related to license tags for commercial motor vehicles to decide whether those systems can be used in carrying out this section.

(e) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section.

(f) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than January 1, 1995, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the cost, benefits, and feasibility of the information system established under subsection (b) of this section. If the Secretary decides that the system would be beneficial on a nationwide basis, the Secretary shall include in the report recommendations on legislation to implement a nationwide system.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Amounts necessary to carry out this section may be made available to the Secretary under section 31104(g)(1)(B) of this title.

§31107. Truck and bus accident grant program

(a) STATE GRANTS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall make grants to States that agree to adopt or have adopted the recommendations of the National Governors' Association related to police accident reports for truck and bus accidents. The Secretary may make a grant under this section only to assist a State in carrying out those recommendations, including—

(1) assisting the State in designing appropriate forms;

(2) drafting instruction manuals;

(3) training appropriate State and local officers on matters, including training on accident investigation techniques to decide on the probable cause of truck and bus accidents;

(4) analyzing and evaluating safety information to develop recommended changes to existing safety programs necessary to address more effectively the causes of truck and bus accidents; and

(5) other activities the Secretary decides are appropriate to carry out this section.

(b) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall coordinate grants made under this section with highway safety programs under section 402 of title 23. The Secretary may require that the information from police reports for truck and bus accidents be included in reports made to the Secretary under the uniform information collection and reporting program under section 402.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Amounts necessary to carry out this section may be made available to the Secretary under section 31104(g)(1)(C) of this title.

§31108. Authorization of appropriations

Not more than $———— may be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation for the fiscal year ending September 30, 19—, to carry out the safety duties and powers of the Federal Highway Administration.

SUBCHAPTER II—LENGTH AND WIDTH LIMITATIONS

§31111. Length limitations

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "maxi-cube vehicle" means a truck tractor combined with a semitrailer and a separable property-carrying unit designed to be loaded and unloaded through the semitrailer, with the length of the separable property-carrying unit being not more than 34 feet and the length of the vehicle combination being not more than 65 feet.

(2) "truck tractor" means—

(A) a non-property-carrying power unit that operates in combination with a semitrailer or trailer; or

(B) a power unit that carries as property only motor vehicles when operating in combination with a semitrailer in transporting motor vehicles.

(b) GENERAL LIMITATIONS.—(1) Except as provided in this section, a State may not prescribe or enforce a regulation of commerce that—

(A) imposes a vehicle length limitation of less than 45 feet on a bus, of less than 48 feet on a semitrailer operating in a truck tractor-semitrailer combination, or of less than 28 feet on a semitrailer or trailer operating in a truck tractor-semitrailer-trailer combination, on any segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways (except a segment exempted under subsection (f) of this section) and those classes of qualifying Federal-aid Primary System highways designated by the Secretary of Transportation under subsection (e) of this section;

(B) imposes an overall length limitation on a commercial motor vehicle operating in a truck tractor-semitrailer or truck tractor-semitrailer-trailer combination;

(C) has the effect of prohibiting the use of a semitrailer or trailer of the same dimensions as those that were in actual and lawful use in that State on December 1, 1982; or

(D) has the effect of prohibiting the use of an existing semitrailer or trailer, of not more than 28.5 feet in length, in a truck tractor-semitrailer-trailer combination if the semitrailer or trailer was operating lawfully on December 1, 1982, within a 65-foot overall length limit in any State.

(2) A length limitation prescribed or enforced by a State under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection applies only to a semitrailer or trailer and not to a truck tractor.

(c) MAXI-CUBE AND VEHICLE COMBINATION LIMITATIONS.—A State may not prohibit a maxi-cube vehicle or a commercial motor vehicle combination consisting of a truck tractor and 2 trailing units on any segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways (except a segment exempted under subsection (f) of this section) and those classes of qualifying Federal-aid Primary System highways designated by the Secretary under subsection (e) of this section.

(d) EXCLUSION OF SAFETY AND ENERGY CONSERVATION DEVICES.—Length calculated under this section does not include a safety or energy conservation device the Secretary decides is necessary for safe and efficient operation of a commercial motor vehicle. However, such a device may not have by its design or use the ability to carry cargo.

(e) QUALIFYING HIGHWAYS.—The Secretary by regulation shall designate as qualifying Federal-aid Primary System highways those highways of the Federal-aid Primary System in existence on June 1, 1991, that can accommodate safely the applicable vehicle lengths provided in this section.

(f) EXEMPTIONS.—(1) If the chief executive officer of a State, after consulting under paragraph (2) of this subsection, decides a segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating a commercial motor vehicle having a length described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section or the motor vehicle combination described in subsection (c) of this section, the chief executive officer may notify the Secretary of that decision and request the Secretary to exempt that segment from either or both provisions.

(2) Before making a decision under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the chief executive officer shall consult with units of local government in the State in which the segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways is located and with the chief executive officer of any adjacent State that may be directly affected by the exemption. As part of the consultations, consideration shall be given to any potential alternative route that serves the area in which the segment is located and can safely accommodate a commercial motor vehicle having a length described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section or the motor vehicle combination described in subsection (c) of this section.

(3) A chief executive officer's notification under this subsection must include specific evidence of safety problems supporting the officer's decision and the results of consultations about alternative routes.

(4)(A) If the Secretary decides, on request of a chief executive officer or on the Secretary's own initiative, a segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating a commercial motor vehicle having a length described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section or the motor vehicle combination described in subsection (c) of this section, the Secretary shall exempt the segment from either or both of those provisions. Before making a decision under this paragraph, the Secretary shall consider any possible alternative route that serves the area in which the segment is located.

(B) The Secretary shall make a decision about a specific segment not later than 120 days after the date of receipt of notification from a chief executive officer under paragraph (1) of this subsection or the date on which the Secretary initiates action under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, whichever is applicable. If the Secretary finds the decision will not be made in time, the Secretary immediately shall notify Congress, giving the reasons for the delay, information about the resources assigned, and the projected date for the decision.

(C) Before making a decision, the Secretary shall give an interested person notice and an opportunity for comment. If the Secretary exempts a segment under this subsection before the final regulations under subsection (e) of this section are prescribed, the Secretary shall include the exemption as part of the final regulations. If the Secretary exempts the segment after the final regulations are prescribed, the Secretary shall publish the exemption as an amendment to the final regulations.

(g) ACCOMMODATING SPECIALIZED EQUIPMENT.—In prescribing regulations to carry out this section, the Secretary may make decisions necessary to accommodate specialized equipment, including automobile and vessel transporters and maxi-cube vehicles.

§31112. Property-carrying unit limitation

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "property-carrying unit" means any part of a commercial motor vehicle combination (except the truck tractor) used to carry property, including a trailer, a semitrailer, or the property-carrying section of a single unit truck.

(2) the length of the property-carrying units of a commercial motor vehicle combination is the length measured from the front of the first property-carrying unit to the rear of the last property-carrying unit.

(b) GENERAL LIMITATIONS.—A State may not allow by any means the operation, on any segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways and those classes of qualifying Federal-aid Primary System highways designated by the Secretary of Transportation under section 31111(e) of this title, of any commercial motor vehicle combination (except a vehicle or load that cannot be dismantled easily or divided easily and that has been issued a special permit under applicable State law) with more than one property-carrying unit (not including the truck tractor) whose property-carrying units are more than—

(1) the maximum combination trailer, semitrailer, or other type of length limitation allowed by law or regulation of that State before June 2, 1991; or

(2) the length of the property-carrying units of those commercial motor vehicle combinations, by specific configuration, in actual, lawful operation on a regular or periodic basis (including continuing seasonal operation) in that State before June 2, 1991.

(c) SPECIAL RULES FOR WYOMING, OHIO, AND ALASKA.—In addition to the vehicles allowed under subsection (b) of this section—

(1) Wyoming may allow the operation of additional vehicle configurations not in actual operation on June 1, 1991, but authorized by State law not later than November 3, 1992, if the vehicle configurations comply with the single axle, tandem axle, and bridge formula limits in section 127(a) of title 23 and are not more than 117,000 pounds gross vehicle weight;

(2) Ohio may allow the operation of commercial motor vehicle combinations with 3 property-carrying units of 28.5 feet each (not including the truck tractor) not in actual operation on June 1, 1991, to be operated in Ohio on the 1-mile segment of Ohio State Route 7 that begins at and is south of exit 16 of the Ohio Turnpike; and

(3) Alaska may allow the operation of commercial motor vehicle combinations that were not in actual operation on June 1, 1991, but were in actual operation before July 6, 1991.

(d) ADDITIONAL LIMITATIONS.—(1) A commercial motor vehicle combination whose operation in a State is not prohibited under subsections (b) and (c) of this section may continue to operate in the State on highways described in subsection (b) only if at least in compliance with all State laws, regulations, limitations, and conditions, including routing-specific and configuration-specific designations and all other restrictions in force in the State on June 1, 1991. However, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary under subsection (g)(2) of this section, the State may make minor adjustments of a temporary and emergency nature to route designations and vehicle operating restrictions in effect on June 1, 1991, for specific safety purposes and road construction.

(2) This section does not prevent a State from further restricting in any way or prohibiting the operation of any commercial motor vehicle combination subject to this section, except that a restriction or prohibition shall be consistent with this section and sections 31113(a) and (b) and 31114 of this title.

(3) A State making a minor adjustment of a temporary and emergency nature as authorized by paragraph (1) of this subsection or further restricting or prohibiting the operation of a commercial motor vehicle combination as authorized by paragraph (2) of this subsection shall advise the Secretary not later than 30 days after the action. The Secretary shall publish a notice of the action in the Federal Register.

(e) LIST OF STATE LENGTH LIMITATIONS.—(1) Not later than February 16, 1992, each State shall submit to the Secretary for publication a complete list of State length limitations applicable to commercial motor vehicle combinations operating in the State on the highways described in subsection (b) of this section. The list shall indicate the applicable State laws and regulations associated with the length limitations. If a State does not submit the information as required, the Secretary shall complete and file the information for the State.

(2) Not later than March 17, 1992, the Secretary shall publish an interim list in the Federal Register consisting of all information submitted under paragraph (1) of this subsection. The Secretary shall review for accuracy all information submitted by a State under paragraph (1) and shall solicit and consider public comment on the accuracy of the information.

(3) A law or regulation may not be included on the list submitted by a State or published by the Secretary merely because it authorized, or could have authorized, by permit or otherwise, the operation of commercial motor vehicle combinations not in actual operation on a regular or periodic basis before June 2, 1991.

(4) Except as revised under this paragraph or paragraph (5) of this subsection, the list shall be published as final in the Federal Register not later than June 15, 1992. In publishing the final list, the Secretary shall make any revisions necessary to correct inaccuracies identified under paragraph (2) of this subsection. After publication of the final list, commercial motor vehicle combinations prohibited under subsection (b) of this section may not operate on the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways and other Federal-aid Primary System highways designated by the Secretary except as published on the list. The list may be combined by the Secretary with the list required under section 127(d) of title 23.

(5) On the Secretary's own motion or on request by any person (including a State), the Secretary shall review the list published under paragraph (4) of this subsection. If the Secretary decides there is reason to believe a mistake was made in the accuracy of the list, the Secretary shall begin a proceeding to decide whether a mistake was made. If the Secretary decides there was a mistake, the Secretary shall publish the correction.

(f) LIMITATIONS ON STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—This section may not be construed—

(1) to allow the operation on any segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways of a longer combination vehicle prohibited under section 127(d) of title 23;

(2) to affect in any way the operation of a commercial motor vehicle having only one property-carrying unit; or

(3) to affect in any way the operation in a State of a commercial motor vehicle with more than one property-carrying unit if the vehicle was in actual operation on a regular or periodic basis (including seasonal operation) in that State before June 2, 1991, that was authorized under State law or regulation or lawful State permit.

(g) REGULATIONS.—(1) In carrying out this section only, the Secretary shall define by regulation loads that cannot be dismantled easily or divided easily.

(2) Not later than June 15, 1992, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations establishing criteria for a State to follow in making minor adjustments under subsection (d) of this section.

§31113. Width limitations

(a) GENERAL LIMITATIONS.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this section, a State (except Hawaii) may not prescribe or enforce a regulation of commerce that imposes a vehicle width limitation of more or less than 102 inches on a commercial motor vehicle operating on—

(A) a segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways (except a segment exempted under subsection (e) of this section);

(B) a qualifying Federal-aid highway designated by the Secretary of Transportation, with traffic lanes designed to be at least 12 feet wide; or

(C) a qualifying Federal-aid Primary System highway designated by the Secretary if the Secretary decides the designation is consistent with highway safety.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1) of this subsection, a State may continue to enforce a regulation of commerce in effect on April 6, 1983, that applies to a commercial motor vehicle of more than 102 inches in width, until the date on which the State prescribes a regulation of commerce that complies with this subsection.

(3) A Federal-aid highway (except an interstate highway) not designated under this subsection on June 5, 1984, may be designated under this subsection only with the agreement of the chief executive officer of the State in which the highway is located.

(b) EXCLUSION OF SAFETY AND ENERGY CONSERVATION DEVICES.—Width calculated under this section does not include a safety or energy conservation device the Secretary decides is necessary for safe and efficient operation of a commercial motor vehicle.

(c) SPECIAL USE PERMITS.—A State may grant a special use permit to a commercial motor vehicle that is more than 102 inches in width.

(d) STATE ENFORCEMENT.—Consistent with this section, a State may enforce a commercial motor vehicle width limitation of 102 inches on a segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways (except a segment exempted under subsection (e) of this section) or other qualifying Federal-aid highway designated by the Secretary.

(e) EXEMPTIONS.—(1) If the chief executive officer of a State, after consulting under paragraph (2) of this subsection, decides a segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating a commercial motor vehicle having the width provided in subsection (a) of this section, the chief executive officer may notify the Secretary of that decision and request the Secretary to exempt that segment from subsection (a) to allow the State to impose a width limitation of less than 102 inches for a vehicle (except a bus) on that segment.

(2) Before making a decision under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the chief executive officer shall consult with units of local government in the State in which the segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways is located and with the chief executive officer of any adjacent State that may be directly affected by the exemption. As part of the consultations, consideration shall be given to any potential alternative route that serves the area in which the segment is located and can safely accommodate a commercial motor vehicle having the width provided for in subsection (a) of this section.

(3) A chief executive officer's notification under this subsection must include specific evidence of safety problems supporting the officer's decision and the results of consultations about alternative routes.

(4)(A) If the Secretary decides, on request of a chief executive officer or on the Secretary's own initiative, a segment of the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating a commercial motor vehicle having a width provided in subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall exempt the segment from subsection (a) to allow the State to impose a width limitation of less than 102 inches for a vehicle (except a bus) on that segment. Before making a decision under this paragraph, the Secretary shall consider any possible alternative route that serves the area in which the segment is located.

(B) The Secretary shall make a decision about a specific segment not later than 120 days after the date of receipt of notification from a chief executive officer under paragraph (1) of this subsection or the date on which the Secretary initiates action under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, whichever is applicable. If the Secretary finds the decision will not be made in time, the Secretary immediately shall notify Congress, giving the reasons for the delay, information about the resources assigned, and the projected date for the decision.

(C) Before making a decision, the Secretary shall give an interested person notice and an opportunity for comment. If the Secretary exempts a segment under this subsection before the final regulations under subsection (a) of this section are prescribed, the Secretary shall include the exemption as part of the final regulations. If the Secretary exempts the segment after the final regulations are prescribed, the Secretary shall publish the exemption as an amendment to the final regulations.

§31114. Access to the Interstate System

(a) PROHIBITION ON DENYING ACCESS.—A State may not enact or enforce a law denying to a commercial motor vehicle subject to this subchapter or subchapter I of this chapter reasonable access between—

(1) the Dwight D. Eisenhower System of Interstate and Defense Highways (except a segment exempted under section 31111(f) or 31113(e) of this title) and other qualifying Federal-aid Primary System highways designated by the Secretary of Transportation; and

(2) terminals, facilities for food, fuel, repairs, and rest, and points of loading and unloading for household goods carriers, motor carriers of passengers, or any truck tractor-semitrailer combination in which the semitrailer has a length of not more than 28.5 feet and that generally operates as part of a vehicle combination described in section 31111(c) of this title.

(b) EXCEPTION.—This section does not prevent a State or local government from imposing reasonable restrictions, based on safety considerations, on a truck tractor-semitrailer combination in which the semitrailer has a length of not more than 28.5 feet and that generally operates as part of a vehicle combination described in section 31111(c) of this title.

§31115. Enforcement

On the request of the Secretary of Transportation, the Attorney General shall bring a civil action for appropriate injunctive relief to ensure compliance with this subchapter or subchapter I of this chapter. The action may be brought in a district court of the United States in any State in which the relief is required. On a proper showing, the court shall issue a temporary restraining order or preliminary or permanent injunction. An injunction under this section may order a State or person to comply with this subchapter, subchapter I, or a regulation prescribed under this subchapter or subchapter I.

SUBCHAPTER III—SAFETY REGULATION

§31131. Purposes and findings

(a) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subchapter are—

§31135. Duties of employers and employees

Each employer and employee shall comply with regulations on commercial motor vehicle safety prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under this subchapter that apply to the employer's or employee's conduct.

§31136. United States Government regulations

(a) MINIMUM SAFETY STANDARDS.—Subject to section 30103(a) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations on commercial motor vehicle safety. The regulations shall prescribe minimum safety standards for commercial motor vehicles. At a minimum, the regulations shall ensure that—

(1) commercial motor vehicles are maintained, equipped, loaded, and operated safely;

(2) the responsibilities imposed on operators of commercial motor vehicles do not impair their ability to operate the vehicles safely;

(3) the physical condition of operators of commercial motor vehicles is adequate to enable them to operate the vehicles safely; and

(4) the operation of commercial motor vehicles does not have a deleterious effect on the physical condition of the operators.

(b) ELIMINATING AND AMENDING EXISTING REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may not eliminate or amend an existing motor carrier safety regulation related only to the maintenance, equipment, loading, or operation (including routing) of vehicles carrying material found to be hazardous under section 5103 of this title until an equivalent or more stringent regulation has been prescribed under section 5103.

(c) PROCEDURES AND CONSIDERATIONS.—(1) A regulation under this section shall be prescribed under section 553 of title 5 (without regard to sections 556 and 557 of title 5).

(2) Before prescribing regulations under this section, the Secretary shall consider, to the extent practicable and consistent with the purposes of this chapter—

(A) costs and benefits; and

(B) State laws and regulations on commercial motor vehicle safety, to minimize their unnecessary preemption.

(d) EFFECT OF EXISTING REGULATIONS.—If the Secretary does not prescribe regulations on commercial motor vehicle safety under this section, regulations on commercial motor vehicle safety prescribed by the Secretary before October 30, 1984, and in effect on October 30, 1984, shall be deemed in this subchapter to be regulations prescribed by the Secretary under this section.

(e) WAIVERS.—After notice and an opportunity for comment, the Secretary may waive any part of a regulation prescribed under this section as it applies to a person or class of persons, if the Secretary decides that the waiver is consistent with the public interest and the safe operation of commercial motor vehicles. Under this subsection, the Secretary shall waive the regulations prescribed under this section as they apply to schoolbuses (as defined in section 30125(a) of this title) unless the Secretary decides that making the regulations applicable to schoolbuses is necessary for public safety, considering all laws of the United States and States applicable to schoolbuses. A waiver under this subsection shall be published in the Federal Register, with the reasons for the waiver.

(f) LIMITATIONS ON MUNICIPALITY AND COMMERCIAL ZONE EXEMPTIONS AND WAIVERS.—(1) The Secretary may not—

(A) exempt a person or commercial motor vehicle from a regulation related to commercial motor vehicle safety only because the operations of the person or vehicle are entirely in a municipality or commercial zone of a municipality; or

(B) waive application to a person or commercial motor vehicle of a regulation related to commercial motor vehicle safety only because the operations of the person or vehicle are entirely in a municipality or commercial zone of a municipality.

(2) If a person was authorized to operate a commercial motor vehicle in a municipality or commercial zone of a municipality in the United States for the entire period from November 19, 1987, through November 18, 1988, and if the person is otherwise qualified to operate a commercial motor vehicle, the person may operate a commercial motor vehicle entirely in a municipality or commercial zone of a municipality notwithstanding—

(A) paragraph (1) of this subsection;

(B) a minimum age requirement of the United States Government for operation of the vehicle; and

However, the devices may be used to monitor productivity of the operators.

(b) BRAKES AND BRAKE SYSTEMS MAINTENANCE REGULATIONS.—Not later than December 31, 1990, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations on improved standards or methods to ensure that brakes and brake systems of commercial motor vehicles are maintained properly and inspected by appropriate employees. At a minimum, the regulations shall establish minimum training requirements and qualifications for employees responsible for maintaining and inspecting the brakes and brake systems.

§31138. Minimum financial responsibility for transporting passengers

If evidence of financial responsibility is not in the vehicle, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of the Treasury shall deny entry of the vehicle into the United States.

(d) CIVIL PENALTY.—(1) If, after notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary of Transportation finds that a person (except an employee acting without knowledge) has knowingly violated this section or a regulation prescribed under this section, the person is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall impose the penalty by written notice. In determining the amount of the penalty, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue doing business; and

(e) NONAPPLICATION.—This section does not apply to a motor vehicle—

(1) transporting only school children and teachers to or from school;

(2) providing taxicab service, having a seating capacity of not more than 6 passengers, and not being operated on a regular route or between specified places; or

If evidence of financial responsibility is not in the vehicle, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of the Treasury shall deny entry of the vehicle into the United States.

(f) CIVIL PENALTY.—(1) If, after notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary of Transportation finds that a person (except an employee acting without knowledge) has knowingly violated this section or a regulation prescribed under this section, the person is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall impose the penalty by written notice. In determining the amount of the penalty, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue doing business; and

§31140. Submission of State laws and regulations for review

(a) GENERAL.—A State that enacts a State law or issues a regulation on commercial motor vehicle safety shall submit a copy of the law or regulation to the Secretary of Transportation and the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Regulatory Review Panel immediately after the enactment or issuance.

(b) ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—As soon as practicable but not later than a date the Panel may establish, a State that submits a State law or regulation under this section to the Panel shall—

(1) indicate in writing to the Panel whether the law or regulation—

(A) has the same effect as a regulation prescribed by the Secretary under section 31136 of this title;

(B) is less stringent than that regulation; or

(C) is additional to or more stringent than that regulation; and

(2) submit to the Panel other information the Panel or the Secretary may require to carry out this subchapter.

§31141. Review and preemption of State laws and regulations

(a) PREEMPTION AFTER DECISION.—A State may not enforce a State law or regulation on commercial motor vehicle safety that the Secretary of Transportation decides under this section may not be enforced.

(b) ANALYSIS AND DECISIONS BY THE PANEL.—(1) The Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Regulatory Review Panel annually shall analyze State laws and regulations and decide which of those laws and regulations are related to commercial motor vehicle safety.

(2) Not later than one year after the date the Secretary prescribes a regulation under section 31136 of this title or one year after the date the Panel decides under paragraph (1) of this subsection that a State law or regulation is related to commercial motor vehicle safety, whichever is later, the Panel shall—

(A) decide whether the State law or regulation—

(i) has the same effect as the regulation prescribed by the Secretary;

(ii) is less stringent than that regulation; or

(iii) is additional to or more stringent than that regulation;

(B) decide, for each State law or regulation that the Panel decides is additional to or more stringent than the regulation prescribed by the Secretary, whether—

(i) the State law or regulation has no safety benefit;

(ii) the State law or regulation is incompatible with the regulation prescribed by the Secretary; or

(iii) enforcement of the State law or regulation would cause an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce; and

(C) notify the Secretary of the Panel's decisions under this subsection.

(c) REVIEW AND DECISIONS BY SECRETARY.—(1) The Secretary shall review each State law and regulation on commercial motor vehicle safety. Not later than 18 months after the date the Panel notifies the Secretary of a decision under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary shall—

(A) conduct a regulatory proceeding to decide under this subsection whether the State law or regulation may be enforced; and

(B) prescribe a final regulation.

(2) If the Secretary decides a State law or regulation has the same effect as a regulation prescribed by the Secretary under section 31136 of this title, the State law or regulation may be enforced.

(3) If the Secretary decides a State law or regulation is less stringent than a regulation prescribed by the Secretary under section 31136 of this title, the State law or regulation may not be enforced.

(4) If the Secretary decides a State law or regulation is additional to or more stringent than a regulation prescribed by the Secretary under section 31136 of this title, the State law or regulation may be enforced unless the Secretary also decides that—

(A) the State law or regulation has no safety benefit;

(B) the State law or regulation is incompatible with the regulation prescribed by the Secretary; or

(C) enforcement of the State law or regulation would cause an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce.

(5)(A) In deciding about a State law or regulation under this subsection, the Secretary shall give great weight to the corresponding decision made by the Panel about that law or regulation under subsection (b) of this section.

(B) In deciding under paragraph (4) of this subsection whether a State law or regulation will cause an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce, the Secretary may consider the effect on interstate commerce of implementation of that law or regulation with the implementation of all similar laws and regulations of other States.

(d) WAIVERS.—(1) A person (including a State) may petition the Secretary for a waiver of a decision of the Secretary that a State law or regulation may not be enforced under this section. The Secretary shall grant the waiver, as expeditiously as possible, if the person demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the waiver is consistent with the public interest and the safe operation of commercial motor vehicles.

(2) Before deciding whether to grant or deny a petition for a waiver under this subsection, the Secretary shall give the petitioner an opportunity for a hearing on the record.

(e) CONSOLIDATING PROCEEDINGS.—The Secretary may consolidate regulatory proceedings under this section if the Secretary decides that the consolidation will not adversely affect a party to a proceeding.

(f) WRITTEN NOTICE OF DECISIONS.—Not later than 10 days after making a decision under subsection (c) of this section that a State law or regulation may not be enforced, the Secretary shall give written notice to the State of that decision.

(g) JUDICIAL REVIEW AND VENUE.—(1) Not later than 60 days after the Secretary makes a decision under subsection (c) of this section, or grants or denies a petition for a waiver under subsection (d) of this section, a person (including a State) adversely affected by the decision, grant, or denial may file a petition for judicial review. The petition may be filed in the court of appeals of the United States for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business.

(2) The court has jurisdiction to review the decision, grant, or denial and to grant appropriate relief, including interim relief, as provided in chapter 7 of title 5.

(3) A judgment of a court under this subsection may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28.

(4) The remedies provided for in this subsection are in addition to other remedies provided by law.

(h) INITIATING REVIEW PROCEEDINGS.—To review a State law or regulation on commercial motor vehicle safety under this section, the Secretary may initiate a regulatory proceeding on the Secretary's own initiative or on petition of an interested person (including a State).

§31142. Inspection of vehicles

(a) INSPECTION OF SAFETY EQUIPMENT.—On the instruction of an authorized enforcement official of a State or of the United States Government, a commercial motor vehicle is required to pass an inspection of all safety equipment required under part 393 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations.

(b) INSPECTION OF VEHICLES AND RECORD RETENTION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations on Government standards for inspection of commercial motor vehicles and retention by employers of records of an inspection. The standards shall provide for annual or more frequent inspections of a commercial motor vehicle unless the Secretary finds that another inspection system is as effective as an annual or more frequent inspection system. Regulations prescribed under this subsection are deemed to be regulations prescribed under section 31136 of this title.

(c) PREEMPTION.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, this subchapter and section 31102 of this title do not—

(A) prevent a State or voluntary group of States from imposing more stringent standards for use in their own periodic roadside inspection programs of commercial motor vehicles;

(B) prevent a State from enforcing a program for inspection of commercial motor vehicles that the Secretary decides is as effective as the Government standards prescribed under subsection (b) of this section;

(C) prevent a State from enforcing a program for inspection of commercial motor vehicles that meets the requirements for membership in the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance, as those requirements were in effect on October 30, 1984; or

(D) require a State that is enforcing a program described in clause (B) or (C) of this paragraph to enforce a Government standard prescribed under subsection (b) of this section or to adopt a provision on inspection of commercial motor vehicles in addition to that program to comply with the Government standards.

(2) The Government standards prescribed under subsection (b) of this section shall preempt a program of a State described in paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection as the program applies to the inspection of commercial motor vehicles in that State. The State may not enforce the program if the Secretary—

(A) decides, after notice and an opportunity for a hearing, that the State is not enforcing the program in a way that achieves the objectives of this section; and

(B) after making a decision under clause (A) of this paragraph, provides the State with a 6-month period to improve the enforcement of the program to achieve the objectives of this section.

(d) INSPECTION TO BE ACCEPTED AS ADEQUATE IN ALL STATES.—A periodic inspection of a commercial motor vehicle under the Government standards prescribed under subsection (b) of this section or a program described in subsection (c)(1)(B) or (C) of this section that is being enforced shall be recognized as adequate in every State for the period of the inspection. This subsection does not prohibit a State from making random inspections of commercial motor vehicles.

(e) EFFECT OF GOVERNMENT STANDARDS.—The Government standards prescribed under subsection (b) of this section may not be enforced as the standards apply to the inspection of commercial motor vehicles in a State enforcing a program described in subsection (c)(1)(B) or (C) of this section if the Secretary decides that it is in the public interest and consistent with public safety for the Government standards not to be enforced as they apply to that inspection.

(f) APPLICATION OF STATE REGULATIONS TO GOVERNMENT-LEASED VEHICLES AND OPERATORS.—A State receiving financial assistance under section 31102 of this title in a fiscal year may enforce in that fiscal year a regulation on commercial motor vehicle safety adopted by the State as the regulation applies to commercial motor vehicles and operators leased to the Government.

§31143. Investigating complaints and protecting complainants

(a) INVESTIGATING COMPLAINTS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a timely investigation of a nonfrivolous written complaint alleging that a substantial violation of a regulation prescribed under this subchapter is occurring or has occurred within the prior 60 days. The Secretary shall give the complainant timely notice of the findings of the investigation. The Secretary is not required to conduct separate investigations of duplicative complaints.

(b) PROTECTING COMPLAINANTS.—Notwithstanding section 552 of title 5, the Secretary may disclose the identity of a complainant only if disclosure is necessary to prosecute a violation. If disclosure becomes necessary, the Secretary shall take every practical means within the Secretary's authority to ensure that the complainant is not subject to harassment, intimidation, disciplinary action, discrimination, or financial loss because of the disclosure.

§31144. Safety fitness of owners and operators

(a) PROCEDURE.—(1) In cooperation with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations establishing a procedure to decide on the safety fitness of owners and operators of commercial motor vehicles, including persons seeking new or additional operating authority as motor carriers under sections 10922 and 10923 of this title. The procedure shall include—

(A) specific initial and continuing requirements to be met by the owners, operators, and persons to prove safety fitness;

(B) a means of deciding whether the owners, operators, and persons meet the safety fitness requirements under clause (A) of this paragraph; and

(C) specific time deadlines for action by the Secretary and the Commission in making fitness decisions.

(2) Regulations prescribed under this subsection supersede all regulations of the United States Government on safety fitness and safety rating of motor carriers in effect on October 30, 1984.

(b) FINDINGS AND ACTION ON APPLICATIONS.—The Commission shall—

(1) find an applicant for authority to operate as a motor carrier unfit if the applicant does not meet the safety fitness requirements established under subsection (a) of this section; and

(2) deny the application.

§31145. Coordination of Governmental activities and paperwork

The Secretary of Transportation shall coordinate the activities of departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government to ensure adequate protection of the safety and health of operators of commercial motor vehicles. The Secretary shall attempt to minimize paperwork burdens to ensure maximum coordination and to avoid overlap and the imposition of unreasonable burdens on persons subject to regulations under this subchapter.

§31146. Relationship to other laws

Except as provided in section 31136(b) of this title, this subchapter and the regulations prescribed under this subchapter do not affect chapter 51 of this title or a regulation prescribed under chapter 51.

§31147. Limitations on authority

(a) TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.—This subchapter does not authorize the Secretary of Transportation to prescribe traffic safety regulations or preempt State traffic regulations. However, the Secretary may prescribe traffic regulations to the extent their subject matter was regulated under parts 390–399 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, on October 30, 1984.

(b) REGULATING THE MANUFACTURING OF VEHICLES.—This subchapter does not authorize the Secretary to regulate the manufacture of commercial motor vehicles for any purpose, including fuel economy, safety, or emission control.

SUBCHAPTER IV—MISCELLANEOUS

§31161. Procedures to ensure timely correction of safety violations

(a) DEFINITION.—Section 31132(1) of this title applies to this section.

(b) GENERAL.—Not later than August 3, 1991, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations establishing procedures to ensure the proper and timely correction of commercial motor vehicle safety violations noted during an inspection carried out with money authorized under section 31104 of this title.

(c) VERIFICATION PROGRAM.—The regulations shall establish a verification program for United States Government inspectors and States participating under section 31102 of this title to ensure that commercial motor vehicles and their operators found in violation of safety requirements have been brought into compliance with those requirements. The regulations shall include—

(1) a nationwide system for random reinspection of the commercial motor vehicles and their operators that have been declared out-of-service because of those safety violations, with the main purpose of the system being to verify that the violations have been corrected on a timely basis;

(2) a program of accountability for correcting all safety violations that shall provide that—

(A) the operator of a commercial motor vehicle for which a safety violation has been noted shall be issued a form prescribed by the Secretary;

(B) the person making the repairs necessary to correct the violation shall certify on the form the making of repairs and the date, location, and time of the repairs;

(C) the motor carrier responsible for the commercial motor vehicle or operator shall certify on the form that, based on the carrier's knowledge, the repairs necessary to correct the violation have been made; and

(D) appropriate State penalties shall be imposed for a false statement on the form or a failure to return the form to the appropriate State entity; and

(3) a system for ensuring that appropriate State penalties are imposed for failure to correct any of those safety violations.

§31162. Compliance review priority

If the Secretary of Transportation identifies a pattern of violations of State or local traffic safety laws or regulations or commercial motor vehicle safety regulations, standards, or orders among drivers of commercial motor vehicles employed by a particular motor carrier, the Secretary or a State representative shall ensure that the motor carrier receives a high priority for review of that carrier's compliance with applicable United States Government and State commercial motor vehicle safety regulations.

(b) Testing Program for Operators of Commercial Motor Vehicles.—(1)(A) In the interest of commercial motor vehicle safety, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations not later than October 28, 1992, that establish a program requiring motor carriers to conduct preemployment, reasonable suspicion, random, and post-accident testing of operators of commercial motor vehicles for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation.

(B) When the Secretary of Transportation considers it appropriate in the interest of safety, the Secretary may prescribe regulations for conducting periodic recurring testing of operators of commercial motor vehicles for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation.

(2) In prescribing regulations under this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation—

(A) shall require that post-accident testing of an operator of a commercial motor vehicle be conducted when loss of human life occurs in an accident involving a commercial motor vehicle; and

(B) may require that post-accident testing of such an operator be conducted when bodily injury or significant property damage occurs in any other serious accident involving a commercial motor vehicle.

(c) Testing and Laboratory Requirements.—In carrying out subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall develop requirements that shall—

(1) promote, to the maximum extent practicable, individual privacy in the collection of specimens;

(2) for laboratories and testing procedures for controlled substances, incorporate the Department of Health and Human Services scientific and technical guidelines dated April 11, 1988, and any amendments to those guidelines, including mandatory guidelines establishing—

(A) comprehensive standards for every aspect of laboratory controlled substances testing and laboratory procedures to be applied in carrying out this section, including standards requiring the use of the best available technology to ensure the complete reliability and accuracy of controlled substances tests and strict procedures governing the chain of custody of specimens collected for controlled substances testing;

(4) provide that any test indicating the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation be confirmed by a scientifically recognized method of testing capable of providing quantitative information about alcohol or a controlled substance;

(5) provide that each specimen be subdivided, secured, and labeled in the presence of the tested individual and that a part of the specimen be retained in a secure manner to prevent the possibility of tampering, so that if the individual's confirmation test results are positive the individual has an opportunity to have the retained part tested by a 2d confirmation test done independently at another certified laboratory if the individual requests the 2d confirmation test not later than 3 days after being advised of the results of the first confirmation test;

(6) ensure appropriate safeguards for testing to detect and quantify alcohol in breath and body fluid samples, including urine and blood, through the development of regulations that may be necessary and in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services;

(7) provide for the confidentiality of test results and medical information (except information about alcohol or a controlled substance) of employees, except that this clause does not prevent the use of test results for the orderly imposition of appropriate sanctions under this section; and

(8) ensure that employees are selected for tests by nondiscriminatory and impartial methods, so that no employee is harassed by being treated differently from other employees in similar circumstances.

(d) Testing as Part of Medical Examination.—The Secretary of Transportation may provide that testing under subsection (a) of this section for operators subject to subpart E of part 391 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, be conducted as part of the medical examination required under that subpart.

(e) Rehabilitation.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations establishing requirements for rehabilitation programs that provide for the identification and opportunity for treatment of operators of commercial motor vehicles who are found to have used alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation. The Secretary shall decide on the circumstances under which those operators shall be required to participate in a program. This section does not prevent a motor carrier from establishing a program under this section in cooperation with another motor carrier.

(f) Sanctions.—The Secretary of Transportation shall decide on appropriate sanctions for a commercial motor vehicle operator who is found, based on tests conducted and confirmed under this section, to have used alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation but who is not under the influence of alcohol or a controlled substance as provided in this chapter.

(g) Effect on State and Local Government Regulations.—A State or local government may not prescribe or continue in effect a law, regulation, standard, or order that is inconsistent with regulations prescribed under this section. However, a regulation prescribed under this section may not be construed to preempt a State criminal law that imposes sanctions for reckless conduct leading to loss of life, injury, or damage to property.

(h) International Obligations and Foreign Laws.—In prescribing regulations under this section, the Secretary of Transportation—

(1) shall establish only requirements that are consistent with international obligations of the United States; and

(2) shall consider applicable laws and regulations of foreign countries.

(i) Other Regulations Allowed.—This section does not prevent the Secretary of Transportation from continuing in effect, amending, or further supplementing a regulation prescribed before October 28, 1991, governing the use of alcohol or a controlled substance by commercial motor vehicle employees.

(j) Application of Penalties.—This section does not supersede a penalty applicable to an operator of a commercial motor vehicle under this chapter or another law.

(a) General Requirement.—The Secretary of Transportation shall make an agreement under subsection (b) of this section for the operation of, or establish under subsection (c) of this section, an information system that will serve as a clearinghouse and depository of information about the licensing, identification, and disqualification of operators of commercial motor vehicles. The Secretary shall consult with the States in carrying out this section.

(b) State Agreements.—If the Secretary decides that an information system used by a State or States about the driving status of operators of motor vehicles or another State-operated information system could be used to carry out this section, and the State or States agree to the use of the system for carrying out this section, the Secretary may make an agreement with the State or States to use the system as provided in this section and section 31311(c) of this title. An agreement made under this subsection shall contain terms the Secretary considers necessary to carry out this chapter.

(c) ESTABLISHMENT BY SECRETARY.—If the Secretary does not make an agreement under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary shall establish an information system about the driving status and licensing of operators of commercial motor vehicles as provided in this section.

(d) CONTENTS.—(1) At a minimum, the information system under this section shall include for each operator of a commercial motor vehicle—

(B) the name, address, and physical description of the operator;

(C) the social security account number of the operator or other number or information the Secretary considers appropriate to identify the operator;

(D) the name of the State that issued the license to the operator;

(E) the dates between which the license is valid; and

(2) Not later than December 31, 1990, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations on minimum uniform standards for a biometric identification system to ensure the identification of operators of commercial motor vehicles.

(e) AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION.—(1) On request of a State, the Secretary or the operator of the information system, as the case may be, may make available to the State information in the information system under this section.

(2) On request of an employee, the Secretary or the operator of the information system, as the case may be, may make available to the employee information in the information system about the employee.

(3) On request of an employer or prospective employer of an employee and after notification to the employee, the Secretary or the operator of the information system, as the case may be, may make available to the employer or prospective employer information in the information system about the employee.

(4) On the request of the Secretary, the operator of the information system shall make available to the Secretary information about the driving status and licensing of operators of commercial motor vehicles (including information required by subsection (d)(1) of this section).

(f) FEE SYSTEM.—If the Secretary establishes an information system under this section, the Secretary shall establish a fee system for using the information system. Fees collected under this subsection in a fiscal year shall equal as nearly as possible the costs of operating the information system in that fiscal year. The Secretary shall deposit fees collected under this subsection in the Highway Trust Fund (except the Mass Transit Account).

§31310. Disqualifications

(a) BLOOD ALCOHOL CONCENTRATION LEVEL.—In this section, the blood alcohol concentration level at or above which an individual when operating a commercial motor vehicle is deemed to be driving under the influence of alcohol is .04 percent.

(16)(A) Before issuing a commercial driver's license to an individual, the State shall request the Secretary for information from the National Driver Register maintained under chapter 303 of this title (after the Secretary decides the Register is operational) on whether the individual—

(i) has been disqualified from operating a motor vehicle (except a commercial motor vehicle);

(1) the costs and benefits of carrying out the standard;

(2) the effect of the standard on insurance costs and legal fees and costs;

(3) savings in consumer time and inconvenience; and

(4) health and safety, including emission standards.

(e) PROCEDURES.—Section 553 of title 5 applies to a standard prescribed under this section. However, the Secretary shall give an interested person an opportunity to make oral and written presentations of information, views, and arguments. A transcript of each oral presentation shall be kept. Under conditions prescribed by the Secretary, the Secretary may conduct a hearing to resolve an issue of fact material to a standard.

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The Secretary shall prescribe an effective date for a standard under this section. That date may not be earlier than the date the standard is prescribed nor later than 18 months after the date the standard is prescribed. However, the Secretary may prescribe a later date when the Secretary submits to Congress and publishes the reasons for the later date. A standard only applies to a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment manufactured on or after the effective date.

(g) RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall conduct research necessary to carry out this chapter.

§32503. Judicial review of bumper standards

(a) FILING AND VENUE.—A person that may be adversely affected by a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title may apply for review of the standard by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. The petition must be filed not later than 59 days after the standard is prescribed.

(b) NOTIFYING SECRETARY.—The clerk of the court shall send immediately a copy of the petition to the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary shall file with the court a record of the proceeding in which the standard was prescribed.

(c) ADDITIONAL PROCEEDINGS.—(1) On request of the petitioner, the court may order the Secretary to receive additional evidence and evidence in rebuttal if the court is satisfied the additional evidence is material and there were reasonable grounds for not presenting the evidence in the proceeding before the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may modify findings of fact or make new findings because of the additional evidence presented. The Secretary shall file a modified or new finding, a recommendation to modify or set aside a standard, and the additional evidence with the court.

(d) SUPREME COURT REVIEW AND ADDITIONAL REMEDIES.—A judgment of a court under this section may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. A remedy under this section is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

§32504. Certificates of compliance

Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation, a manufacturer or distributor of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment subject to a standard prescribed under section 32502 this title shall give the distributor or dealer at the time of delivery a certificate that the vehicle or equipment complies with the standard.

§32505. Information and compliance requirements

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) To enable the Secretary of Transportation to decide whether a manufacturer of passenger motor vehicles or passenger motor vehicle equipment is complying with this chapter and standards prescribed under this chapter, the Secretary may require the manufacturer to—

(A) keep records;

(B) make reports;

(C) provide items and information, including vehicles and equipment for testing at a negotiated price not more than the manufacturer's cost; and

(D) allow an officer or employee designated by the Secretary to inspect vehicles and relevant records of the manufacturer.

(2) To enforce this chapter, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, on presenting appropriate credentials and a written notice to the owner, operator, or agent in charge, may inspect a facility in which passenger motor vehicles or passenger motor vehicle equipment is manufactured, held for introduction in interstate commerce, or held for sale after introduction in interstate commerce. An inspection shall be conducted at a reasonable time, in a reasonable way, and with reasonable promptness.

(b) POWERS OF SECRETARY AND CIVIL ACTIONS TO ENFORCE.—(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary may—

(A) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(B) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(C) conduct hearings, administer oaths, take testimony, and require (by subpena or otherwise) the appearance and testimony of witnesses and the production of records the Secretary considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(3) A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary under this subsection may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary was conducted. The court may punish a failure to obey an order of the court to comply with the subpena or order of the Secretary as a contempt of court.

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—(1) Information obtained by the Secretary under this chapter related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only—

(A) to another officer or employee of the United States Government for use in carrying out this chapter; or

(B) in a proceeding under this chapter.

(2) This subsection does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

(3) Subject to paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary, on request, shall make available to the public at cost information the Secretary submits or receives in carrying out this chapter.

§32506. Prohibited acts

(a) GENERAL.—Except as provided in this section, a person may not—

(1) manufacture for sale, sell, offer for sale, introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States, a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment manufactured on or after the date an applicable standard under section 32502 of this title takes effect, unless it conforms to the standard;

(2) fail to comply with an applicable regulation prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter;

(3) fail to keep records, refuse access to or copying of records, fail to make reports or provide items or information, or fail or refuse to allow entry or inspection, as required by this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter; or

(4) fail to provide the certificate required by section 32504 of this title, or provide a certificate that the person knows, or in the exercise of reasonable care has reason to know, is false or misleading in a material respect.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—Subsection (a)(1) of this section does not apply to—

(1) the sale, offer for sale, or introduction or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment after the first purchase of the vehicle or equipment in good faith other than for resale (but this clause does not prohibit a standard from requiring that a vehicle or equipment be manufactured to comply with the standard over a specified period of operation or use); or

(2) a person—

(A) establishing that the person had no reason to know, by exercising reasonable care, that the vehicle or equipment does not comply with the standard; or

(B) holding, without knowing about a noncompliance and before that first purchase, a certificate issued under section 32504 of this title stating that the vehicle or equipment complies with the standard.

(c) IMPORTING NONCOMPLYING VEHICLES AND EQUIPMENT.—(1) The Secretaries of Transportation and the Treasury may prescribe joint regulations authorizing a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment not complying with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title to be imported into the United States subject to conditions (including providing a bond) the Secretaries consider appropriate to ensure that the vehicle or equipment will—

(A) comply, after importation, with the standards prescribed under section 32502 of this title;

(B) be exported; or

(C) be abandoned to the United States Government.

(2) The Secretaries may prescribe joint regulations that allow a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment to be imported into the United States after the first purchase in good faith other than for resale.

(d) LIABILITY UNDER OTHER LAW.—Compliance with a standard under this chapter does not exempt a person from liability provided by law.

§32507. Penalties and enforcement

(a) CIVIL PENALTY.—(1) A person that violates section 32506(a) of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each passenger motor vehicle or item of passenger motor vehicle equipment involved in a violation of section 32506(a)(1) or (4) of this title—

(A) that does not comply with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title; or

(B) for which a certificate is not provided, or for which a false or misleading certificate is provided, under section 32504 of this title.

(2) The maximum civil penalty under this subsection for a related series of violations is $800,000.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation imposes a civil penalty under this subsection. The Attorney General or the Secretary, with the concurrence of the Attorney General, shall bring a civil action in a United States district court to collect the penalty.

(b) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—A person knowingly and willfully violating section 32506(a)(1) of this title after receiving a notice of noncompliance from the Secretary shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. If the person is a corporation, the penalties of this subsection also apply to a director, officer, or individual agent of the corporation who, with knowledge of the Secretary's notice, knowingly and willfully authorizes, orders, or performs an act that is any part of the violation.

(c) CIVIL ACTIONS TO ENFORCE.—(1) The Secretary or the Attorney General may bring a civil action in a United States district court to enjoin a violation of this chapter or the sale, offer for sale, introduction or delivery for introduction in interstate commerce, or importation into the United States, of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment that is found, before the first purchase in good faith other than for resale, not to comply with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title.

(2) When practicable, the Secretary shall—

(A) notify a person against whom an action under this subsection is planned;

(B) give the person an opportunity to present that person's views; and

(C) except for a knowing and willful violation, give the person a reasonable opportunity to comply.

(3) The failure of the Secretary to comply with paragraph (2) of this subsection does not prevent a court from granting appropriate relief.

(d) JURY TRIAL DEMAND.—In a trial for criminal contempt for violating an injunction or restraining order issued under subsection (c) of this section, the violation of which is also a violation of this chapter, the defendant may demand a jury trial. The defendant shall be tried as provided in rule 42(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (18 App. U.S.C.).

(e) VENUE.—A civil action under subsection (a) or (c) of this section may be brought in the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant is found, resides, or does business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found. A subpena for a witness in the action may be served in any judicial district.

§32508. Civil actions by owners of passenger motor vehicles

When an owner of a passenger motor vehicle sustains damages as a result of a motor vehicle accident because the vehicle did not comply with a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title, the owner may bring a civil action against the manufacturer to recover the damages. The action may be brought in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the owner resides. The action must be brought not later than 3 years after the date of the accident. The court shall award costs and a reasonable attorney's fee to the owner when a judgment is entered for the owner.

§32509. Information and assistance from other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Transportation may request information necessary to carry out this chapter from a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall provide the information.

(b) DETAILING PERSONNEL.—The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality may detail, on a reimbursable basis, personnel to assist the Secretary in carrying out this chapter.

§32510. Annual report

Not later than March 31 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress and the President a report on the progress in carrying out section 32501 of this title. The report shall include—

(1) a statement of the cost savings resulting from carrying out this chapter; and

(2) recommendations for legislative or other action the Secretary decides may be appropriate.

§32511. Relationship to other motor vehicle standards

(a) PREEMPTION.—Except as provided in this section, a State or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe or enforce a bumper standard for a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment only if the standard is identical to a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title.

(b) ENFORCEMENT.—This chapter and chapter 301 of this title do not affect the authority of a State to enforce a bumper standard about an aspect of performance of a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment not covered by a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title if the State bumper standard—

(1) does not conflict with a standard prescribed under chapter 301 of this title; and

(2) was in effect or prescribed by the State on October 20, 1972.

(c) ADDITIONAL AND HIGHER STANDARDS OF PERFORMANCE.—The United States Government, a State, or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe a bumper standard for a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle equipment obtained for its own use that imposes additional or higher standards of performance than a standard prescribed under section 32502 of this title.

32709. Penalties and enforcement.
32710. Civil actions by private persons.
32711. Relationship to State law.

§32701. Findings and purposes

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) buyers of motor vehicles rely heavily on the odometer reading as an index of the condition and value of a vehicle;

(2) buyers are entitled to rely on the odometer reading as an accurate indication of the mileage of the vehicle;

(3) an accurate indication of the mileage assists a buyer in deciding on the safety and reliability of the vehicle; and

(4) motor vehicles move in, or affect, interstate and foreign commerce.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this chapter are—

(1) to prohibit tampering with motor vehicle odometers; and

(2) to provide safeguards to protect purchasers in the sale of motor vehicles with altered or reset odometers.

§32702. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "auction company" means a person taking possession of a motor vehicle owned by another to sell at an auction.

(2) "dealer" means a person that sold at least 5 motor vehicles during the prior 12 months to buyers that in good faith bought the vehicles other than for resale.

(3) "distributor" means a person that sold at least 5 motor vehicles during the prior 12 months for resale.

(4) "leased motor vehicle" means a motor vehicle leased to a person for at least 4 months by a lessor that leased at least 5 vehicles during the prior 12 months.

(5) "odometer" means an instrument for measuring and recording the distance a motor vehicle is driven, but does not include an auxiliary instrument designed to be reset by the operator of the vehicle to record mileage of a trip.

(6) "repair" and "replace" mean to restore to a sound working condition by replacing any part of an odometer or by correcting any inoperative part of an odometer.

(7) "title" means the certificate of title or other document issued by the State indicating ownership.

(8) "transfer" means to change ownership by sale, gift, or other means.

§32703. Preventing tampering

A person may not—

(1) advertise for sale, sell, use, install, or have installed, a device that makes an odometer of a motor vehicle register a mileage different from the mileage the vehicle was driven, as registered by the odometer within the designed tolerance of the manufacturer of the odometer;

(2) disconnect, reset, alter, or have disconnected, reset, or altered, an odometer of a motor vehicle intending to change the mileage registered by the odometer;

(3) with intent to defraud, operate a motor vehicle on a public street, road, or highway if the person knows that the odometer of the vehicle is disconnected or not operating; or

(4) conspire to violate this section or section 32704 or 32705 of this title.

§32704. Service, repair, and replacement

(a) ADJUSTING MILEAGE.—A person may service, repair, or replace an odometer of a motor vehicle if the mileage registered by the odometer remains the same as before the service, repair, or replacement. If the mileage cannot remain the same—

(1) the person shall adjust the odometer to read zero; and

(2) the owner of the vehicle or agent of the owner shall attach a written notice to the left door frame of the vehicle specifying the mileage before the service, repair, or replacement and the date of the service, repair, or replacement.

(b) REMOVING OR ALTERING NOTICE.—A person may not, with intent to defraud, remove or alter a notice attached to a motor vehicle as required by this section.

§32705. Disclosure requirements on transfer of motor vehicles

(a) WRITTEN DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation, a person transferring ownership of a motor vehicle shall give the transferee a written disclosure—

(A) of the cumulative mileage registered by the odometer; or

(B) that the mileage is unknown if the transferor knows that the mileage registered by the odometer is incorrect.

(2) A person making a written disclosure required by a regulation prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection may not make a false statement in the disclosure.

(3) A person acquiring a motor vehicle for resale may accept a disclosure under this section only if it is complete.

(4) The regulations prescribed by the Secretary shall provide the way in which information is disclosed and retained under this section.

(b) Mileage Statement Requirement for Licensing.—(1) A motor vehicle the ownership of which is transferred may not be licensed for use in a State unless the transferee, in submitting an application to a State for the title on which the license will be issued, includes with the application the transferor's title and, if that title contains the space referred to in paragraph (3)(A)(iii) of this subsection, a statement, signed and dated by the transferor, of the mileage disclosure required under subsection (a) of this section. This paragraph does not apply to a transfer of ownership of a motor vehicle that has not been licensed before the transfer.

(2)(A) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if the title to a motor vehicle issued to a transferor by a State is in the possession of a lienholder when the transferor transfers ownership of the vehicle, the transferor may use a written power of attorney (if allowed by State law) in making the mileage disclosure required under subsection (a) of this section. Regulations prescribed under this paragraph—

(i) shall prescribe the form of the power of attorney;

(ii) shall provide that the form be printed by means of a secure printing process (or other secure process);

(iii) shall provide that the State issue the form to the transferee;

(iv) shall provide that the person exercising the power of attorney retain a copy and submit the original to the State with a copy of the title showing the restatement of the mileage;

(v) may require that the State retain the power of attorney and the copy of the title for an appropriate period or that the State adopt alternative measures consistent with section 32701(b) of this title, after considering the costs to the State;

(vi) shall ensure that the mileage at the time of transfer be disclosed on the power of attorney document;

(vii) shall ensure that the mileage be restated exactly by the person exercising the power of attorney in the space referred to in paragraph (3)(A)(iii) of this subsection;

(viii) may not require that a motor vehicle be titled in the State in which the power of attorney was issued;

(ix) shall consider the need to facilitate normal commercial transactions in the sale or exchange of motor vehicles; and

(x) shall provide other conditions the Secretary considers appropriate.

(B) Section 32709(a) and (b) applies to a person granting or granted a power of attorney under this paragraph.

(3)(A) A motor vehicle the ownership of which is transferred may be licensed for use in a State only if the title issued by the State to the transferee—

(i) is produced by means of a secure printing process (or other secure process);

(ii) indicates the mileage disclosure required to be made under subsection (a) of this section; and

(iii) contains a space for the transferee to disclose the mileage at the time of a future transfer and to sign and date the disclosure.

(B) Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not require a State to verify, or preclude a State from verifying, the mileage information contained in the title.

(c) Leased Motor Vehicles.—(1) For a leased motor vehicle, the regulations prescribed under subsection (a) of this section shall require written disclosure about mileage to be made by the lessee to the lessor when the lessor transfers ownership of that vehicle.

(2) Under those regulations, the lessor shall provide written notice to the lessee of—

(A) the mileage disclosure requirements of subsection (a) of this section; and

(B) the penalties for failure to comply with those requirements.

(3) The lessor shall retain the disclosures made by a lessee under paragraph (1) of this subsection for at least 4 years following the date the lessor transfers the leased motor vehicle.

(4) If the lessor transfers ownership of a leased motor vehicle without obtaining possession of the vehicle, the lessor, in making the disclosure required by subsection (a) of this section, may indicate on the title the mileage disclosed by the lessee under paragraph (1) of this subsection unless the lessor has reason to believe that the disclosure by the lessee does not reflect the actual mileage of the vehicle.

(d) State Alternate Vehicle Mileage Disclosure Requirements.—The requirements of subsections (b) and (c)(1) of this section on the disclosure of motor vehicle mileage when motor vehicles are transferred or leased apply in a State unless the State has in effect alternate motor vehicle mileage disclosure requirements approved by the Secretary. The Secretary shall approve alternate motor vehicle mileage disclosure requirements submitted by a State unless the Secretary decides that the requirements are not consistent with the purpose of the disclosure required by subsection (b) or (c), as the case may be.

(e) Auction Sales.—If a motor vehicle is sold at an auction, the auction company conducting the auction shall maintain the following records for at least 4 years after the date of the sale:

(1) the name of the most recent owner of the motor vehicle (except the auction company) and the name of the buyer of the motor vehicle.

(2) the vehicle identification number required under chapter 301 or 331 of this title.

(3) the odometer reading on the date the auction company took possession of the motor vehicle.

(f) Application and Revision of State Law.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, subsections (b)–(e) of this section apply to the transfer of a motor vehicle after April 28, 1989.

(2) If a State requests, the Secretary shall assist the State in revising its laws to comply with subsection (b) of this section. If a State requires time beyond April 28, 1989, to revise its laws to achieve compliance, the Secretary, on request of the State, may grant additional time that the Secretary considers reasonable by publishing a notice in the Federal Register. The notice shall include the reasons for granting the additional time. In granting additional time, the Secretary shall ensure that the State is making reasonable efforts to achieve compliance.

§32706. Inspections, investigations, and records

(a) Authority To Inspect and Investigate.—Subject to section 32707 of this title, the Secretary of Transportation may conduct an inspection or investigation necessary to carry out this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. The Secretary shall cooperate with State and local officials to the greatest extent possible in conducting an inspection or investigation. The Secretary may give the Attorney General information about a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter.

(b) Entry, Inspection, and Impoundment.—(1) In carrying out subsection (a) of this section, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, on display of proper credentials and written notice to the owner, operator, or agent in charge, may—

(A) enter and inspect commercial premises in which a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment is manufactured, held for shipment or sale, maintained, or repaired;

(B) enter and inspect noncommercial premises in which the Secretary reasonably believes there is a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment that is an object of a violation of this chapter;

(C) inspect that motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment; and

(D) impound for not more than 72 hours for inspection a motor vehicle or motor vehicle equipment that the Secretary reasonably believes is an object of a violation of this chapter.

(2) An inspection or impoundment under this subsection shall be conducted at a reasonable time, in a reasonable way, and with reasonable promptness. The written notice may consist of a warrant issued under section 32707 of this title.

(c) Reasonable Compensation.—When the Secretary impounds for inspection a motor vehicle (except a vehicle subject to subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title) or motor vehicle equipment under subsection (b)(1)(D) of this section, the Secretary shall pay reasonable compensation to the owner of the vehicle or equipment if the inspection or impoundment results in denial of use, or reduction in value, of the vehicle or equipment.

(d) Records and Information Requirements.—(1) To enable the Secretary to decide whether a dealer or distributor is complying with this chapter and regulations prescribed and orders issued under this chapter, the Secretary may require the dealer or distributor—

(A) to keep records;

(B) to provide information from those records if the Secretary states the purpose for requiring the information and identifies the information to the fullest extent practicable; and

(C) to allow an officer or employee designated by the Secretary to inspect relevant records of the dealer or distributor.

(2) This subsection and subsection (e)(1)(B) of this section do not authorize the Secretary to require a dealer or distributor to provide information on a regular periodic basis.

(e) Administrative Authority and Civil Actions To Enforce.—(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary may—

(A) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(B) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(C) conduct hearings, administer oaths, take testimony, and require (by subpena or otherwise) the appearance and testimony of witnesses and the production of records the Secretary considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(3) A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary under this subsection may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary was conducted. The court may punish a failure to obey an order of the court to comply with the subpena or order of the Secretary as a contempt of court.

(f) Prohibitions.—A person may not fail to keep records, refuse access to or copying of records, fail to make reports or provide information, fail to allow entry or inspection, or fail to permit impoundment, as required under this section.

§32707. Administrative warrants

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "probable cause" means a valid public interest in the effective enforcement of this chapter or a regulation prescribed under this chapter sufficient to justify the inspection or impoundment in the circumstances stated in an application for a warrant under this section.

(b) WARRANT REQUIREMENT AND ISSUANCE.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, an inspection or impoundment under section 32706 of this title may be carried out only after a warrant is obtained.

(2) A judge of a court of the United States or a State court of record or a United States magistrate may issue a warrant for an inspection or impoundment under section 32706 of this title within the territorial jurisdiction of the court or magistrate. The warrant must be based on an affidavit that—

(A) establishes probable cause to issue the warrant; and

(B) is sworn to before the judge or magistrate by an officer or employee who knows the facts alleged in the affidavit.

(3) The judge or magistrate shall issue the warrant when the judge or magistrate decides there is a reasonable basis for believing that probable cause exists to issue the warrant. The warrant must—

(A) identify the premises, property, or motor vehicle to be inspected and the items or type of property to be impounded;

(B) state the purpose of the inspection, the basis for issuing the warrant, and the name of the affiant;

(C) direct an individual authorized under section 32706 of this title to inspect the premises, property, or vehicle for the purpose stated in the warrant and, when appropriate, to impound the property specified in the warrant;

(D) direct that the warrant be served during the hours specified in the warrant; and

(E) name the judge or magistrate with whom proof of service is to be filed.

(4) A warrant under this section is not required when—

(A) the owner, operator, or agent in charge of the premises consents;

(B) it is reasonable to believe that the mobility of the motor vehicle to be inspected makes it impractical to obtain a warrant;

(C) an application for a warrant cannot be made because of an emergency;

(D) records are to be inspected and copied under section 32706(e)(1)(A) of this title; or

(E) a warrant is not constitutionally required.

(c) SERVICE AND IMPOUNDMENT OF PROPERTY.—(1) A warrant issued under this section must be served and proof of service filed not later than 10 days after its issuance date. The judge or magistrate may allow additional time in the warrant if the Secretary of Transportation demonstrates a need for additional time. Proof of service must be filed promptly with a written inventory of the property impounded under the warrant. The inventory shall be made in the presence of the individual serving the warrant and the individual from whose possession or premises the property was impounded, or if that individual is not present, a credible individual except the individual making the inventory. The individual serving the warrant shall verify the inventory. On request, the judge or magistrate shall send a copy of the inventory to the individual from whose possession or premises the property was impounded and to the applicant for the warrant.

(2) When property is impounded under a warrant, the individual serving the warrant shall—

(A) give the person from whose possession or premises the property was impounded a copy of the warrant and a receipt for the property; or

(B) leave the copy and receipt at the place from which the property was impounded.

(3) The judge or magistrate shall file the warrant, proof of service, and all documents filed about the warrant with the clerk of the United States district court for the judicial district in which the inspection is made.

§32708. Confidentiality of information

(a) GENERAL.—Information obtained by the Secretary of Transportation under this chapter related to a confidential matter referred to in section 1905 of title 18 may be disclosed only—

(1) to another officer or employee of the United States Government for use in carrying out this chapter; or

(2) in a proceeding under this chapter.

(b) WITHHOLDING INFORMATION FROM CONGRESS.—This section does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§32709. Penalties and enforcement

(a) CIVIL PENALTY.—(1) A person that violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $2,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each motor vehicle or device involved in the violation. The maximum penalty under this subsection for a related series of violations is $100,000.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall impose a civil penalty under this subsection. The Attorney General shall bring a civil action to collect the penalty. Before referring a penalty claim to the Attorney General, the Secretary may compromise the amount of the penalty. Before compromising the amount of the penalty, the Secretary shall give the person charged with a violation an opportunity to establish that the violation did not occur.

(3) In determining the amount of a civil penalty under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(B) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue doing business; and

(C) other matters that justice requires.

(b) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—A person that knowingly and willfully violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 3 years, or both. If the person is a corporation, the penalties of this subsection also apply to a director, officer, or individual agent of a corporation who knowingly and willfully authorizes, orders, or performs an act in violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter without regard to penalties imposed on the corporation.

(c) CIVIL ACTIONS BY ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The Attorney General may bring a civil action to enjoin a violation of this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter. The action may be brought in the United States district court for the judicial district in which the violation occurred or the defendant is found, resides, or does business. Process in the action may be served in any other judicial district in which the defendant resides or is found. A subpena for a witness in the action may be served in any judicial district.

(d) CIVIL ACTIONS BY STATES.—(1) When a person violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter, the chief law enforcement officer of the State in which the violation occurs may bring a civil action—

(A) to enjoin the violation; or

(B) to recover amounts for which the person is liable under section 32710 of this title for each person on whose behalf the action is brought.

(2) An action under this subsection may be brought in an appropriate United States district court or in a State court of competent jurisdiction. The action must be brought not later than 2 years after the claim accrues.

§32710. Civil actions by private persons

(a) VIOLATION AND AMOUNT OF DAMAGES.—A person that violates this chapter or a regulation prescribed or order issued under this chapter, with intent to defraud, is liable for 3 times the actual damages or $1,500, whichever is greater.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS.—A person may bring a civil action to enforce a claim under this section in an appropriate United States district court or in another court of competent jurisdiction. The action must be brought not later than 2 years after the claim accrues. The court shall award costs and a reasonable attorney's fee to the person when a judgment is entered for that person.

§32711. Relationship to State law

Except to the extent that State law is inconsistent with this chapter, this chapter does not—

(1) affect a State law on disconnecting, altering, or tampering with an odometer with intent to defraud; or

(2) exempt a person from complying with that law.

(8) "dual fueled automobile" means an automobile that—

(A) is capable of operating on alternative fuel and on gasoline or diesel fuel;

(B) provides equal or superior energy efficiency, as calculated for the applicable model year during fuel economy testing for the United States Government, when operating on alternative fuel as when operating on gasoline or diesel fuel;

(C) for model years 1993–1995 for an automobile capable of operating on a mixture of an alternative fuel and gasoline or diesel fuel and if the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency decides to extend the application of this subclause, for an additional period ending not later than the end of the last model year to which section 32905(b) and (d) of this title applies, provides equal or superior energy efficiency, as calculated for the applicable model year during fuel economy testing for the Government, when operating on a mixture of alternative fuel and gasoline or diesel fuel containing exactly 50 percent gasoline or diesel fuel as when operating on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(B) that calendar year if the manufacturer does not have an annual production period.

(16) "passenger automobile" means an automobile that the Secretary decides by regulation is manufactured primarily for transporting not more than 10 individuals, but does not include an automobile capable of off-highway operation that the Secretary decides by regulation—

(A) has a significant feature (except 4-wheel drive) designed for off-highway operation; and

(B) is a 4-wheel drive automobile or is rated at more than 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight.

(b) AUTHORITY TO CHANGE PERCENTAGE.—The Secretary may prescribe regulations changing the percentage referred to in subsection (a)(1)(D) of this section to not less than 70 percent because of requirements relating to cold start, safety, or vehicle functions.

(c) MINIMUM DRIVING RANGES FOR DUAL FUELED PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES.—(1) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation the minimum driving range that dual fueled automobiles that are passenger automobiles must meet when operating on alternative fuel to be dual fueled automobiles under sections 32905 and 32906 of this title. A determination whether a dual fueled automobile meets the minimum driving range requirement under this paragraph shall be based on the combined Agency city/highway fuel economy as determined for average fuel economy purposes for those automobiles.

(2)(A) The Secretary may prescribe a lower range for a specific model than that prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection. A manufacturer may petition for a lower range than that prescribed under paragraph (1) for a specific model.

(B) The minimum driving range prescribed for dual fueled automobiles (except electric automobiles) under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph or paragraph (1) of this subsection must be at least 200 miles.

(C) If the Secretary prescribes a minimum driving range of 200 miles for dual fueled automobiles (except electric automobiles) under paragraph (1) of this subsection, subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not apply to dual fueled automobiles (except electric automobiles).

(3) In prescribing a minimum driving range under paragraph (1) of this subsection and in taking an action under paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary shall consider the purpose set forth in section 3 of the Alternative Motor Fuels Act of 1988 (Public Law 100–494, 102 Stat. 2442), consumer acceptability, economic practicability, technology, environmental impact, safety, drivability, performance, and other factors the Secretary considers relevant.

§32902. Average fuel economy standards

(a) NON-PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES.—At least 18 months before the beginning of each model year, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe by regulation average fuel economy standards for automobiles (except passenger automobiles) manufactured by a manufacturer in that model year. Each standard shall be the maximum feasible average fuel economy level that the Secretary decides the manufacturers can achieve in that model year. The Secretary may prescribe separate standards for different classes of automobiles.

(b) PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES.—Except as provided in this section, the average fuel economy standard for passenger automobiles manufactured by a manufacturer in a model year after model year 1984 shall be 27.5 miles a gallon.

(c) AMENDING PASSENGER AUTOMOBILE STANDARDS.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations amending the standard under subsection (b) of this section for a model year to a level that the Secretary decides is the maximum feasible average fuel economy level for that model year. Section 553 of title 5 applies to a proceeding to amend the standard. However, any interested person may make an oral presentation and a transcript shall be taken of that presentation.

(2) If an amendment increases the standard above 27.5 miles a gallon or decreases the standard below 26.0 miles a gallon, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit the amendment to Congress. The procedures of section 551 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6421) apply to an amendment, except that the 15 calendar days referred to in section 551(c) and (d) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 6421(c), (d)) are deemed to be 60 calendar days, and the 5 calendar days referred to in section 551(f)(4)(A) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 6421(f)(4)(A)) are deemed to be 20 calendar days. If either House of Congress disapproves the amendment under those procedures, the amendment does not take effect.

(d) EXEMPTIONS.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, on application of a manufacturer that manufactured (whether in the United States or not) fewer than 10,000 passenger automobiles in the model year 2 years before the model year for which the application is made, the Secretary of Transportation may exempt by regulation the manufacturer from a standard under subsection (b) or (c) of this section. An exemption for a model year applies only if the manufacturer manufactures (whether in the United States or not) fewer than 10,000 passenger automobiles in the model year. The Secretary may exempt a manufacturer only if the Secretary—

(A) finds that the applicable standard under those subsections is more stringent than the maximum feasible average fuel economy level that the manufacturer can achieve; and

(B) prescribes by regulation an alternative average fuel economy standard for the passenger automobiles manufactured by the exempted manufacturer that the Secretary decides is the maximum feasible average fuel economy level for the manufacturers to which the alternative standard applies.

(2) An alternative average fuel economy standard the Secretary of Transportation prescribes under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection may apply to an individually exempted manufacturer, to all automobiles to which this subsection applies, or to classes of passenger automobiles, as defined under regulations of the Secretary, manufactured by exempted manufacturers.

(3) Notwithstanding paragraph (1) of this subsection, an importer registered under section 30141(c) of this title may not be exempted as a manufacturer under paragraph (1) for a motor vehicle that the importer—

(A) imports; or

(B) brings into compliance with applicable motor vehicle safety standards prescribed under chapter 301 of this title for an individual under section 30142 of this title.

(4) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe the contents of an application for an exemption.

(e) EMERGENCY VEHICLES.—(1) In this subsection, "emergency vehicle" means an automobile manufactured primarily for use—

(A) as an ambulance or combination ambulance-hearse;

(B) by the United States Government or a State or local government for law enforcement; or

(C) for other emergency uses prescribed by regulation by the Secretary of Transportation.

(2) A manufacturer may elect to have the fuel economy of an emergency vehicle excluded in applying a fuel economy standard under subsection (a), (b), (c), or (d) of this section. The election is made by providing written notice to the Secretary of Transportation and to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(f) CONSIDERATIONS ON DECISIONS ON MAXIMUM FEASIBLE AVERAGE FUEL ECONOMY.—When deciding maximum feasible average fuel economy under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider technological feasibility, economic practicability, the effect of other motor vehicle standards of the Government on fuel economy, and the need of the United States to conserve energy.

(g) REQUIREMENTS FOR OTHER AMENDMENTS.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations amending an average fuel economy standard prescribed under subsection (a) or (d) of this section if the amended standard meets the requirements of subsection (a) or (d), as appropriate.

(2) When the Secretary of Transportation prescribes an amendment under this section that makes an average fuel economy standard more stringent, the Secretary shall prescribe the amendment (and submit the amendment to Congress when required under subsection (c)(2) of this section) at least 18 months before the beginning of the model year to which the amendment applies.

(h) LIMITATIONS.—In carrying out subsections (c), (f), and (g) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation—

(1) may not consider the fuel economy of dedicated automobiles; and

(2) shall consider dual fueled automobiles to be operated only on gasoline or diesel fuel.

(i) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of Energy in carrying out this section and section 32903 of this title.

(j) SECRETARY OF ENERGY COMMENTS.—(1) Before issuing a notice proposing to prescribe or amend an average fuel economy standard under subsection (a), (c), or (g) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall give the Secretary of Energy at least 10 days from the receipt of the notice during which the Secretary of Energy may, if the Secretary of Energy concludes that the proposed standard would adversely affect the conservation goals of the Secretary of Energy, provide written comments to the Secretary of Transportation about the impact of the standard on those goals. To the extent the Secretary of Transportation does not revise a proposed standard to take into account comments of the Secretary of Energy on any adverse impact of the standard, the Secretary of Transportation shall include those comments in the notice.

(2) Before taking final action on a standard or an exemption from a standard under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall notify the Secretary of Energy and provide the Secretary of Energy a reasonable time to comment.

§32903. Credits for exceeding average fuel economy standards

(a) EARNING AND PERIOD FOR APPLYING CREDITS.—When the average fuel economy of passenger automobiles manufactured by a manufacturer in a particular model year exceeds an applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(b)–(d) of this title (determined by the Secretary of Transportation without regard to credits under this section), the manufacturer earns credits. The credits may be applied to—

(1) any of the 3 consecutive model years immediately before the model year for which the credits are earned; and

(2) to the extent not used under clause (1) of this subsection, any of the 3 consecutive model years immediately after the model year for which the credits are earned.

(b) PERIOD OF AVAILABILITY AND PLAN FOR FUTURE CREDITS.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, credits under this section are available to a manufacturer at the end of the model year in which earned.

(2)(A) Before the end of a model year, if a manufacturer has reason to believe that its average fuel economy for passenger automobiles will be less than the applicable standard for that model year, the manufacturer may submit a plan to the Secretary of Transportation demonstrating that the manufacturer will earn sufficient credits under this section within the next 3 model years to allow the manufacturer to meet that standard for the model year involved. Unless the Secretary finds that the manufacturer is unlikely to earn sufficient credits under the plan, the Secretary shall approve the plan. Those credits are available for the model year involved if—

(i) the Secretary approves the plan; and

(ii) the manufacturer earns those credits as provided by the plan.

(B) If the average fuel economy of a manufacturer is less than the applicable standard under section 32902(b)–(d) of this title after applying credits under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall notify the manufacturer and give the manufacturer a reasonable time (of at least 60 days) to submit a plan.

(c) DETERMINING NUMBER OF CREDITS.—The number of credits a manufacturer earns under this section equals the product of—

(1) the number of tenths of a mile a gallon by which the average fuel economy of the passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer in the model year in which the credits are earned exceeds the applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(b)–(d) of this title; times

(2) the number of passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer during that model year.

(d) APPLYING CREDITS FOR PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES.—The Secretary of Transportation shall apply credits to a model year on the basis of the number of tenths of a mile a gallon by which the manufacturer involved was below the applicable average fuel economy standard for that model year and the number of passenger automobiles manufactured that model year by the manufacturer. Credits applied to a model year are no longer available for another model year. Before applying credits, the Secretary shall give the manufacturer written notice and reasonable opportunity to comment.

(e) APPLYING CREDITS FOR NON-PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES.—Credits for a manufacturer of automobiles that are not passenger automobiles are earned and applied to a model year in which the average fuel economy of that class of automobiles is below the applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(a) of this title, to the same extent and in the same way as provided in this section for passenger automobiles.

(f) REFUND OF COLLECTED PENALTY.—When a civil penalty has been collected under this chapter from a manufacturer that has earned credits under this section, the Secretary of the Treasury shall refund to the manufacturer the amount of the penalty to the extent the penalty is attributable to credits available under this section.

§32904. Calculation of average fuel economy

(a) METHOD OF CALCULATION.—(1) The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall calculate the average fuel economy of a manufacturer subject to—

(A) section 32902(a) of this title in a way prescribed by the Administrator; and

(B) section 32902(b)–(d) of this title by dividing—

(i) the number of passenger automobiles manufactured by the manufacturer in a model year; by

(ii) the sum of the fractions obtained by dividing the number of passenger automobiles of each model manufactured by the manufacturer in that model year by the fuel economy measured for that model.

(2)(A) In this paragraph, "electric vehicle" means a vehicle powered primarily by an electric motor drawing electrical current from a portable source.

(B) If a manufacturer manufactures an electric vehicle, the Administrator shall include in the calculation of average fuel economy under paragraph (1) of this subsection equivalent petroleum based fuel economy values determined by the Secretary of Energy for various classes of electric vehicles. The Secretary shall review those values each year and determine and propose necessary revisions based on the following factors:

(i) the approximate electrical energy efficiency of the vehicle, considering the kind of vehicle and the mission and weight of the vehicle.

(ii) the national average electrical generation and transmission efficiencies.

(iii) the need of the United States to conserve all forms of energy and the relative scarcity and value to the United States of all fuel used to generate electricity.

(iv) the specific patterns of use of electric vehicles compared to petroleum-fueled vehicles.

(b) SEPARATE CALCULATIONS FOR PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES MANUFACTURED DOMESTICALLY AND NOT DOMESTICALLY.—(1) In this subsection—

(A) a passenger automobile is deemed to be manufactured domestically in a model year if at least 75 percent of the cost to the manufacturer is attributable to value added in the United States or Canada, unless the assembly of the automobile is completed in Canada and the automobile is imported into the United States more than 30 days after the end of the model year; and

(B) the fuel economy of a passenger automobile that is not manufactured domestically is deemed to be equal to the average fuel economy of all passenger automobiles manufactured by the same manufacturer that are not manufactured domestically.

(2)(A) Except as provided in paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection, the Administrator shall make separate calculations under subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section for—

(i) passenger automobiles manufactured domestically by a manufacturer (or included in this category under paragraph (3) of this subsection); and

(ii) passenger automobiles not manufactured domestically by that manufacturer (or excluded from this category under paragraph (3) of this subsection).

(B) Passenger automobiles described in subparagraph (A)(i) and (ii) of this paragraph are deemed to be manufactured by separate manufacturers under this chapter.

(3)(A) A manufacturer may submit to the Secretary of Transportation for approval a plan, including supporting material, stating the actions and the deadlines for taking the actions, that will ensure that the model or models referred to in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph will be manufactured domestically before the end of the 4th model year covered by the plan. The Secretary promptly shall consider and act on the plan. The Secretary shall approve the plan unless—

(i) the Secretary finds that the plan is inadequate to meet the requirements of this paragraph; or

(ii) the manufacturer previously has submitted a plan approved by the Secretary under this paragraph.

(B) If the plan is approved, the Administrator shall include under paragraph (2)(A)(i) and exclude under paragraph (2)(A)(ii) of this subsection, for each of the 4 model years covered by the plan, not more than 150,000 passenger automobiles manufactured by that manufacturer but not qualifying as domestically manufactured if—

(i) the model or models involved previously have not been manufactured domestically;

(ii) at least 50 percent of the cost to the manufacturer of each of the automobiles is attributable to value added in the United States or Canada;

(iii) the automobiles, if their assembly was completed in Canada, are imported into the United States not later than 30 days after the end of the model year; and

(iv) the model or models are manufactured domestically before the end of the 4th model year covered by the plan.

(4)(A) A manufacturer may file with the Secretary of Transportation a petition for an exemption from the requirement of separate calculations under paragraph (2)(A) of this subsection if the manufacturer began automobile production or assembly in the United States—

(i) after December 22, 1975, and before May 1, 1980; or

(ii) after April 30, 1980, if the manufacturer has engaged in the production or assembly in the United States for at least one model year ending before January 1, 1986.

(B) The Secretary of Transportation shall grant the exemption unless the Secretary finds that the exemption would result in reduced employment in the United States related to motor vehicle manufacturing during the period of the exemption. An exemption under this paragraph is effective for 5 model years or, if requested by the manufacturer, a longer period provided by the Secretary in the order granting the exemption. The exemption applies to passenger automobiles manufactured by that manufacturer during the period of the exemption.

(C) Before granting an exemption, the Secretary of Transportation shall provide notice of, and reasonable opportunity for, written or oral comment about the petition. The period for comment shall end not later than 60 days after the petition is filed, except that the Secretary may extend the period for not more than another 30 days. The Secretary shall decide whether to grant or deny the exemption, and publish notice of the decision in the Federal Register, not later than 90 days after the petition is filed, except that the Secretary may extend the time for decision to a later date (not later than 150 days after the petition is filed) if the Secretary publishes notice of, and reasons for, the extension in the Federal Register. If the Secretary does not make a decision within the time provided in this subparagraph, the petition is deemed to have been granted. Not later than 30 days after the end of the decision period, the Secretary shall submit a written statement of the reasons for not making a decision to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives.

(5)(A) A person adversely affected by a decision of the Secretary of Transportation granting or denying an exemption may file, not later than 30 days after publication of the notice of the decision, a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. That court has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decision and to affirm, remand, or set aside the decision under section 706(2)(A)–(D) of title 5.

(B) A judgment of the court under this subparagraph may be reviewed by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. Application for review by the Supreme Court must be made not later than 30 days after entry of the court's judgment.

(C) A decision of the Secretary of Transportation on a petition for an exemption under this paragraph may be reviewed administratively or judicially only as provided in this paragraph.

(6) Notwithstanding section 32903 of this title, during a model year when an exemption under this paragraph is effective for a manufacturer—

(A) credit may not be earned under section 32903(a) of this title by the manufacturer; and

(B) credit may not be made available under section 32903(b)(2) of this title for the manufacturer.

(c) TESTING AND CALCULATION PROCEDURES.—The Administrator shall measure fuel economy for each model and calculate average fuel economy for a manufacturer under testing and calculation procedures prescribed by the Administrator. However, except under section 32908 of this title, the Administrator shall use the same procedures for passenger automobiles the Administrator used for model year 1975 (weighted 55 percent urban cycle and 45 percent highway cycle), or procedures that give comparable results. A measurement of fuel economy or a calculation of average fuel economy (except under section 32908) shall be rounded off to the nearest .1 of a mile a gallon. The Administrator shall decide on the quantity of other fuel that is equivalent to one gallon of gasoline. To the extent practicable, fuel economy tests shall be carried out with emissions tests under section 206 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7525).

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE OF PROCEDURE OR AMENDMENT.—The Administrator shall prescribe a procedure under this section, or an amendment (except a technical or clerical amendment) in a procedure, at least 12 months before the beginning of the model year to which the procedure or amendment applies.

(e) REPORTS AND CONSULTATION.—The Administrator shall report measurements and calculations under this section to the Secretary of Transportation and shall consult and coordinate with the Secretary in carrying out this section.

§32905. Manufacturing incentives for alternative fuel automobiles

(a) DEDICATED AUTOMOBILES.—Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section or section 32904(a)(2) of this title, for any model of dedicated automobile manufactured by a manufacturer after model year 1992, the fuel economy measured for that model shall be based on the fuel content of the alternative fuel used to operate the automobile. A gallon of a liquid alternative fuel used to operate a dedicated automobile is deemed to contain .15 gallon of fuel.

(b) DUAL FUELED AUTOMOBILES.—Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section or section 32904(a)(2) of this title, for any model of dual fueled automobile manufactured by a manufacturer in model years 1993–2004, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall measure the fuel economy for that model by dividing 1.0 by the sum of—

(1) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under section 32904(c) of this title when operating the model on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(2) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under subsection (a) of this section when operating the model on alternative fuel.

(c) GASEOUS FUEL DEDICATED AUTOMOBILES.—For any model of gaseous fuel dedicated automobile manufactured by a manufacturer after model year 1992, the Administrator shall measure the fuel economy for that model based on the fuel content of the gaseous fuel used to operate the automobile. One hundred cubic feet of natural gas is deemed to contain .823 gallon equivalent of natural gas. The Secretary of Transportation shall determine the appropriate gallon equivalent of other gaseous fuels. A gallon equivalent of gaseous fuel is deemed to have a fuel content of .15 gallon of fuel.

(d) GASEOUS FUEL DUAL FUELED AUTOMOBILES.—For any model of gaseous fuel dual fueled automobile manufactured by a manufacturer in model years 1993–2004, the Administrator shall measure the fuel economy for that model by dividing 1.0 by the sum of—

(1) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under section 32904(c) of this title when operating the model on gasoline or diesel fuel; and

(2) .5 divided by the fuel economy measured under subsection (c) of this section when operating the model on gaseous fuel.

(e) FUEL ECONOMY CALCULATIONS.—The Administrator shall calculate the manufacturer's average fuel economy under section 32904(a)(1) of this title for each model described under subsections (a)–(d) of this section by using as the denominator the fuel economy measured for each model under subsections (a)–(d).

(f) EXTENDING APPLICATION OF SUBSECTIONS (b) AND (d).—Not later than December 31, 2001, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) extend by regulation the application of subsections (b) and (d) of this section for not more than 4 consecutive model years immediately after model year 2004 and explain the basis on which the extension is granted; or

(2) publish a notice explaining the reasons for not extending the application of subsections (b) and (d) of this section.

(g) STUDY AND REPORT.—Not later than September 30, 2000, the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy and the Administrator, shall complete a study of the success of the policy of subsections (b) and (d) of this title, and submit to the Committees on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report on the results of the study, including preliminary conclusions on whether the application of subsections (b) and (d) should be extended for up to 4 more model years. The study and conclusions shall consider—

(1) the availability to the public of alternative fueled automobiles and alternative fuel;

(2) energy conservation and security;

(3) environmental considerations; and

(4) other relevant factors.

§32906. Maximum fuel economy increase for alternative fuel automobiles

(a) MAXIMUM INCREASES.—(1)(A) For each of the model years 1993–2004 for each category of automobile (except an electric automobile), the maximum increase in average fuel economy for a manufacturer attributable to dual fueled automobiles is 1.2 miles a gallon.

(B) If the application of section 32905(b) and (d) of this title is extended under section 32905(f) of this title, for each category of automobile (except an electric automobile) the maximum increase in average fuel economy for a manufacturer for each of the model years 2005–2008 attributable to dual fueled automobiles is .9 mile a gallon.

(2) In applying paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall determine the increase in a manufacturer's average fuel economy attributable to dual fueled automobiles by subtracting from the manufacturer's average fuel economy calculated under section 32905(e) of this title the number equal to what the manufacturer's average fuel economy would be if it were calculated by the formula in section 32904(a)(1) of this title by including as the denominator for each model of dual fueled automobile the fuel economy when the automobiles are operated on gasoline or diesel fuel. If the increase attributable to dual fueled automobiles for any model year described—

(A) in paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection is more than 1.2 miles a gallon, the limitation in paragraph (1)(A) applies; and

(B) in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection is more than .9 mile a gallon, the limitation in paragraph (1)(B) applies.

(b) Offsets.—Notwithstanding this section and sections 32901(c) and 32905 of this title, if the Secretary of Transportation reduces the average fuel economy standard for passenger automobiles for any model year below 27.5 miles a gallon, an increase in average fuel economy for passenger automobiles of more than .7 mile a gallon to which a manufacturer of dual fueled automobiles would otherwise be entitled is reduced by an amount equal to the amount of the reduction in the standard. However, the increase may not be reduced to less than .7 mile a gallon.

§32907. Reports and tests of manufacturers

(a) Manufacturer Reports.—(1) A manufacturer shall report to the Secretary of Transportation on—

(A) whether the manufacturer will comply with an applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902 of this title for the model year for which the report is made;

(B) the actions the manufacturer has taken or intends to take to comply with the standard; and

(C) other information the Secretary requires by regulation.

(2) A manufacturer shall submit a report under paragraph (1) of this subsection during the 30 days—

(A) before the beginning of each model year; and

(B) beginning on the 180th day of the model year.

(3) When a manufacturer decides that actions reported under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection are not sufficient to ensure compliance with that standard, the manufacturer shall report to the Secretary additional actions the manufacturer intends to take to comply with the standard and include a statement about whether those actions are sufficient to ensure compliance.

(4) This subsection does not apply to a manufacturer for a model year for which the manufacturer is subject to an alternative average fuel economy standard under section 32902(d) of this title.

(b) Records, Reports, Tests, Information, and Inspection.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to carry out this chapter, a manufacturer shall keep records, make reports, conduct tests, and provide items and information. On request and display of proper credentials, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary or Administrator may inspect automobiles and records of the manufacturer. An inspection shall be made at a reasonable time and in a reasonable way.

(2) The district courts of the United States may—

(A) issue an order enforcing a requirement or request under paragraph (1) of this subsection; and

(B) punish a failure to obey the order as a contempt of court.

§32908. Fuel economy information

(a) Definitions.—In this section—

(1) "automobile" includes an automobile rated at not more than 8,500 pounds gross vehicle weight regardless of whether the Secretary of Transportation has applied this chapter to the automobile under section 32901(a)(3)(B) of this title.

(2) "dealer" means a person residing or located in a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States, and engaged in the sale or distribution of new automobiles to the first person (except a dealer buying as a dealer) that buys the automobile in good faith other than for resale.

(b) Labeling Requirements and Contents.—(1) Under regulations of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, a manufacturer of automobiles shall attach a label to a prominent place on each automobile manufactured in a model year. The dealer shall maintain the label. The label shall contain the following information:

(A) the fuel economy of the automobile.

(B) the estimated annual fuel cost of operating the automobile.

(C) the range of fuel economy of comparable automobiles of all manufacturers.

(D) a statement that a booklet is available from the dealer to assist in making a comparison of fuel economy of other automobiles manufactured by all manufacturers in that model year.

(E) the amount of the automobile fuel efficiency tax imposed on the sale of the automobile under section 4064 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 4064).

(F) other information required or authorized by the Administrator that is related to the information required by clauses (A)-(D) of this paragraph.

(2) The Administrator may allow a manufacturer to comply with this subsection by—

(A) disclosing the information on the label required under section 3 of the Automobile Information Disclosure Act (15 U.S.C. 1232); and

(B) including the statement required by paragraph (1)(E) of this subsection at a time and in a way that takes into account special circumstances or characteristics.

(3) For dedicated automobiles manufactured after model year 1992, the fuel economy of those automobiles under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection is the fuel economy for those automobiles when operated on alternative fuel, measured under section 32905(a) or (c) of this title, multiplied by .15. Each label required under paragraph (1) of this subsection for dual fueled automobiles shall—

(A) indicate the fuel economy of the automobile when operated on gasoline or diesel fuel;

(B) clearly identify the automobile as a dual fueled automobile;

(C) clearly identify the fuels on which the automobile may be operated; and

(D) contain a statement informing the consumer that the additional information required by subsection (c)(2) of this section is published and distributed by the Secretary of Energy.

(c) Fuel Economy Information Booklet.—(1) The Administrator shall prepare the booklet referred to in subsection (b)(1)(D) of this section. The booklet—

(A) shall be simple and readily understandable;

(B) shall contain information on fuel economy and estimated annual fuel costs of operating automobiles manufactured in each model year; and

(C) may contain information on geographical or other differences in estimated annual fuel costs.

(2)(A) For dual fueled automobiles manufactured after model year 1992, the booklet published under paragraph (1) shall contain additional information on—

(i) the energy efficiency and cost of operation of those automobiles when operated on gasoline or diesel fuel as compared to those automobiles when operated on alternative fuel; and

(ii) the driving range of those automobiles when operated on gasoline or diesel fuel as compared to those automobiles when operated on alternative fuel.

(B) For dual fueled automobiles, the booklet published under paragraph (1) also shall contain—

(i) information on the miles a gallon achieved by the automobiles when operated on alternative fuel; and

(ii) a statement explaining how the information made available under this paragraph can be expected to change when the automobile is operated on mixtures of alternative fuel and gasoline or diesel fuel.

(3) The Secretary of Energy shall publish and distribute the booklet. The Administrator shall prescribe regulations requiring dealers to make the booklet available to prospective buyers.

(d) Disclosure.—A disclosure about fuel economy or estimated annual fuel costs under this section does not establish a warranty under a law of the United States or a State.

(e) Violations.—A violation of subsection (b) of this section is—

(1) a violation of section 3 of the Automobile Information Disclosure Act (15 U.S.C. 1232); and

(2) an unfair or deceptive act or practice in or affecting commerce under the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.), except sections 5(m) and 18 (15 U.S.C. 45(m), 57a).

(f) Consultation.—The Administrator shall consult with the Federal Trade Commission and the Secretaries of Transportation and Energy in carrying out this section.

§32909. Judicial review of regulations

(a) Filing and Venue.—(1) A person that may be adversely affected by a regulation prescribed in carrying out section 32901–32904 or 32908 of this title may apply for review of the regulation by filing a petition for review in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business.

(2) A person adversely affected by a regulation prescribed under section 32912(c)(1) of this title may apply for review of the regulation by filing a petition for review in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business.

(b) Time for Filing and Judicial Procedures.—The petition must be filed not later than 59 days after the regulation is prescribed, except that a petition for review of a regulation prescribing an amendment of a standard submitted to Congress under section 32902(c)(2) of this title must be filed not later than 59 days after the end of the 60-day period referred to in section 32902(c)(2). The clerk of the court shall send immediately a copy of the petition to the Secretary of Transportation or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, whoever prescribed the regulation. The Secretary or the Administrator shall file with the court a record of the proceeding in which the regulation was prescribed.

(c) Additional Proceedings.—(1) When reviewing a regulation under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the court, on request of the petitioner, may order the Secretary or the Administrator to receive additional submissions if the court is satisfied the additional submissions are material and there were reasonable grounds for not presenting the submissions in the proceeding before the Secretary or Administrator.

(2) The Secretary or the Administrator may amend or set aside the regulation, or prescribe a new regulation because of the additional submissions presented. The Secretary or Administrator shall file an amended or new regulation and the additional submissions with the court. The court shall review a changed or new regulation.

(d) SUPREME COURT REVIEW AND ADDITIONAL REMEDIES.—A judgment of a court under this section may be reviewed only by the Supreme Court under section 1254 of title 28. A remedy under subsections (a)(1) and (c) of this section is in addition to any other remedies provided by law.

§32910. Administrative

(a) GENERAL POWERS.—(1) In carrying out this chapter, the Secretary of Transportation or the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency may—

(A) inspect and copy records of any person at reasonable times;

(B) order a person to file written reports or answers to specific questions, including reports or answers under oath; and

(C) conduct hearings, administer oaths, take testimony, and subpena witnesses and records the Secretary or Administrator considers advisable.

(2) A witness summoned under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection is entitled to the same fee and mileage the witness would have been paid in a court of the United States.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS TO ENFORCE.—A civil action to enforce a subpena or order of the Secretary or Administrator under subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which the proceeding by the Secretary or Administrator was conducted. The court may punish a failure to obey an order of the court to comply with the subpena or order of the Secretary or Administrator as a contempt of court.

(c) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION.—The Secretary and the Administrator each shall disclose information obtained under this chapter (except information obtained under section 32904(c) of this title) under section 552 of title 5. However, the Secretary or Administrator may withhold information under section 552(b)(4) of title 5 only if the Secretary or Administrator decides that disclosure of the information would cause significant competitive damage. A matter referred to in section 552(b)(4) and relevant to an administrative or judicial proceeding under this chapter may be disclosed in that proceeding. A measurement or calculation under section 32904(c) of this title shall be disclosed under section 552 of title 5 without regard to section 552(b).

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator may prescribe regulations to carry out duties of the Administrator under this chapter.

§32911. Compliance

(a) GENERAL.—A person commits a violation if the person fails to comply with this chapter and regulations and standards prescribed and orders issued under this chapter (except sections 32902, 32903, 32908(b), and 32917(b) and regulations and standards prescribed and orders issued under those sections). The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a proceeding, with an opportunity for a hearing on the record, to decide whether a person has committed a violation. Any interested person may participate in a proceeding under this subsection.

(b) AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS.—A manufacturer of automobiles commits a violation if the manufacturer fails to comply with an applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902 of this title. Compliance is determined after considering credits available to the manufacturer under section 32903 of this title. If average fuel economy calculations under section 32904(c) of this title indicate that a manufacturer has violated this subsection, the Secretary shall conduct a proceeding, with an opportunity for a hearing on the record, to decide whether a violation has been committed. The Secretary may not conduct the proceeding if further measurements of fuel economy, further calculations of average fuel economy, or other information indicates a violation has not been committed. The results of the measurements and calculations and the information shall be published in the Federal Register. Any interested person may participate in a proceeding under this subsection.

§32912. Civil penalties

(a) GENERAL PENALTY.—A person that violates section 32911(a) of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation. A separate violation occurs for each day the violation continues.

(b) PENALTY FOR MANUFACTURER VIOLATIONS OF FUEL ECONOMY STANDARDS.—Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a manufacturer that violates a standard prescribed for a model year under section 32902 of this title is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of $5 multiplied by each .1 of a mile a gallon by which the applicable average fuel economy standard under that section exceeds the average fuel economy—

(1) calculated under section 32904(a)(1)(A) or (B) of this title for automobiles to which the standard applies manufactured by the manufacturer during the model year;

(2) multiplied by the number of those automobiles; and

(3) reduced by the credits available to the manufacturer under section 32903 of this title for the model year.

(c) HIGHER PENALTY AMOUNTS.—(1)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe by regulation a higher amount for each .1 of a mile a gallon to be used in calculating a civil penalty under subsection (b) of this section, if the Secretary decides that the increase in the penalty—

(i) will result in, or substantially further, substantial energy conservation for automobiles in model years in which the increased penalty may be imposed; and

(ii) will not have a substantial deleterious impact on the economy of the United States, a State, or a region of a State.

(B) The amount prescribed under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph may not be more than $10 for each .1 of a mile a gallon.

(C) The Secretary may make a decision under subparagraph (A)(ii) of this paragraph only when the Secretary decides that it is likely that the increase in the penalty will not—

(i) cause a significant increase in unemployment in a State or a region of a State;

(ii) adversely affect competition; or

(iii) cause a significant increase in automobile imports.

(D) A higher amount prescribed under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph is effective for the model year beginning at least 18 months after the regulation stating the higher amount becomes final.

(2) The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a proposed regulation under this subsection and a statement of the basis for the regulation and provide each manufacturer of automobiles a copy of the proposed regulation and the statement. The Secretary shall provide a period of at least 45 days for written public comments on the proposed regulation. The Secretary shall submit a copy of the proposed regulation to the Federal Trade Commission and request the Commission to comment on the proposed regulation within that period. After that period, the Secretary shall give interested persons and the Commission an opportunity at a public hearing to present oral information, views, and arguments and to direct questions about disputed issues of material fact to—

(A) other interested persons making oral presentations;

(B) employees and contractors of the Government that made written comments or an oral presentation or participated in the development or consideration of the proposed regulation; and

(C) experts and consultants that provided information to a person that the person includes, or refers to, in an oral presentation.

(3) The Secretary may restrict the questions of an interested person and the Commission when the Secretary decides that the questions are duplicative or not likely to result in a timely and effective resolution of the issues. A transcript shall be kept of a public hearing under this subsection. A copy of the transcript and written comments shall be available to the public at the cost of reproduction.

(4) The Secretary shall publish a regulation prescribed under this subsection in the Federal Register with the decisions required under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(5) An officer or employee of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government violates section 1905 of title 18 by disclosing, except in an in camera proceeding by the Secretary or a court, information—

(A) provided to the Secretary or the court during consideration or review of a regulation prescribed under this subsection; and

(B) decided by the Secretary to be confidential under section 11(d) of the Energy Supply and Environmental Coordination Act of 1974 (15 U.S.C. 796(d)).

(d) WRITTEN NOTICE REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall impose a penalty under this section by written notice.

§32913. Compromising and remitting civil penalties

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY AND LIMITATIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may compromise or remit the amount of a civil penalty imposed under section 32912(a) or (b) of this title. However, the amount of a penalty imposed under section 32912(b) may be compromised or remitted only to the extent—

(1) necessary to prevent the insolvency or bankruptcy of the manufacturer of automobiles;

(2) the manufacturer shows that the violation was caused by an act of God, a strike, or a fire; or

(3) the Federal Trade Commission certifies under subsection (b)(1) of this section that a reduction in the penalty is necessary to prevent a substantial lessening of competition.

(b) PENALTY REDUCTION BY COMMISSION.—(1) A manufacturer liable for a civil penalty under section 32912(b) of this title may apply to the Commission for a certification that the penalty should be reduced to prevent a substantial lessening of competition in the segment of the motor vehicle industry subject to the standard that was violated. The Commission shall make the certification when it finds that reduction is necessary to prevent the lessening. The Commission shall state in the certification the maximum amount by which the penalty may be reduced.

(2) An application under this subsection must be made not later than 30 days after the Secretary decides that the manufacturer has violated section 32911(b) of this title. To the maximum extent practicable, the Commission shall make a decision on an application by the 90th day after the application is filed. A proceeding under this subsection may not delay the manufacturer's liability for the penalty for more than 90 days after the application is filed.

(3) When a civil penalty is collected in a civil action under this chapter before a decision of the Commission under this subsection is final, the payment shall be paid to the court in which the action was brought. The court shall deposit the payment in the general fund of the Treasury on the 90th day after the decision of the Commission becomes final. When the court is holding payment of a penalty reduced under subsection

(a)(3) of this section, the Secretary shall direct the court to remit the appropriate amount of the penalty to the manufacturer.

§32914. Collecting civil penalties

(a) CIVIL ACTIONS.—If a person does not pay a civil penalty after it becomes a final order of the Secretary of Transportation or a judgment of a court of appeals of the United States for a circuit, the Attorney General shall bring a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States to collect the penalty. The validity and appropriateness of the final order imposing the penalty is not reviewable in the action.

(b) PRIORITY OF CLAIMS.—A claim of a creditor against a bankrupt or insolvent manufacturer of automobiles has priority over a claim of the United States Government against the manufacturer for a civil penalty under section 32912(b) of this title when the creditor's claim is for credit extended before a final judgment (without regard to section 32913(b)(1) and (2) of this title) in an action to collect under subsection (a) of this section.

§32915. Appealing civil penalties

Any interested person may appeal a decision of the Secretary of Transportation to impose a civil penalty under section 32912(a) or (b) of this title, or of the Federal Trade Commission under section 32913(b)(1) of this title, in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit or in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the person resides or has its principal place of business. A person appealing a decision must file a notice of appeal with the court not later than 30 days after the decision and, at the same time, send a copy of the notice by certified mail to the Secretary or the Commission. The Secretary or the Commission promptly shall file with the court a certified copy of the record of the proceeding in which the decision was made.

§32916. Reports to Congress

(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than January 15 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to each House of Congress, and publish in the Federal Register, a report on the review by the Secretary of average fuel economy standards prescribed under this chapter.

(b) JOINT EXAMINATIONS AFTER GRANTING EXEMPTIONS.—(1) After an exemption has been granted under section 32904(b)(4) of this title, the Secretaries of Transportation and Labor shall conduct annually a joint examination of the extent to which section 32904(b)(4)—

(A) achieves the purposes of this chapter;

(B) improves fuel efficiency (thereby facilitating conservation of petroleum and reducing petroleum imports);

(C) has promoted employment in the United States related to automobile manufacturing;

(D) has not caused unreasonable harm to the automobile manufacturing sector in the United States; and

(E) has permitted manufacturers that have assembled passenger automobiles deemed to be manufactured domestically under section 32904(b)(1)(A) of this title thereafter to assemble in the United States passenger automobiles of the same model that have less than 75 percent of their value added in the United States or Canada, together with the reasons.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall include the results of the examination under paragraph (1) of this subsection in each report submitted under subsection (a) of this section more than 180 days after an exemption has been granted under section 32904(b)(4) of this title, or submit the results of the examination directly to Congress before the report is submitted when circumstances warrant.

§32917. Standards for executive agency automobiles

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "executive agency" has the same meaning given that term in section 105 of title 5.

(b) FLEET AVERAGE FUEL ECONOMY.—(1) The President shall prescribe regulations that require passenger automobiles leased for at least 60 consecutive days or bought by executive agencies in a fiscal year to achieve a fleet average fuel economy (determined under paragraph (2) of this subsection) for that year of at least the greater of—

(A) 18 miles a gallon; or

(B) the applicable average fuel economy standard under section 32902(b) or (c) of this title for the model year that includes January 1 of that fiscal year.

(2) Fleet average fuel economy is—

(A) the total number of passenger automobiles leased for at least 60 consecutive days or bought by executive agencies in a fiscal year (except automobiles designed for combat-related missions, law enforcement work, or emergency rescue work); divided by

(B) the sum of the fractions obtained by dividing the number of automobiles of each model leased or bought by the fuel economy of that model.

§32918. Preemption

(a) GENERAL.—When an average fuel economy standard prescribed under this chapter is in effect, a State or a political subdivision of a State may not adopt or enforce a law or regulation related to fuel economy standards or average fuel economy standards for automobiles covered by an average fuel economy standard under this chapter.

(b) REQUIREMENTS MUST BE IDENTICAL.—When a requirement under section 32908 of this title is in effect, a State or a political subdivision of a State may adopt or enforce a law or regulation on disclosure of fuel economy or fuel operating costs for an automobile covered by section 32908 only if the law or regulation is identical to that requirement.

(c) STATE AND POLITICAL SUBDIVISION AUTOMOBILES.—A State or a political subdivision of a State may prescribe requirements for fuel economy for automobiles obtained for its own use.

§33101. Definitions

In this chapter—

(1) "chop shop" means a building, lot, facility, or other structure or premise at which at least one person engages in receiving, concealing, destroying, disassembling, dismantling, reassembling, or storing a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle part that has been unlawfully obtained—

(A) to alter, counterfeit, deface, destroy, disguise, falsify, forge, obliterate, or remove the identity of the vehicle or part, including the vehicle identification number or a derivative of that number; and

(B) to distribute, sell, or dispose of the vehicle or part in interstate or foreign commerce.

(2) "covered major part" means a major part selected under sections 33102(c)(1) and 33104 of this title for coverage by the vehicle theft prevention standard prescribed under section 33102 or 33103.

(3) "existing line" means a line introduced into commerce before January 1, 1990.

(4) "first purchaser" means the person making the first purchase other than for resale.

(5) "line" means a name that a manufacturer of motor vehicles applies to a group of motor vehicle models of the same make that have the same body or chassis, or otherwise are similar in construction or design.

(6) "major part" means—

(A) the engine;

(B) the transmission;

(C) each door to the passenger compartment;

(D) the hood;

(E) the grille;

(F) each bumper;

(G) each front fender;

(H) the deck lid, tailgate, or hatchback;

(I) each rear quarter panel;

(J) the trunk floor pan;

(K) the frame or, for a unitized body, the supporting structure serving as the frame; and

(L) any other part of a passenger motor vehicle that the Secretary of Transportation by regulation specifies as comparable in design or function to any of the parts listed in subclauses (A)-(K) of this clause.

(7) "major replacement part" means a major part that is—

(A) an original major part in or on a completed motor vehicle and customized or modified after manufacture of the vehicle but before the time of its delivery to the first purchaser; or

(B) not installed in or on a motor vehicle at the time of its delivery to the first purchaser and the equitable or legal title to the vehicle has not been transferred to a first purchaser.

(8) "model year" has the same meaning given that term in section 32901(a) of this title.

(9) "new line" means a line introduced into commerce after December 31, 1989.

(10) "passenger motor vehicle" includes a multipurpose passenger vehicle or light duty truck when that vehicle or truck is rated at not more than 6,000 pounds gross vehicle weight.

(11) "vehicle theft prevention standard" means a minimum performance standard for identifying major parts of new motor vehicles and major replacement parts by inscribing or affixing numbers or symbols on those parts.

§33102. Theft prevention standard for high theft lines

(a) GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation by regulation shall prescribe a vehicle theft prevention standard that conforms to the requirements of this chapter. The standard shall apply to—

(A) covered major parts that manufacturers install in passenger motor vehicles in lines designated under section 33104 of this title as high theft lines; and

(B) major replacement parts for the major parts described in clause (A) of this paragraph.

(2) The standard may apply only to—

(A) major parts that manufacturers install in passenger motor vehicles having a model year designation later than the calendar year in which the standard takes effect; and

(B) major replacement parts manufactured after the standard takes effect.

(b) STANDARD REQUIREMENTS.—The standard shall be practicable and provide relevant objective criteria.

(c) LIMITATIONS ON MAJOR PART AND REPLACEMENT PART STANDARDS.—(1) For a major part installed by the manufacturer of the motor vehicle, the standard may not require a part to have more than one identification.

(2) For a major replacement part, the standard may not require—

(A) identification of a part not designed as a replacement for a major part required to be identified under the standard; or

(B) the inscribing or affixing of identification except a symbol identifying the manufacturer and a common symbol identifying the part as a major replacement part.

(d) RECORDS AND REPORTS.—This chapter does not authorize the Secretary to require a person to keep records or make reports, except as provided in sections 33104(c), 33106(c), 33108(a), and 33112 of this title.

§33103. Theft prevention standard for other lines

(a) GENERAL.—Not later than October 25, 1994, the Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe a vehicle theft standard that conforms to the requirements of this chapter for covered major parts that manufacturers install in passenger motor vehicles (except light duty trucks) in not more than 50 percent of the lines not designated under section 33104 of this title as high theft lines.

(b) EXTENSION OF APPLICATION.—(1) Not later than 3 years after the standard is prescribed under subsection (a) of this section and based on the finding of the Attorney General under subsection (c) of this section to apply the standard, the Secretary shall apply that standard to covered major parts and major replacement parts for covered parts that manufacturers install in the lines of passenger motor vehicles (except light duty trucks)—

(A) not designated under section 33104 of this title as high theft lines; and

(B) not covered by the standard prescribed under subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The Secretary shall include as part of the regulatory proceeding under this subsection the finding of, and the record developed by, the Attorney General under subsection (c) of this section.

(c) INITIAL REVIEW OF EFFECTIVENESS.—Before the Secretary begins a regulatory proceeding under subsection (b) of this section, the Attorney General shall make a finding that the Secretary shall apply the standard prescribed under subsection (a) of this section unless the Attorney General finds, based on information collected and analyzed under section 33112 of this title and other information the Attorney General develops after providing notice and an opportunity for a public hearing, that applying the standard prescribed in subsection (a) to the remaining lines of passenger motor vehicles (except light duty trucks) not covered by that standard would not substantially inhibit chop shop operations and motor vehicle thefts. The Attorney General also shall consider and include in the record additional costs, effectiveness, competition, and available alternative factors. The Attorney General shall submit to the Secretary the finding and record on which the finding is based.

(d) LONG RANGE REVIEW OF EFFECTIVENESS.—(1) Not later than December 31, 1999, the Attorney General shall make separate findings, after notice and an opportunity for a public hearing, on the following:

(A) whether the application of the standard under subsection (a) or (b) of this subsection, or both, have been effective in substantially inhibiting the operation of chop shops and motor vehicle theft.

(B) whether the anti-theft devices for which the Secretary has granted exemptions under section 33106 of this title are an effective substitute for parts marking in substantially inhibiting motor vehicle theft.

(2)(A) In making the finding under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection, the Attorney General shall—

(i) consider the additional cost, competition, and available alternatives;

(ii) base that finding on information collected and analyzed under section 33112 of this title;

(iii) consider the effectiveness, the extent of use, and the extent to which civil and criminal penalties under section 33115(b) of this title and section 2322 of title 18 on chop shops have been effective in substantially inhibiting operation of chop shops and motor vehicle theft;

(iv) base that finding on the 3-year and 5-year reports issued by the Secretary under section 33113 of this title; and

(v) base that finding on other information the Attorney General develops and includes in the public record.

(B) The Attorney General shall submit a finding under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection promptly to the Secretary. If the Attorney General finds that the application of the standard under subsection (a) or (b) of this section, or both, has not been effective, the Secretary shall issue, not later than 180 days after receiving that finding, an order terminating the standard the Attorney General found was ineffective. The termination is effective for the model year beginning after the order is issued.

(3) In making a finding under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection, the Secretary shall consider the additional cost, competition, and available alternatives. If the Attorney General finds that the anti-theft devices are an effective substitute, the Secretary shall continue to grant exemptions under section 33106 of this title for the model years after model year 2000 at one of the following levels that the Attorney General decides: at the level authorized before October 25, 1992, or at the level provided in section 33106(b)(2)(C) of this title for model year 2000.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE OF STANDARD.—A standard prescribed under this section takes effect at least 6 months after the date the standard is prescribed, except that the Secretary may prescribe an earlier effective date if the Secretary—

(1) decides with good cause that the earlier date is in the public interest; and

(2) publishes the reasons for the decision.

(f) NOTIFICATION OF CONGRESS.—The Secretary and the Attorney General shall inform the appropriate legislative committees of Congress with jurisdiction over this part and section 2322 of title 18 of actions taken or planned under this section.

§33104. Designation of high theft vehicle lines and parts

(a) DESIGNATION, NONAPPLICATION, SELECTION, AND PROCEDURES.—(1) For purposes of the standard under section 33102 of this title, the following are high theft lines:

(A) a passenger motor vehicle line determined under subsection (b) of this section to have had a new passenger motor vehicle theft rate in the 2-year period covering calendar years 1990 and 1991 greater than the median theft rate for all new passenger motor vehicle thefts in that 2-year period.

(B) a passenger motor vehicle line initially introduced into commerce in the United States after December 31, 1989, that is selected under paragraph (3) of this subsection as likely to have a theft rate greater than the median theft rate referred to in clause (A) of this paragraph.

(C) subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection, a passenger motor vehicle line having (for existing lines) or likely to have (for new lines) a theft rate below the median theft rate referred to in clause (A) of this paragraph, if the major parts in the vehicles are selected under paragraph (3) of this subsection as interchangeable with the majority of the major parts that are subject to the standard and are contained in the motor vehicles of a line described in clause (A) or (B) of this paragraph.

(2) The standard may not apply to any major part of a line described in paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection if all the passenger motor vehicles of lines that are, or are likely to be, below the median theft rate, and that contain parts interchangeable with the major parts of the line involved, account (for existing lines), or the Secretary of Transportation determines they are likely to account (for new lines), for more than 90 percent of the total annual production of all lines of that manufacturer containing those interchangeable parts.

(3) The lines, and the major parts of the passenger motor vehicles in those lines, that are to be subject to the standard may be selected by agreement between the manufacturer and the Secretary. If the manufacturer and the Secretary disagree on the selection, the Secretary shall select the lines and parts, after notice to the manufacturer and opportunity for written comment, and subject to the confidentiality requirements of this chapter.

(4) To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall prescribe reasonable procedures designed to ensure that a selection under paragraph (3) of this subsection is made at least 6 months before the first applicable model year beginning after the selection.

(5) A manufacturer may not be required to comply with the standard under a selection under paragraph (3) of this subsection for a model year beginning earlier than 6 months after the date of the selection.

(6) A passenger motor vehicle line subject on October 25, 1992, to parts marking requirements under sections 602 and 603 of the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (Public Law 92–513, 86 Stat. 947), as added by section 101(a) of the Motor Vehicle Theft Law Enforcement Act of 1984 (Public Law 98–547, 98 Stat. 2756), continues to be subject to the requirements of this section and section 33102 of this title unless the line is exempted under section 33106 of this title.

(b) DETERMINING THEFT RATE FOR PASSENGER VEHICLES.—(1) In this subsection, "new passenger motor vehicle thefts", when used in reference to a calendar year, means thefts in the United States in that year of passenger motor vehicles with the same model-year designation as that calendar year.

(2) Under subsection (a) of this section, the theft rate for passenger motor vehicles of a line shall be determined by a fraction—

(A) the numerator of which is the number of new passenger motor vehicle thefts for that line during the 2-year period referred to in subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section; and

(B) the denominator of which is the sum of the respective production volumes of all passenger motor vehicles of that line (as reported to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency under chapter 329 of this title) that are of model years 1990 and 1991 and are distributed for sale in commerce in the United States.

(3) Under subsection (a) of this section, the median theft rate for all new passenger motor vehicle thefts during that 2-year period is the theft rate midway between the highest and the lowest theft rates determined under paragraph (2) of this subsection. If there is an even number of theft rates determined under paragraph (2), the median theft rate is the arithmetic average of the 2 adjoining theft rates midway between the highest and the lowest of those theft rates.

(4) In consultation with the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secretary periodically shall obtain from the most reliable source accurate and timely theft and recovery information and publish the information for review and comment. To the greatest extent possible, the Secretary shall use theft information reported by United States Government, State, and local police. After publication and opportunity for comment, the Secretary shall use the theft information to determine the median theft rate under this subsection. The Secretary and the Director shall take any necessary actions to improve the accuracy, reliability, and timeliness of the information, including ensuring that vehicles represented as stolen are really stolen.

(5) The Secretary periodically (but not more often than once every 2 years) may redetermine and prescribe by regulation the median theft rate under this subsection.

(c) Providing Information.—The Secretary by regulation shall require each manufacturer to provide information necessary to select under subsection (a)(3) of this section the high theft lines and the major parts to be subject to the standard.

(d) Application.—Except as provided in section 33106 of this title, the Secretary may not make the standard inapplicable to a line that has been subject to the standard.

§33105. Cost limitations

(a) Maximum Manufacturer Costs.—A standard under section 33102 or 33103 of this title may not impose—

(1) on a manufacturer of motor vehicles, compliance costs of more than $15 a motor vehicle; or

(2) on a manufacturer of major replacement parts, compliance costs for each part of more than the reasonable amount (but less than $15) that the Secretary of Transportation specifies in the standard.

(b) Costs Involved in Engines and Transmissions.—For a manufacturer engaged in identifying engines or transmissions on October 25, 1984, in a way that substantially complies with the standard—

(1) the costs of identifying engines and transmissions may not be considered in calculating the manufacturer's costs under subsection (a) of this section; and

(2) the manufacturer may not be required under the standard to conform to any identification system for engines and transmissions that imposes greater costs on the manufacturer than are incurred under the identification system used by the manufacturer on October 25, 1984.

(c) Cost Adjustments.—(1) In this subsection—

(A) "base period" means calendar year 1984.

(B) "price index" means the average over a calendar year of the Consumer Price Index (all items—United States city average) published monthly by the Secretary of Labor.

(2) At the beginning of each calendar year, as necessary data become available from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Secretary of Labor shall certify to the Secretary of Transportation and publish in the Federal Register the percentage difference between the price index for the 12 months before the beginning of the calendar year and the price index for the base period. For model years beginning in that calendar year, the amounts specified in subsection (a) of this section shall be adjusted by the percentage difference.

§33106. Exemption for passenger motor vehicles equipped with anti-theft devices

(a) Definitions.—In this section—

(1) "anti-theft device" means a device to reduce or deter theft that—

(A) is in addition to the theft-deterrent devices required by motor vehicle safety standard numbered 114 in section 571.114 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations;

(B) the manufacturer believes will be effective in reducing or deterring theft of motor vehicles; and

(C) does not use a signaling device reserved by State law for use on police, emergency, or official vehicles, or on schoolbuses.

(2) "standard equipment" means equipment already installed in a motor vehicle when it is delivered from the manufacturer and not an accessory or other item that the first purchaser customarily has the option to have installed.

(b) Granting Exemptions and Limitations.—(1) A manufacturer may petition the Secretary of Transportation for an exemption from a requirement of a standard prescribed under section 33102 or 33103 of this title for a line of passenger motor vehicles equipped as standard equipment with an anti-theft device that the Secretary decides is likely to be as effective in reducing and deterring motor vehicle theft as compliance with the standard.

(2) The Secretary may grant an exemption—

(A) for model year 1987, for not more than 2 lines of a manufacturer;

(B) for each of the model years 1988–1996, for not more than 2 additional lines of a manufacturer;

(C) for each of the model years 1997–2000, for not more than one additional line of a manufacturer; and

(D) for each of the model years after model year 2000, for the number of lines that the Attorney General decides under section 33103(d)(3) of this title.

(3) An additional exemption granted under subparagraph (2)(B) or (C) of this paragraph does not affect an exemption previously granted.

(c) Petitioning Procedure.—A petition must be filed not later than 8 months before the start of production for the first model year covered by the petition. The petition must include—

(1) a detailed description of the device;

(2) the reasons for the manufacturer's conclusion that the device will be effective in reducing and deterring theft of motor vehicles; and

(3) additional information the Secretary reasonably may require to make the decision described in subsection (b)(1) of this section.

(d) Decisions and Approvals.—The Secretary shall make a decision about a petition filed under this section not later than 120 days after the date the petition is filed. A decision approving a petition must be based on substantial evidence. The Secretary may approve a petition in whole or in part. If the Secretary does not make a decision within the 120-day period, the petition shall be deemed to be approved and the manufacturer shall be exempt from the standard for the line covered by the petition for the subsequent model year.

(e) Rescissions.—The Secretary may rescind an exemption if the Secretary decides that the anti-theft device has not been as effective in reducing and deterring motor vehicle theft as compliance with the standard. A rescission may be effective only—

(1) for a model year after the model year in which the rescission occurs; and

(2) at least 6 months after the manufacturer receives written notice of the rescission from the Secretary.

§33107. Voluntary vehicle identification standards

(a) Election To Inscribe or Affix Identifying Marks.—The Secretary of Transportation by regulation may prescribe a vehicle theft prevention standard under which a person may elect to inscribe or affix an identifying number or symbol on major parts of a motor vehicle manufactured or owned by the person for purposes of section 511 of title 18 and related provisions. The standard may include provisions for registration of the identification with the Secretary or a person designated by the Secretary.

(b) Standard Requirements.—The standard under this section shall be practicable and provide relevant objective criteria.

(c) Voluntary Compliance.—Compliance with the standard under this section is voluntary. Failure to comply does not subject a person to a penalty or enforcement under this chapter.

(d) Compliance With Other Standards.—Compliance with the standard under this section does not relieve a manufacturer from a requirement of a standard prescribed under section 33102 or 33103 of this title.

§33108. Monitoring compliance of manufacturers

(a) Records, Reports, Information, and Inspection.—To enable the Secretary of Transportation to decide whether a manufacturer of motor vehicles containing a part subject to a standard prescribed under section 33102 or 33103 of this title, or a manufacturer of major replacement parts subject to the standard, is complying with this chapter and the standard, the Secretary may require the manufacturer to—

(1) keep records;

(2) make reports;

(3) provide items and information; and

(4) allow an officer or employee designated by the Secretary to inspect the vehicles and parts and relevant records of the manufacturer.

(b) Entry and Inspection.—To enforce this chapter, an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, on presenting appropriate credentials and a written notice to the owner, operator, or agent in charge, may inspect a facility in which motor vehicles containing major parts subject to the standard, or major replacement parts subject to the standard, are manufactured, held for introduction into interstate commerce, or held for sale after introduction into interstate commerce. An inspection shall be conducted at a reasonable time, in a reasonable way, and with reasonable promptness.

(c) Certification of Compliance.—(1) A manufacturer of a motor vehicle subject to the standard, and a manufacturer of a major replacement part subject to the standard, shall provide at the time of delivery of the vehicle or part a certification that the vehicle or part conforms to the applicable motor vehicle theft prevention standard. The certification shall accompany the vehicle or part until its delivery to the first purchaser. The Secretary by regulation may prescribe the type and form of the certification.

(2) This subsection does not apply to a motor vehicle or major replacement part that is—

(A) intended only for export;

(B) labeled only for export on the vehicle or replacement part and the outside of any container until exported; and

(C) exported.

(d) Notification of Error.—A manufacturer shall notify the Secretary if the manufacturer discovers that—

(1) there is an error in the identification (required by the standard) applied to a major part installed by the manufacturer in a motor vehicle during its assembly, or to a major replacement part manufactured by the manufacturer; and

(2) the motor vehicle or major replacement part has entered interstate commerce.

§33109. National Stolen Passenger Motor Vehicle Information System

(a) General Requirements.—(1) Not later than July 25, 1993, the Attorney General shall establish, and thereafter maintain, a National Stolen Passenger Motor Vehicle Information System containing the vehicle identification numbers of stolen passenger motor vehicles and stolen passenger motor vehicle parts. The System shall be located in the National Crime Information Center and shall include at least the following information on each passenger motor vehicle reported to a law enforcement authority as stolen and not recovered:

(A) the vehicle identification number.

(B) the make and model year.

(C) the date on which the vehicle was reported as stolen.

(D) the location of the law enforcement authority that received the report of the theft of the vehicle.

(E) the identification numbers of the vehicle parts (or derivatives of those numbers), at the time of the theft, if those numbers are different from the vehicle identification number of the vehicle.

(2) In establishing the System, the Attorney General shall consult with—

(A) State and local law enforcement authorities; and

(B) the National Crime Information Center Policy Advisory Board to ensure the security of the information in the System and that the System will not compromise the security of stolen passenger motor vehicle and passenger motor vehicle parts information in the System.

(3) If the Attorney General decides that the Center is not able to perform the functions of the System, the Attorney General shall make an agreement for the operation of the System separate from the Center.

(4) The Attorney General shall prescribe by regulation the effective date of the System.

(b) REQUESTS FOR INFORMATION.—(1) The Attorney General shall prescribe by regulation procedures under which an individual or entity intending to transfer a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle part may obtain information on whether the vehicle or part is listed in the System as stolen.

(2) On request of an insurance carrier, a person lawfully selling or distributing passenger motor vehicle parts in interstate commerce, or an individual or enterprise engaged in the business of repairing passenger motor vehicles, the Attorney General (or the entity the Attorney General designates) immediately shall inform the insurance carrier, person, individual, or enterprise whether the System has a record of a vehicle or vehicle part with a particular vehicle identification number (or derivative of that number) being reported as stolen. The Attorney General may require appropriate verification to ensure that the request is legitimate and will not compromise the security of the System.

(c) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—(1) Not later than December 24, 1992, the Attorney General shall establish in the Department of Justice an advisory committee. The Attorney General shall develop the System with the advice and recommendations of the committee.

(2)(A) The committee is composed of the following 10 members:

(i) the Attorney General.

(ii) the Secretary of Transportation.

(iii) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the law enforcement community at the State level.

(iv) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the law enforcement community at the local level.

(v) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the automotive recycling industry.

(vi) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the automotive repair industry.

(vii) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the automotive rebuilders industry.

(viii) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the automotive parts suppliers industry.

(ix) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of the insurance industry.

(x) one individual who is qualified to represent the interests of consumers.

(B) The Attorney General shall appoint the individuals described in subparagraph (A)(iii)–(x) of this paragraph and shall serve as chairman of the committee.

(3) The committee shall make recommendations on developing and carrying out—

(A) the National Stolen Passenger Motor Vehicle Information System; and

(B) the verification system under section 33110 of this title.

(4) Not later than April 25, 1993, the committee shall submit to the Attorney General, the Secretary, and Congress a report including the recommendations of the committee.

§33110. Verifications involving junk and salvage motor vehicles

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "vehicle identification number" means a unique identification number (or derivative of that number) assigned to a passenger motor vehicle by a manufacturer in compliance with applicable regulations.

(b) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—(1) If an insurance carrier selling comprehensive motor vehicle insurance coverage obtains possession of and transfers a junk motor vehicle or a salvage motor vehicle, the carrier shall—

(A) under procedures the Attorney General prescribes by regulation under section 33109 of this title in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, verify whether the vehicle is reported as stolen; and

(B) provide the purchaser or transferee of the vehicle from the insurance carrier verification identifying the vehicle identification number and verifying that the vehicle has not been reported as stolen or, if reported as stolen, that the carrier has recovered the vehicle and has proper legal title to the vehicle.

(2)(A) This subsection does not prohibit an insurance carrier from transferring a motor vehicle if, within a reasonable period of time during normal business operations (as decided by the Attorney General under section 33109 of this title) using reasonable efforts, the carrier—

(i) has not been informed under the procedures prescribed in section 33109 of this title that the vehicle has not been reported as stolen; or

(ii) has not otherwise established whether the vehicle has been reported as stolen.

(B) When a carrier transfers a motor vehicle for which the carrier has not established whether the vehicle has been reported as stolen, the carrier shall provide written certification to the transferee that the carrier has not established whether the vehicle has been reported as stolen.

(c) REGULATIONS.—In consultation with the Secretary, the Attorney General shall prescribe regulations necessary to ensure that verification performed and provided by an insurance carrier under subsection (b)(1)(B) of this section is uniform, effective, and resistant to fraudulent use.

§33111. Verifications involving motor vehicle major parts

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—A person engaged in the business of salvaging, dismantling, recycling, or repairing passenger motor vehicles may not knowingly sell in commerce or transfer or install a major part marked with an identification number without—

(1) first establishing, through a procedure the Attorney General by regulation prescribes in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation under section 33109 of this title, that the major part has not been reported as stolen; and

(2) providing the purchaser or transferee with a verification—

(A) identifying the vehicle identification number (or derivative of that number) of that major part; and

(B) verifying that the major part has not been reported as stolen.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—(1) Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to a person that—

(A) is the manufacturer of the major part;

(B) has purchased the major part directly from the manufacturer; or

(C) has received a verification from an insurance carrier under section 33110 of this title that the motor vehicle from which the major part is derived has not been reported as stolen, or that the carrier has not established whether that vehicle has been stolen.

(2) A person described under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection that subsequently transfers or sells in commerce the motor vehicle or a major part of the vehicle shall provide the verification received from the carrier to the person to whom the vehicle or part is transferred or sold.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Attorney General shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section. The regulations shall include regulations prescribed in consultation with the Secretary that are necessary to ensure that a verification a person provides under subsection (a)(2) of this section is uniform, effective, and resistant to fraudulent use.

§33112. Insurance reports and information

(a) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are—

(1) to prevent or discourage the theft of motor vehicles, particularly those stolen for the removal of certain parts;

(2) to prevent or discourage the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of used parts that are removed from those vehicles; and

(3) to help reduce the cost to consumers of comprehensive insurance coverage for motor vehicles.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "insurer" includes a person (except a governmental authority) having a fleet of at least 20 motor vehicles that are used primarily for rental or lease and are not covered by a theft insurance policy issued by an insurer of passenger motor vehicles.

(2) "motor vehicle" includes a truck, a multipurpose passenger vehicle, and a motorcycle.

(c) ANNUAL INFORMATION REQUIREMENT.—(1) An insurer providing comprehensive coverage for motor vehicles shall provide annually to the Secretary of Transportation information on—

(A) the thefts and recoveries (in any part) of motor vehicles;

(B) the number of vehicles that have been recovered intact;

(C) the rating rules and plans, such as loss information and rating characteristics, used by the insurer to establish premiums for comprehensive coverage, including the basis for the premiums, and premium penalties for motor vehicles considered by the insurer as more likely to be stolen;

(D) the actions taken by the insurer to reduce the premiums, including changing rate levels for comprehensive coverage because of a reduction in thefts of motor vehicles;

(E) the actions taken by the insurer to assist in deterring or reducing thefts of motor vehicles; and

(F) other information the Secretary requires to carry out this chapter and to make the report and findings required by this chapter.

(2) The information on thefts and recoveries shall include an explanation on how the information is obtained, the accuracy and timeliness of the information, and the use made of the information, including the extent and frequency of reporting the information to national, public, and private entities such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State and local police.

(d) REPORTS ON REDUCED CLAIMS PAYMENTS.—An insurer shall report promptly in writing to the Secretary if the insurer, in paying a claim under an adjustment or negotiation between the insurer and the insured for a stolen motor vehicle—

(1) reduces the payment to the insured by the amount of the value, salvage or otherwise, of a recovered part subject to a standard prescribed under section 33102 or 33103 of this title; and

(2) the reduction is not made at the express election of the insured.

(e) GENERAL EXEMPTIONS.—The Secretary shall exempt from this section, for one or more years, an insurer that the Secretary decides should be exempted because—

(1) the cost of preparing and providing the information is excessive in relation to the size of the insurer's business; and

(2) the information from that insurer will not contribute significantly to carrying out this chapter.

(f) SMALL INSURER EXEMPTIONS.—(1) In this subsection, "small insurer" means an insurer whose premiums for motor vehicle insurance issued directly or through an affiliate, including a pooling arrangement established under State law or regulation for the issuance of motor vehicle insurance, account for—

(A) less than one percent of the total premiums for all forms of motor vehicle insurance issued by insurers in the United States; and

(B) less than 10 percent of the total premiums for all forms of motor vehicle insurance issued by insurers in any State.

(2) The Secretary shall exempt by regulation a small insurer from this section if the Secretary finds that the exemption will not significantly affect the validity or usefulness of the information collected and compiled under this section, nationally or State-by-State. However, the Secretary may not exempt an insurer under this paragraph that is considered an insurer only because of subsection (b)(1) of this section.

(3) Regulations under this subsection shall provide that eligibility as a small insurer shall be based on the most recent calendar year for which adequate information is available, and that, once attained, the eligibility shall continue without further demonstration of eligibility for one or more years, as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(g) PRESCRIBED FORM.—Information required by this section shall be provided in the form the Secretary prescribes.

(h) PERIODIC COMPILATIONS.—Subject to section 552 of title 5, the Secretary periodically shall compile and publish information obtained by the Secretary under this section, in a form that will be helpful to the public, the police, and Congress.

(i) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall consult with public and private agencies and associations the Secretary considers appropriate.

§33113. Theft reports

(a) TRUCK, MULTIPURPOSE PASSENGER VEHICLE, AND MOTORCYCLE REPORT.—Not later than October 25, 1995, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report to Congress that includes—

(A) to decrease the theft rate of those motor vehicles;

(B) to increase the recovery rate of those motor vehicles;

(C) to decrease the trafficking in stolen parts of those motor vehicles;

(D) to stem the export and import of those stolen motor vehicles or parts; or

(E) to have benefits greater than the costs of the identification; and

(6) recommendations on whether, and to what extent, the identification of trucks, multipurpose passenger vehicles, and motorcycles should be required by law.

(b) MOTOR VEHICLE REPORT.—Not later than October 25, 1997, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress that includes—

(4) a description of the market for the stolen parts;

(5) information on—

(C) preventing or reducing the availability of used parts that are stolen from motor vehicles subject to this chapter;

(7) information on the premiums charged by insurers of comprehensive coverage of motor vehicles subject to this chapter, including any increase in the premiums charged because a motor vehicle is a likely candidate for theft, and the extent to which the insurers have reduced for the benefit of consumers the premiums, or foregone premium increases, because of this chapter;

(8) information on the adequacy and effectiveness of laws of the United States and the States aimed at preventing the distribution and sale of used parts that have been removed from stolen motor vehicles and the adequacy of systems available to enforcement personnel for tracing parts to determine if they have been stolen from a motor vehicle;

(9) an assessment of whether the identification of parts of other classes of motor vehicles is likely—

(A) to decrease the theft rate of those vehicles;

(B) to increase the recovery rate of those vehicles;

(C) to decrease the trafficking in stolen parts of those vehicles;

(D) to stem the export and import of those stolen vehicles, parts, or components; or

(E) to have benefits greater than the costs of the identification; and

(10) other relevant and reliable information available to the Secretary about the impact, including the beneficial impact, of the laws set forth in titles II and III of the Motor Vehicle Theft Law Enforcement Act of 1984 on law enforcement, consumers, and manufacturers; and

(A) continuing without change the standards prescribed under this chapter;

(B) amending this chapter to cover more or fewer lines of passenger motor vehicles;

(C) amending this chapter to cover other classes of motor vehicles; or

(D) ending the standards for all future motor vehicles.

(c) BASES OF REPORTS.—(1) The reports under subsections (a) and (b) of this section each shall be based on—

(A) information reported under this chapter by insurers of motor vehicles and manufacturers of motor vehicles and major replacement parts;

(B) information provided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(C) experience obtained in carrying out this chapter;

(D) experience of the Government under the laws set forth in titles II and III of the Motor Vehicle Theft Law Enforcement Act of 1984; and

(E) other relevant and reliable information available to the Secretary.

(2) In preparing each report, the Secretary shall consult with the Attorney General and State and local law enforcement officials, as appropriate.

(3) The report under subsection (b) of this section shall—

(A) cover a period of at least 4 years after the standards required by this chapter are prescribed; and

(B) reflect any information, as appropriate, from the report under subsection (a) of this section, updated from the date of the report.

(4) At least 90 days before submitting each report to Congress, the Secretary shall publish a proposed report for public review and an opportunity of at least 45 days for written comment. The Secretary shall consider those comments in preparing the report to be submitted and include a summary of the comments with the submitted report.

§33114. Prohibited acts

(a) GENERAL.—A person may not—

(1) manufacture for sale, sell, offer for sale, introduce or deliver for introduction in interstate commerce, or import into the United States, a motor vehicle or major replacement part subject to a standard prescribed under section 33102 or 33103 of this title, unless it conforms to the standard;

(2) fail to comply with a regulation prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation or Attorney General under this chapter;

(3) fail to keep specified records, refuse access to or copying of records, fail to make reports or provide items or information, or fail or refuse to allow entry or inspection, as required by this chapter;

(4) fail to provide the certification required by section 33108(c) of this title, or provide a certification that the person knows, or in the exercise of reasonable care has reason to know, is false or misleading in a material respect; or

(5) knowingly—

(A) own, operate, maintain, or control a chop shop;

(B) conduct operations in a chop shop; or

(C) transport a passenger motor vehicle or passenger motor vehicle part to or from a chop shop.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—Subsection (a)(1) of this section does not apply to a person establishing that in the exercise of reasonable care the person did not have reason to know that the motor vehicle or major replacement part was not in conformity with the standard.

§33115. Civil penalties and enforcement

(a) GENERAL PENALTY AND CIVIL ACTIONS TO COLLECT.—(1) A person that violates section 33114(a)(1)–(4) of this title is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $1,000 for each violation. The failure of more than one part of a single motor vehicle to conform to an applicable standard under section 33102 or 33103 of this title is only a single violation. The maximum penalty under this subsection for a related series of violations is $250,000.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation imposes a civil penalty under this subsection. The Secretary may compromise the amount of a penalty.

(3) In determining the amount of a civil penalty or compromise under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider the size of the person's business and the gravity of the violation.

(4) The Attorney General shall bring a civil action in a United States district court to collect a civil penalty imposed under this subsection.

(5) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this subsection from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(b) CHOP SHOP PENALTY AND ENFORCEMENT.—(1) A person that violates section 33114(a)(5) of this title is liable to the Government for a civil penalty of not more than $100,000 a day for each violation.

§40101. Policy

(a) ECONOMIC REGULATION.—In carrying out subpart II of this part and those provisions of subpart IV applicable in carrying out subpart II, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the following matters, among others, as being in the public interest and consistent with public convenience and necessity:

(1) assigning and maintaining safety as the highest priority in air commerce.

(2) before authorizing new air transportation services, evaluating the safety implications of those services.

(3) preventing deterioration in established safety procedures, recognizing the clear intent, encouragement, and dedication of Congress to further the highest degree of safety in air transportation and air commerce, and to maintain the safety vigilance that has evolved in air transportation and air commerce and has come to be expected by the traveling and shipping public.

(4) the availability of a variety of adequate, economic, efficient, and low-priced services without unreasonable discrimination or unfair or deceptive practices.

(5) coordinating transportation by, and improving relations among, air carriers, and encouraging fair wages and working conditions.

(6) placing maximum reliance on competitive market forces and on actual and potential competition—

(A) to provide the needed air transportation system; and

(B) to encourage efficient and well-managed air carriers to earn adequate profits and attract capital, considering any material differences between interstate air transportation and foreign air transportation.

(7) developing and maintaining a sound regulatory system that is responsive to the needs of the public and in which decisions are reached promptly to make it easier to adapt the air transportation system to the present and future needs of—

(A) the commerce of the United States;

(B) the United States Postal Service; and

(C) the national defense.

(8) encouraging air transportation at major urban areas through secondary or satellite airports if consistent with regional airport plans of regional and local authorities, and if endorsed by appropriate State authorities—

(A) encouraging the transportation by air carriers that provide, in a specific market, transportation exclusively at those airports; and

(B) fostering an environment that allows those carriers to establish themselves and develop secondary or satellite airport services.

(9) preventing unfair, deceptive, predatory, or anticompetitive practices in air transportation.

(10) avoiding unreasonable industry concentration, excessive market domination, monopoly powers, and other conditions that would tend to allow at least one air carrier or foreign air carrier unreasonably to increase prices, reduce services, or exclude competition in air transportation.

(11) maintaining a complete and convenient system of continuous scheduled interstate air transportation for small communities and isolated areas with direct financial assistance from the United States Government when appropriate.

(12) encouraging, developing, and maintaining an air transportation system relying on actual and potential competition—

(A) to provide efficiency, innovation, and low prices; and

(B) to decide on the variety and quality of, and determine prices for, air transportation services.

(13) encouraging entry into air transportation markets by new and existing air carriers and the continued strengthening of small air carriers to ensure a more effective and competitive airline industry.

(14) promoting, encouraging, and developing civil aeronautics and a viable, privately-owned United States air transport industry.

(15) strengthening the competitive position of air carriers to at least ensure equality with foreign air carriers, including the attainment of the opportunity for air carriers to maintain and increase their profitability in foreign air transportation.

(b) ALL-CARGO AIR TRANSPORTATION CONSIDERATIONS.—In carrying out subpart II of this part and those provisions of subpart IV applicable in carrying out subpart II, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the following matters, among others and in addition to the matters referred to in subsection (a) of this section, as being in the public interest for all-cargo air transportation:

(1) encouraging and developing an expedited all-cargo air transportation system provided by private enterprise and responsive to—

(A) the present and future needs of shippers;

(B) the commerce of the United States; and

(C) the national defense.

(2) encouraging and developing an integrated transportation system relying on competitive market forces to decide the extent, variety, quality, and price of services provided.

(3) providing services without unreasonable discrimination, unfair or deceptive practices, or predatory pricing.

(c) GENERAL SAFETY CONSIDERATIONS.—In carrying out subpart III of this part and those provisions of subpart IV applicable in carrying out subpart III, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consider the following matters:

(1) the requirements of national defense and commercial and general aviation.

(2) the public right of freedom of transit through the navigable airspace.

(d) SAFETY CONSIDERATIONS IN PUBLIC INTEREST.—In carrying out subpart III of this part and those provisions of subpart IV applicable in carrying out subpart III, the Administrator shall consider the following matters, among others, as being in the public interest:

(1) regulating air commerce in a way that best promotes its development and safety and fulfills national defense requirements.

(2) promoting, encouraging, and developing civil aeronautics.

(3) controlling the use of the navigable airspace and regulating civil and military operations in that airspace in the interest of the safety and efficiency of both of those operations.

(4) consolidating research and development for air navigation facilities and the installation and operation of those facilities.

(5) developing and operating a common system of air traffic control and navigation for military and civil aircraft.

(6) providing assistance to law enforcement agencies in the enforcement of laws related to regulation of controlled substances, to the extent consistent with aviation safety.

(e) INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORTATION.—In formulating United States international air transportation policy, the Secretaries of State and Transportation shall develop a negotiating policy emphasizing the greatest degree of competition compatible with a well-functioning international air transportation system, including the following:

(1) strengthening the competitive position of air carriers to ensure at least equality with foreign air carriers, including the attainment of the opportunity for air carriers to maintain and increase their profitability in foreign air transportation.

(2) freedom of air carriers and foreign air carriers to offer prices that correspond to consumer demand.

(3) the fewest possible restrictions on charter air transportation.

(4) the maximum degree of multiple and permissive international authority for air carriers so that they will be able to respond quickly to a shift in market demand.

(5) eliminating operational and marketing restrictions to the greatest extent possible.

(6) integrating domestic and international air transportation.

(7) increasing the number of nonstop United States gateway cities.

(8) opportunities for carriers of foreign countries to increase their access to places in the United States if exchanged for benefits of similar magnitude for air carriers or the traveling public with permanent linkage between rights granted and rights given away.

(9) eliminating discrimination and unfair competitive practices faced by United States airlines in foreign air transportation, including—

(A) excessive landing and user fees;

(B) unreasonable ground handling requirements;

(C) unreasonable restrictions on operations;

(D) prohibitions against change of gauge; and

(E) similar restrictive practices.

(10) promoting, encouraging, and developing civil aeronautics and a viable, privately-owned United States air transport industry.

(f) STRENGTHENING COMPETITION.—In selecting an air carrier to provide foreign air transportation from among competing applicants, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider, in addition to the matters specified in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the strengthening of competition among air carriers operating in the United States to prevent unreasonable concentration in the air carrier industry.

To further that right, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board established under section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 792) before prescribing a regulation or issuing an order or procedure that will have a significant impact on the accessibility of commercial airports or commercial air transportation for handicapped individuals.

(b) USE OF AIRSPACE.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall develop plans and policy for the use of the navigable airspace and assign by regulation or order the use of the airspace necessary to ensure the safety of aircraft and the efficient use of airspace. The Administrator may modify or revoke an assignment when required in the public interest.

(2) The Administrator shall prescribe air traffic regulations on the flight of aircraft (including regulations on safe altitudes) for—

(2) allowing more than one fixed-based operator to provide the services requires a reduction in space leased under an agreement existing on September 3, 1982, between the operator and the airport.

§40104. Promotion of civil aeronautics and air commerce

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall encourage the development of civil aeronautics and air commerce in and outside the United States. navigation, including air routes and services. The Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of State in carrying out this part to the extent this part is related to foreign air transportation.

(b) ACTIONS OF SECRETARY AND ADMINISTRATOR.—(1) In carrying out this part, the Secretary of Transportation and the Administrator—

(A) shall act consistently with obligations of the United States Government under an international agreement;

(B) shall consider applicable laws and requirements of a foreign country; and

(C) may not limit compliance by an air carrier with obligations or liabilities imposed by the government of a foreign country when the Secretary takes any action related to a certificate of public convenience and necessity issued under chapter 411 of this title.

(2) This subsection does not apply to an agreement between an air carrier or an officer or representative of an air carrier and the government of a foreign country, if the Secretary of Transportation disapproves the agreement because it is not in the public interest. Section 40106(b)(2) of this title applies to this subsection.

(c) CONSULTATION ON INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORTATION POLICY.—In carrying out section 40101(e) of this title, the Secretaries of State and Transportation, to the maximum extent practicable, shall consult on broad policy goals and individual negotiations with—

§40106. Emergency powers

(a) DEVIATIONS FROM REGULATIONS.—Appropriate military authority may authorize aircraft of the armed forces of the United States to deviate from air traffic regulations prescribed under section 40103(b)(1) and (2) of this title when the authority decides the deviation is essential to the national defense because of a military emergency or urgent military necessity. The authority shall—

(1) give the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration prior notice of the deviation at the earliest practicable time; and

(2) to the extent time and circumstances allow, make every reasonable effort to consult with the Administrator and arrange for the deviation in advance on a mutually agreeable basis.

(b) SUSPENSION OF AUTHORITY.—(1) When the President decides that the government of a foreign country is acting inconsistently with the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft or that the government of a foreign country allows territory under its jurisdiction to be used as a base of operations or training of, or as a sanctuary for, or arms, aids, or abets, a terrorist organization that knowingly uses the unlawful seizure, or the threat of an unlawful seizure, of an aircraft as an instrument of policy, the President may suspend the authority of—

(A) an air carrier or foreign air carrier to provide foreign air transportation to and from that foreign country;

(B) a person to operate aircraft in foreign air commerce to and from that foreign country;

(C) a foreign air carrier to provide foreign air transportation between the United States and another country that maintains air service with the foreign country; and

(D) a foreign person to operate aircraft in foreign air commerce between the United States and another country that maintains air service with the foreign country.

(2) The President may act under this subsection without notice or a hearing. The suspension remains in effect for as long as the President decides is necessary to ensure the security of aircraft against unlawful seizure. Notwithstanding section 40105(b) of this title, the authority of the President to suspend rights under this subsection is a condition to a certificate of public convenience and necessity, air carrier operating certificate, foreign air carrier or foreign aircraft permit, or foreign air carrier operating specification issued by the Secretary of Transportation under this part.

(3) An air carrier or foreign air carrier may not provide foreign air transportation, and a person may not operate aircraft in foreign air commerce, in violation of a suspension of authority under this subsection.

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The President may transfer to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration a duty, power, activity, or facility of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch of the United States Government, or an officer or unit of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the executive branch, related primarily to selecting, developing, testing, evaluating, establishing, operating, or maintaining a system, procedure, facility, or device for safe and efficient air navigation and air traffic control. In making a transfer, the President may transfer records and property and make officers and employees from the department, agency, instrumentality, or unit available to the Administrator.

(b) DURING WAR.—If war occurs, the President by executive order may transfer to the Secretary of Defense a duty, power, activity, or facility of the Administrator. In making the transfer, the President may transfer records, property, officers, and employees of the Administration to the Department of Defense.

§40108. Training schools

(a) AUTHORITY TO OPERATE.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may operate schools to train officers and employees of the Administration to carry out duties, powers, and activities of the Administrator.

(b) ATTENDANCE.—The Administrator may authorize officers and employees of other departments, agencies, or instrumentalities of the United States Government, officers and employees of governments of foreign countries, and individuals from the aeronautics industry to attend those schools. However, if the attendance of any of those officers, employees, or individuals increases the cost of operating the schools, the Administrator may require the payment or transfer of amounts or other consideration to offset the additional cost. The amount received may be credited to the appropriation current when the expenditures are or were paid, the appropriation current when the amount is received, or both.

§40109. Authority to exempt

(a) AIR CARRIERS AND FOREIGN AIR CARRIERS NOT ENGAGED DIRECTLY IN OPERATING AIRCRAFT.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may exempt from subpart II of this part—

(A) an air carrier not engaged directly in operating aircraft in air transportation; or

(B) a foreign air carrier not engaged directly in operating aircraft in foreign air transportation.

(2) The exemption is effective to the extent and for periods that the Secretary decides are in the public interest.

(b) SAFETY REGULATION.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may grant an exemption from a regulation prescribed in carrying out sections 40103(b)(1) and (2), 40119, 44901, 44903, 44906, and 44935–44937 of this title when the Administrator decides the exemption is in the public interest.

(c) OTHER ECONOMIC REGULATION.—Except as provided in this section, the Secretary may exempt to the extent the Secretary considers necessary a person or class of persons from a provision of chapter 411, sections 41301–41306, 41308–41310(a), 41501, 41503, 41504, 41506, 41510, 41511, 41701, 41702, 41705–41709, 41711, 41712, and 41731–41742, chapter 419, subchapter II of chapter 421, and section 46301(b) of this title, or a regulation or term prescribed under any of those provisions, when the Secretary decides that the exemption is consistent with the public interest.

(d) LABOR REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may not exempt an air carrier from section 42112 of this title. However, the Secretary may exempt from section 42112(b)(1) and (2) an air carrier not providing scheduled air transportation, and the operations conducted during daylight hours by an air carrier providing scheduled air transportation, when the Secretary decides that—

(1) because of the limited extent of, or unusual circumstances affecting, the operation of the air carrier, the enforcement of section 42112(b)(1) and (2) of this title is or would be an unreasonable burden on the air carrier that would obstruct its development and prevent it from beginning or continuing operations; and

(2) the exemption would not affect adversely the public interest.

(e) MAXIMUM FLYING HOURS.—The Secretary may not exempt an air carrier under this section from a provision referred to in subsection (c) of this section, or a regulation or term prescribed under any of those provisions, that sets maximum flying hours for pilots or copilots.

(f) SMALLER AIRCRAFT.—(1) An air carrier is exempt from section 41101(a)(1) of this title, and the Secretary may exempt an air carrier from another provision of subpart II of this part, if the air carrier—

(A)(i) provides passenger transportation only with aircraft having a maximum capacity of 55 passengers; or

(ii) provides the transportation of cargo only with aircraft having a maximum payload of less than 18,000 pounds; and

(B) complies with liability insurance requirements and other regulations the Secretary prescribes.

(2) The Secretary may increase the passenger or payload capacities when the public interest requires.

(3)(A) An exemption under this subsection applies to an air carrier providing air transportation between 2 places in Alaska, or between Alaska and Canada, only if the carrier is authorized by Alaska to provide the transportation.

(B) The Secretary may limit the number or location of places that may be served by an air carrier providing transportation only in Alaska under an exemption from section 41101(a)(1) of this title, or the frequency with which the transportation may be provided, only when the Secretary decides that providing the transportation substantially impairs the ability of an air carrier holding a certificate issued by the Secretary to provide its authorized transportation, including the minimum transportation requirement for Alaska specified under section 41732(b)(1)(B) of this title.

(g) EMERGENCY AIR TRANSPORTATION BY FOREIGN AIR CARRIERS.—(1) To the extent that the Secretary decides an exemption is in the public interest, the Secretary may exempt by order a foreign air carrier from the requirements and limitations of this part for not more than 30 days to allow the foreign air carrier to carry passengers or cargo in interstate air transportation in certain markets if the Secretary finds that—

(A) because of an emergency created by unusual circumstances not arising in the normal course of business, air carriers holding certificates under section 41102 of this title cannot accommodate traffic in those markets;

(B) all possible efforts have been made to accommodate the traffic by using the resources of the air carriers, including the use of—

(i) foreign aircraft, or sections of foreign aircraft, under lease or charter to the air carriers; and

(ii) the air carriers' reservations systems to the extent practicable;

(C) the exemption is necessary to avoid unreasonable hardship for the traffic in the markets that cannot be accommodated by the air carriers; and

(D) granting the exemption will not result in an unreasonable advantage to any party in a labor dispute where the inability to accommodate traffic in a market is a result of the dispute.

(2) When the Secretary grants an exemption to a foreign air carrier under this subsection, the Secretary shall—

(A) ensure that air transportation that the foreign air carrier provides under the exemption is made available on reasonable terms;

(B) monitor continuously the passenger load factor of air carriers in the market that hold certificates under section 41102 of this title; and

(C) review the exemption at least every 30 days to ensure that the unusual circumstances that established the need for the exemption still exist.

(3) The Secretary may renew an exemption (including renewals) under this subsection for not more than 30 days. An exemption may continue for not more than 5 days after the unusual circumstances that established the need for the exemption cease.

(h) NOTICE AND OPPORTUNITY FOR HEARING.—The Secretary may act under subsections (d) and (f)(3)(B) of this section only after giving the air carrier notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

§40110. General procurement authority

(a) GENERAL.—In carrying out this part, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may—

(1) acquire, to the extent that amounts are available for obligation, services or an interest in property, including an interest in airspace immediately adjacent to and needed for airports and other air navigation facilities owned by the United States Government and operated by the Administrator;

(2) dispose of an interest in property for adequate compensation; and

(3) construct and improve laboratories and other test facilities.

(b) DUTIES AND POWERS.—When carrying out subsection (a) of this section, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration—

(1) is the senior procurement executive referred to in section 16(3) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 414(3)) for approving the justification for using procedures other than competitive procedures, as required under section 303(f)(1)(B)(iii) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 253(f)(1)(B)(iii)); and

(2) may—

(A) lease an interest in property for not more than 20 years;

(B) consider the reasonable probable future use of the underlying land in making an award for a condemnation of an interest in airspace;

(C) construct, or acquire an interest in, a public building (as defined in section 13 of the Public Buildings Act of 1959 (40 U.S.C. 612)) only under a delegation of authority from the Administrator of General Services;

(D) use procedures other than competitive procedures, as provided under section 303(c) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 253(c));

(E) use procedures other than competitive procedures only when the property or services needed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration are available from only one responsible source or only from a limited number of responsible sources and no other type of property or services will satisfy the needs of the Administrator; and

(F) dispose of property under subsection (a)(2) of this section, except for airport and airway property and technical equipment used for the special purposes of the Administration, only under title II of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 481 et seq.).

§40111. Multiyear procurement contracts for services and related items

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding section 1341(a)(1)(B) of title 31, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may make a contract of not more than 5 years for the following types of services and items of supply related to those services for which amounts otherwise would be available for obligation only in the fiscal year for which appropriated:

(1) operation, maintenance, and support of facilities and installations.

(2) operation, maintenance, and modification of aircraft, vehicles, and other highly complex equipment.

(3) specialized training requiring high quality instructor skills, including training of pilots and aircrew members and foreign language training.

(4) base services, including ground maintenance, aircraft refueling, bus transportation, and refuse collection and disposal.

(b) REQUIRED FINDINGS.—The Administrator may make a contract under this section only if the Administrator finds that—

(1) there will be a continuing requirement for the service consistent with current plans for the proposed contract period;

(2) providing the service will require a substantial initial investment in plant or equipment, or will incur a substantial contingent liability for assembling, training, or transporting a specialized workforce; and

(3) the contract will promote the best interests of the United States by encouraging effective competition and promoting economies in operation.

(c) CONSIDERATIONS.—When making a contract under this section, the Administrator shall be guided by the following:

(1) The part of the cost of a plant or equipment amortized as a cost of contract performance may not be more than the ratio between the period of contract performance and the anticipated useful commercial life (instead of physical life) of the plant or equipment, considering the location and specialized nature of the plant or equipment, obsolescence, and other similar factors.

(2) The Administrator shall consider the desirability of—

(A) obtaining an option to renew the contract for a reasonable period of not more than 3 years, at a price that does not include charges for nonrecurring costs already amortized; and

(B) reserving in the Administrator the right, on payment of the unamortized part of the cost of the plant or equipment, to take title to the plant or equipment under appropriate circumstances.

(d) ENDING CONTRACTS.—A contract made under this section shall be ended if amounts are not made available to continue the contract into a subsequent fiscal year. The cost of ending the contract may be paid from—

(1) an appropriation originally available for carrying out the contract;

(2) an appropriation currently available for procuring the type of service concerned and not otherwise obligated; or

(3) amounts appropriated for payments to end the contract.

§40112. Multiyear procurement contracts for property

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding section 1341(a)(1)(B) of title 31 and to the extent that amounts otherwise are available for obligation, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may make a contract of more than one but not more than 5 fiscal years to purchase property, except a contract to construct, alter, or make a major repair or improvement to real property or a contract to purchase property to which section 111 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 759) applies.

(b) REQUIRED FINDINGS.—The Administrator may make a contract under this section if the Administrator finds that—

(1) the contract will promote the safety or efficiency of the national airspace system and will result in reduced total contract costs;

(2) the minimum need for the property to be purchased is expected to remain substantially unchanged during the proposed contract period in terms of production rate, procurement rate, and total quantities;

(3) there is a reasonable expectation that throughout the proposed contract period the Administrator will request appropriations for the contract at the level required to avoid cancellation;

(4) there is a stable design for the property to be acquired and the technical risks associated with the property are not excessive; and

(5) the estimates of the contract costs and the anticipated savings from the contract are realistic.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator shall prescribe regulations for acquiring property under this section to promote the use of contracts under this section in a way that will allow the most efficient use of those contracts. The regulations may provide for a cancellation provision in the contract to the extent the provision is necessary and in the best interest of the United States. The provision may include consideration of recurring and nonrecurring costs of the contractor associated with producing the item to be delivered under the contract. The regulations shall provide that, to the extent practicable—

(1) to broaden the aviation industrial base—

(A) a contract under this section shall be used to seek, retain, and promote the use under that contract of subcontractors, vendors, or suppliers; and

(B) on accrual of a payment or other benefit accruing on a contract under this section to a subcontractor, vendor, or supplier participating in the contract, the payment or benefit shall be delivered in the most expeditious way practicable; and

(2) this section and regulations prescribed under this section may not be carried out in a way that precludes or curtails the existing ability of the Administrator to provide for—

(A) competition in producing items to be delivered under a contract under this section; or

(B) ending a prime contract when performance is deficient with respect to cost, quality, or schedule.

(d) CONTRACT PROVISIONS.—(1) A contract under this section may—

(A) be used for the advance procurement of components, parts, and material necessary to manufacture equipment to be used in the national airspace system;

(B) provide that performance under the contract after the first year is subject to amounts being appropriated; and

(C) contain a negotiated priced option for varying the number of end items to be procured over the period of the contract.

(2) If feasible and practicable, an advance procurement contract may be made to achieve economic-lot purchases and more efficient production rates.

(e) CANCELLATION PAYMENT AND NOTICE OF CANCELLATION CEILING.—(1) If a contract under this section provides that performance is subject to an appropriation being made, it also may provide for a cancellation payment to be made to the contractor if the appropriation is not made.

(2) Before awarding a contract under this section containing a cancellation ceiling of more than $100,000,000, the Administrator shall give written notice of the proposed contract and cancellation ceiling to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives. The contract may not be awarded until the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date of the notice.

(f) ENDING CONTRACTS.—A contract made under this section shall be ended if amounts are not made available to continue the contract into a subsequent fiscal year. The cost of ending the contract may be paid from—

(1) an appropriation originally available for carrying out the contract;

(2) an appropriation currently available for procuring the type of property concerned and not otherwise obligated; or

(3) amounts appropriated for payments to end the contract.

§40113. Administrative

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Transportation (or the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may take action the Secretary or Administrator, as appropriate, considers necessary to carry out this part, including conducting investigations, prescribing regulations, standards, and procedures, and issuing orders.

(b) HAZARDOUS MATERIAL.—In carrying out this part, the Secretary has the same authority to regulate the transportation of hazardous material by air that the Secretary has under section 5103 of this title. However, this subsection does not prohibit or regulate the transportation of a firearm (as defined in section 232 of title 18) or ammunition for a firearm, when transported by an individual for personal use.

(c) GOVERNMENTAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary (or the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) may use the assistance of the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and any research or technical department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government on matters related to aircraft fuel and oil, and to the design, material, workmanship, construction, performance, maintenance, and operation of aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, appliances, and air navigation facilities. Each department, agency, and instrumentality may conduct scientific and technical research, investigations, and tests necessary to assist the Secretary or Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration in carrying out this part. This part does not authorize duplicating laboratory research activities of a department, agency, or instrumentality.

(d) INDEMNIFICATION.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may indemnify an officer or employee of the Administration against a claim or judgment arising out of an act that the Administrator decides was committed within the scope of the official duties of the officer or employee.

§40114. Reports and records

(a) WRITTEN REPORTS.—(1) Except as provided in this part, the Secretary of Transportation (or the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) shall make a written report of each proceeding and investigation under this part in which a formal hearing was held and shall provide a copy to each party to the proceeding or investigation. The report shall include the decision, conclusions, order, and requirements of the Secretary or Administrator as appropriate.

(2) The Secretary (or the Administrator with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) shall have all reports, orders, decisions, and regulations the Secretary or Administrator, as appropriate, issues or prescribes published in the form and way best adapted for public use. A publication of the Secretary or Administrator is competent evidence of its contents.

(b) PUBLIC RECORDS.—Except as provided in subpart II of this part, copies of tariffs and arrangements filed with the Secretary under subpart II, and the statistics, tables, and figures contained in reports made to the Secretary under subpart II, are public records. The Secretary is the custodian of those records. A public record, or a copy or extract of it, certified by the Secretary under the seal of the Department of Transportation is competent evidence in an investigation by the Secretary and in a judicial proceeding.

§40115. Withholding information

(a) OBJECTIONS TO DISCLOSURE.—(1) A person may object to the public disclosure of information—

(A) in a record filed under this part; or

(B) obtained under this part by the Secretary of Transportation or State or the United States Postal Service.

(2) An objection must be in writing and must state the reasons for the objection. The Secretary of Transportation or State or the Postal Service shall order the information withheld from public disclosure when the appropriate Secretary or the Postal Service decides that disclosure of the information would—

(A) prejudice the United States Government in preparing and presenting its position in international negotiations; or

(B) have an adverse effect on the competitive position of an air carrier in foreign air transportation.

(b) WITHHOLDING INFORMATION FROM CONGRESS.—This section does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

§40116. State taxation

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "State" includes the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, and a political authority of at least 2 States.

(b) PROHIBITIONS.—Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section and section 40117 of this title, a State or political subdivision of a State may not levy or collect a tax, fee, head charge, or other charge on—

(1) an individual traveling in air commerce;

(2) the transportation of an individual traveling in air commerce;

(3) the sale of air transportation; or

(4) the gross receipts from that air commerce or transportation.

(c) AIRCRAFT TAKING OFF OR LANDING IN STATE.—A State or political subdivision of a State may levy or collect a tax on or related to a flight of a commercial aircraft or an activity or service on the aircraft only if the aircraft takes off or lands in the State or political subdivision as part of the flight.

(d) UNREASONABLE BURDENS AND DISCRIMINATION AGAINST INTERSTATE COMMERCE.—(1) In this subsection—

(A) "air carrier transportation property" means property (as defined by the Secretary of Transportation) that an air carrier providing air transportation owns or uses.

(B) "assessment" means valuation for a property tax levied by a taxing district.

(C) "assessment jurisdiction" means a geographical area in a State used in determining the assessed value of property for ad valorem taxation.

(D) "commercial and industrial property" means property (except transportation property and land used primarily for agriculture or timber growing) devoted to a commercial or industrial use and subject to a property tax levy.

(2)(A) A State, political subdivision of a State, or authority acting for a State or political subdivision may not do any of the following acts because those acts unreasonably burden and discriminate against interstate commerce:

(i) assess air carrier transportation property at a value that has a higher ratio to the true market value of the property than the ratio that the assessed value of other commercial and industrial property of the same type in the same assessment jurisdiction has to the true market value of the other commercial and industrial property.

(ii) levy or collect a tax on an assessment that may not be made under clause (i) of this subparagraph.

(iii) levy or collect an ad valorem property tax on air carrier transportation property at a tax rate greater than the tax rate applicable to commercial and industrial property in the same assessment jurisdiction.

(B) Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph does not apply to an in lieu tax completely used for airport and aeronautical purposes.

(e) OTHER ALLOWABLE TAXES AND CHARGES.—Except as provided in subsection (d) of this section, a State or political subdivision of a State may levy or collect—

(1) taxes (except those taxes enumerated in subsection (b) of this section), including property taxes, net income taxes, franchise taxes, and sales or use taxes on the sale of goods or services; and

(2) reasonable rental charges, landing fees, and other service charges from aircraft operators for using airport facilities of an airport owned or operated by that State or subdivision.

(f) PAY OF AIR CARRIER EMPLOYEES.—(1) In this subsection—

(A) "pay" means money received by an employee for services.

(B) "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and a territory or possession of the United States.

(C) an employee is deemed to have earned 50 percent of the employee's pay in a State or political subdivision of a State in which the scheduled flight time of the employee in the State or subdivision is more than 50 percent of the total scheduled flight time of the employee when employed during the calendar year.

(2) The pay of an employee of an air carrier having regularly assigned duties on aircraft in at least 2 States is subject to the income tax laws of only the following:

(A) the State or political subdivision of the State that is the residence of the employee.

(B) the State or political subdivision of the State in which the employee earns more than 50 percent of the pay received by the employee from the carrier.

§40117. Passenger facility fees

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "airport", "commercial service airport", and "public agency" have the same meanings given those terms in section 47102 of this title.

(2) "eligible agency" means a public agency that controls a commercial service airport.

(3) "eligible airport-related project" means a project—

(A) for airport development or airport planning under subchapter I of chapter 471 of this title;

(B) for terminal development described in section 47110(d) of this title;

(C) for airport noise capability planning under section 47505 of this title;

(D) to carry out noise compatibility measures eligible for assistance under section 47504 of this title, whether or not a program for those measures has been approved under section 47504; and

(E) for constructing gates and related areas at which passengers board or exit aircraft.

(4) "passenger facility fee" means a fee imposed under this section.

(5) "passenger facility revenue" means revenue derived from a passenger facility fee.

(b) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may authorize under this section an eligible agency to impose a passenger facility fee of $1, $2, or $3 on each paying passenger of an air carrier or foreign air carrier boarding an aircraft at an airport the agency controls to finance an eligible airport-related project, including making payments for debt service on indebtedness incurred to carry out the project, to be carried out in connection with the airport or any other airport the agency controls.

(2) A State, political subdivision of a State, or authority of a State or political subdivision that is not the eligible agency may not regulate or prohibit the imposition or collection of a passenger facility fee or the use of the passenger facility revenue.

(3) A passenger facility fee may be imposed on a passenger of an air carrier or foreign air carrier originating or connecting at the commercial service airport that the agency controls.

(c) APPLICATIONS.—(1) An eligible agency must submit to the Secretary an application for authority to impose a passenger facility fee. The application shall contain information and be in the form that the Secretary may require by regulation.

(2) Before submitting an application, the eligible agency must provide reasonable notice to, and an opportunity for consultation with, air carriers and foreign air carriers operating at the airport. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations that define reasonable notice and contain at least the following requirements:

(A) The agency must provide written notice of individual projects being considered for financing by a passenger facility fee and the date and location of a meeting to present the projects to air carriers and foreign air carriers operating at the airport.

(B) Not later than 30 days after written notice is provided under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, each air carrier and foreign air carrier operating at the airport must provide to the agency written notice of receipt of the notice. Failure of a carrier to provide the notice may be deemed certification of agreement with the project by the carrier under subparagraph (D) of this paragraph.

(C) Not later than 45 days after written notice is provided under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the agency must conduct a meeting to provide air carriers and foreign air carriers with descriptions of projects and justifications and a detailed financial plan for projects.

(D) Not later than 30 days after the meeting, each air carrier and foreign air carrier must provide to the agency certification of agreement or disagreement with projects (or total plan for the projects). Failure to provide the certification is deemed certification of agreement with the project by the carrier. A certification of disagreement is void if it does not contain the reasons for the disagreement.

(3) After receiving an application, the Secretary shall provide notice and an opportunity to air carriers, foreign air carriers, and other interested persons to comment on the application. The Secretary shall make a final decision on the application not later than 120 days after receiving it.

(d) LIMITATIONS ON APPROVING APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary may approve an application that an eligible agency has submitted under subsection (c) of this section to finance a specific project only if the Secretary finds, based on the application, that—

(1) the amount and duration of the proposed passenger facility fee will result in revenue (including interest and other returns on the revenue) that is not more than the amount necessary to finance the specific project; and

(2) each project is an eligible airport-related project that will—

(A) preserve or enhance capacity, safety, or security of the national air transportation system;

(B) reduce noise resulting from an airport that is part of the system; or

(C) provide an opportunity for enhanced competition between or among air carriers and foreign air carriers.

(e) LIMITATIONS ON IMPOSING FEES.—(1) An eligible agency may impose a passenger facility fee only—

(A) if the Secretary approves an application that the agency has submitted under subsection (c) of this section; and

(B) subject to terms the Secretary may prescribe to carry out the objectives of this section.

(2) A passenger facility fee may not be collected from a passenger—

(A) for more than 2 boardings on a one-way trip or a trip in each direction of a round trip;

(B) for the boarding to an eligible place under subchapter II of chapter 417 of this title for which essential air service compensation is paid under subchapter II; and

(C) for a project the Secretary does not approve under this section before October 1, 1993, if, during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, the amount available for obligation under subchapter II of chapter 417 of this title is less than $38,600,000, except that this clause—

(i) does not apply if the amount available for obligation under subchapter II of chapter 417 of this title is less than $38,600,000 because of sequestration or other general appropriations reductions applied proportionately to appropriations accounts throughout an appropriation law; and

(ii) does not affect the authority of the Secretary to approve the imposition of a fee or the use of revenues, derived from a fee imposed under an approval made under this section, by a public agency that has received an approval to impose a fee under this section before September 30, 1993, regardless of whether the fee is being imposed on September 30, 1993.

(f) LIMITATIONS ON CONTRACTS, LEASES, AND USE AGREEMENTS.—(1) A contract between an air carrier or foreign air carrier and an eligible agency made at any time may not impair the authority of the agency to impose a passenger facility fee or to use the passenger facility revenue as provided in this section.

(2) A project financed with a passenger facility fee may not be subject to an exclusive long-term lease or use agreement of an air carrier or foreign air carrier, as defined by regulations of the Secretary.

(3) A lease or use agreement of an air carrier or foreign air carrier related to a project whose construction or expansion was financed with a passenger facility fee may not restrict the eligible agency from financing, developing, or assigning new capacity at the airport with passenger facility revenue.

(g) TREATMENT OF REVENUE.—(1) Passenger facility revenue is not airport revenue for purposes of establishing a price under a contract between an eligible agency and an air carrier or foreign air carrier.

(2) An eligible agency may not include in its price base the part of the capital costs of a project paid for by using passenger facility revenue to establish a price under a contract between the agency and an air carrier or foreign air carrier.

(3) For a project for terminal development, gates and related areas, or a facility occupied or used by at least one air carrier or foreign air carrier on an exclusive or preferential basis, a price payable by an air carrier or foreign air carrier using the facilities must at least equal the price paid by an air carrier or foreign air carrier using a similar facility at the airport that was not financed with passenger facility revenue.

(h) COMPLIANCE.—(1) As necessary to ensure compliance with this section, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations requiring recordkeeping and auditing of accounts maintained by an air carrier or foreign air carrier and its agent collecting a passenger facility fee and by the eligible agency imposing the fee.

(2) The Secretary periodically shall audit and review the use by an eligible agency of passenger facility revenue. After review and a public hearing, the Secretary may end any part of the authority of the agency to impose a passenger facility fee to the extent the Secretary decides that the revenue is not being used as provided in this section.

(3) The Secretary may set off amounts necessary to ensure compliance with this section against amounts otherwise payable to an eligible agency under subchapter I of chapter 471 of this title if the Secretary decides a passenger facility fee is excessive or that passenger facility revenue is not being used as provided in this section.

(i) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section. The regulations—

(1) may prescribe the time and form by which a passenger facility fee takes effect; and

(2) shall—

(A) require an air carrier or foreign air carrier and its agent to collect a passenger facility fee that an eligible agency imposes under this section;

(B) establish procedures for handling and remitting money collected;

(C) ensure that the money, less a uniform amount the Secretary determines reflects the average necessary and reasonable expenses (net of interest accruing to the carrier and agent after collection and before remittance) incurred in collecting and handling the fee, is paid promptly to the eligible agency for which they are collected; and

(D) require that the amount collected for any air transportation be noted on the ticket for that air transportation.

§40118. Government-financed air transportation

(a) TRANSPORTATION BY AIR CARRIERS HOLDING CERTIFICATES.—A department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government shall take necessary steps to ensure that the transportation of passengers and property by air is provided by an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title if—

(1) the department, agency, or instrumentality—

(A) obtains the transportation for itself or in carrying out an arrangement under which payment is made by the Government or payment is made from amounts provided for the use of the Government; or

(B) provides the transportation to or for a foreign country or international or other organization without reimbursement;

(2) the transportation is authorized by the certificate or by regulation or exemption of the Secretary of Transportation; and

(3) the air carrier is—

(A) available, if the transportation is between a place in the United States and a place outside the United States; or

(B) reasonably available, if the transportation is between 2 places outside the United States.

(b) TRANSPORTATION BY FOREIGN AIR CARRIERS.—This section does not preclude the transportation of passengers and property by a foreign air carrier if the transportation is provided under a bilateral or multilateral air transportation agreement to which the Government and the government of a foreign country are parties if the agreement—

(1) is consistent with the goals for international aviation policy of section 40101(e) of this title; and

(2) provides for the exchange of rights or benefits of similar magnitude.

(c) PROOF.—The Comptroller General shall allow the expenditure of an appropriation for transportation in violation of this section only when satisfactory proof is presented showing the necessity for the transportation.

(d) TRANSPORTATION BY FOREIGN AIR CARRIERS.—Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (c) of this section, any amount appropriated to the Secretary of State, the Director of the United States Information Agency, the Director of the United States International Development Cooperation Agency, or the Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency may be used to pay for the transportation of an officer or employee of the Department of State or one of those agencies, a dependent of the officer or employee, and accompanying baggage, by a foreign air carrier when the transportation is between 2 places outside the United States.

(e) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.—This section does not affect the application of the antidiscrimination provisions of this part.

§40119. Security and research and development activities

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct research (including behavioral research) and development activities appropriate to develop, modify, test, and evaluate a system, procedure, facility, or device to protect passengers and property against acts of criminal violence and aircraft piracy.

(A) be an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy;

(B) reveal a trade secret or privileged or confidential commercial or financial information; or

(C) be detrimental to the safety of passengers in air transportation.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not authorize information to be withheld from a committee of Congress authorized to have the information.

(b) THROUGH SERVICE AND JOINT TRANSPORTATION.—A citizen of the United States providing transportation in a State of passengers or property as a common carrier for compensation with aircraft capable of carrying at least 30 passengers, under authority granted by the appropriate State authority—

(1) may provide transportation for passengers and property that includes through service by the citizen over its routes in the State and in air transportation by an air carrier or foreign air carrier; and

(2) subject to sections 41309 and 42111 of this title, may make an agreement with an air carrier or foreign air carrier to provide the joint transportation.

(c) PROPRIETARY OR EXCLUSIVE RIGHT NOT CONFERRED.—A certificate issued under this chapter does not confer a proprietary or exclusive right to use airspace, an airway of the United States, or an air navigation facility.

§41102. General, temporary, and charter air transportation certificates of air carriers

(a) ISSUANCE.—The Secretary of Transportation may issue a certificate of public convenience and necessity to a citizen of the United States authorizing the citizen to provide any part of the following air transportation the citizen has applied for under section 41108 of this title:

(1) air transportation as an air carrier.

(2) temporary air transportation as an air carrier for a limited period.

(3) charter air transportation as a charter air carrier.

(b) FINDINGS REQUIRED FOR ISSUANCE.—(1) Before issuing a certificate under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary must find that the citizen is fit, willing, and able to provide the transportation to be authorized by the certificate and to comply with this part and regulations of the Secretary.

(2) In addition to the findings under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary, before issuing a certificate under subsection (a) of this section for foreign air transportation, must find that the transportation is consistent with the public convenience and necessity.

(c) TEMPORARY CERTIFICATES.—The Secretary may issue a certificate under subsection (a) of this section for interstate air transportation (except the transportation of passengers) or foreign air transportation for a temporary period of time (whether the application is for permanent or temporary authority) when the Secretary decides that a test period is desirable—

(1) to decide if the projected services, efficiencies, methods, and prices and the projected results will materialize and remain for a sustained period of time; or

(2) to evaluate the new transportation.

(d) FOREIGN AIR TRANSPORTATION.—The Secretary shall submit each decision authorizing the provision of foreign air transportation to the President under section 41307 of this title.

§41103. All-cargo air transportation certificates of air carriers

(a) APPLICATIONS.—A citizen of the United States may apply to the Secretary of Transportation for a certificate authorizing the citizen to provide all-property air transportation. The application must contain information and be in the form the Secretary by regulation requires.

(b) ISSUANCE.—Not later than 180 days after an application for a certificate is filed under this section, the Secretary shall issue the certificate to a citizen of the United States authorizing the citizen, as an air carrier, to provide any part of the all-cargo air transportation applied for unless the Secretary finds that the citizen is not fit, willing, and able to provide the all-cargo air transportation to be authorized by the certificate and to comply with regulations of the Secretary.

(c) TERMS.—The Secretary may impose terms the Secretary considers necessary when issuing a certificate under this section. However, the Secretary may not impose terms that restrict the places served or prices charged by the holder of the certificate.

(d) EXEMPTIONS AND STATUS.—A citizen issued a certificate under this section—

(1) is exempt in providing the transportation under the certificate from the requirements of—

(A) section 41101(a)(1) of this title and regulations or procedures prescribed under section 41101(a)(1); and

(B) other provisions of this part and regulations or procedures prescribed under those provisions when the Secretary finds under regulations of the Secretary that the exemption is appropriate; and

(2) is an air carrier under this part except to the extent the carrier is exempt under this section from a requirement of this part.

§41104. Additional limitations and requirements of charter air carriers

(a) RESTRICTIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe a regulation or issue an order restricting the marketability, flexibility, accessibility, or variety of charter air transportation provided under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title only to the extent required by the public interest. A regulation prescribed or order issued under this subsection may not be more restrictive than a regulation related to charter air transportation that was in effect on October 1, 1978.

(b) ALASKA.—An air carrier holding a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title may provide charter air transportation between places in Alaska only to the extent the Secretary decides the transportation is required by public convenience and necessity. The Secretary may make that decision when issuing, amending, or modifying the certificate. This subsection does not apply to a certificate issued under section 41102 to a citizen of the United States who, before July 1, 1977—

(1) maintained a principal place of business in Alaska; and

(2) conducted air transport operations between places in Alaska with aircraft with a certificate for gross takeoff weight of more than 40,000 pounds.

(c) SUSPENSIONS.—(1) The Secretary shall suspend for not more than 30 days any part of the certificate of a charter air carrier if the Secretary decides that the failure of the carrier to comply with the requirements described in sections 41110(e) and 41112 of this title, or a regulation or order of the Secretary under section 41110(e) or 41112, requires immediate suspension in the interest of the rights, welfare, or safety of the public. The Secretary may act under this paragraph without notice or a hearing.

(2) The Secretary shall begin immediately a hearing to decide if the certificate referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection should be amended, modified, suspended, or revoked. Until the hearing is completed, the Secretary may suspend the certificate for additional periods totaling not more than 60 days. If the Secretary decides that the carrier is complying with the requirements described in sections 41110(e) and 41112 of this title and regulations and orders under sections 41110(e) and 41112, the Secretary immediately may end the suspension period and proceeding begun under this subsection. However, the Secretary is not prevented from imposing a civil penalty on the carrier for violating the requirements described in section 41110(e) or 41112 or a regulation or order under section 41110(e) or 41112.

§41105. Transfers of certificates

(a) GENERAL.—A certificate issued under section 41102 of this title may be transferred only when the Secretary of Transportation approves the transfer as being consistent with the public interest.

(b) CERTIFICATION TO CONGRESS.—When a certificate is transferred, the Secretary shall certify to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives that the transfer is consistent with the public interest. The Secretary shall include with the certification a report analyzing the effects of the transfer on—

(1) the viability of each carrier involved in the transfer;

(2) competition in the domestic airline industry; and

(3) the trade position of the United States in the international air transportation market.

§41106. Airlift service

(a) GENERAL.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, the transportation of passengers or property by transport category aircraft in interstate air transportation obtained by the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of a military department through a contract of at least 31 days for airlift service in the United States may be provided only by an air carrier that—

(A) has aircraft in the civil reserve air fleet or offers to place the aircraft in that fleet; and

(B) holds a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall act as expeditiously as possible on an application for a certificate under section 41102 of this title to provide airlift service.

(b) EXCEPTION.—When the Secretary of Defense decides that no air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 is capable of providing, and willing to provide, the airlift service, the Secretary of Defense may make a contract to provide the service with an air carrier not having a certificate.

§41107. Transportation of mail

When the United States Postal Service finds that the needs of the Postal Service require the transportation of mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska, in addition to the transportation of mail authorized under certificates in effect, the Postal Service shall certify that finding to the Secretary of Transportation with a statement about the additional transportation and facilities necessary to provide the additional transportation. A copy of each certification and statement shall be posted for at least 20 days in the office of the Secretary. After notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary shall issue a new certificate under section 41102 of this title, or amend or modify an existing certificate under section 41110(a)(2)(A) of this title, to provide the additional transportation and facilities if the Secretary finds the additional transportation is required by the public convenience and necessity.

§41108. Applications for certificates

(a) FORM, CONTENTS, AND PROOF OF SERVICE.—To be issued a certificate of public convenience and necessity under section 41102 of this title, a citizen of the United States must apply to the Secretary of Transportation. The application must—

(1) be in the form and contain information required by regulations of the Secretary; and

(2) be accompanied by proof of service on interested persons as required by regulations of the Secretary and on each community that may be affected by the issuance of the certificate.

(b) NOTICE, RESPONSE, AND ACTIONS ON APPLICATIONS.—(1) When an application is filed, the Secretary shall post a notice of the application in the office of the Secretary and give notice of the application to other persons as required by regulations of the Secretary. An interested person may file a response with the Secretary opposing or supporting the issuance of the certificate. Not later than 90 days after the application is filed, the Secretary shall—

(A) provide an opportunity for a public hearing on the application;

(B) begin the procedure under section 41111 of this title; or

(C) dismiss the application on its merits.

(2) An order of dismissal issued by the Secretary under paragraph (1)(C) of this subsection is a final order and may be reviewed judicially under section 46110 of this title.

(3) If the Secretary provides an opportunity for a hearing under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection, an initial or recommended decision shall be issued not later than 150 days after the date the Secretary provides the opportunity. The Secretary shall issue a final order on the application not later than 90 days after the decision is issued. However, if the Secretary does not act within the 90-day period, the initial or recommended decision on an application to provide—

(A) interstate air transportation is a final order and may be reviewed judicially under section 46110 of this title; and

(B) foreign air transportation shall be submitted to the President under section 41307 of this title.

(4) If the Secretary acts under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection, the Secretary shall issue a final order on the application not later than 180 days after beginning the procedure on the application.

(5) If a citizen applying for a certificate does not meet the procedural schedule adopted by the Secretary in a proceeding, the Secretary may extend the period for acting under paragraphs (3) and (4) of this subsection by a period equal to the period of delay caused by the citizen. In addition to an extension under this paragraph, an initial or recommended decision under paragraph (3) of this subsection may be delayed for not more than 30 days in extraordinary circumstances.

(c) PROOF REQUIREMENTS.—(1) A citizen applying for a certificate must prove that the citizen is fit, willing, and able to provide the transportation referred to in section 41102 of this title and to comply with this part.

(2) A person opposing a citizen applying for a certificate must prove that the transportation referred to in section 41102(b)(2) of this title is not consistent with the public convenience and necessity. The transportation is deemed to be consistent with the public convenience and necessity unless the Secretary finds, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the transportation is not consistent with the public convenience and necessity.

§41109. Terms of certificates

(a) GENERAL.—(1) Each certificate issued under section 41102 of this title shall specify the type of transportation to be provided.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation—

(A) may prescribe terms for providing air transportation under the certificate that the Secretary finds may be required in the public interest; but

(B) may not prescribe a term preventing an air carrier from adding or changing schedules, equipment, accommodations, and facilities for providing the authorized transportation to satisfy business development and public demand.

(3) A certificate issued under section 41102 of this title to provide foreign air transportation shall specify the places between which the air carrier is authorized to provide the transportation only to the extent the Secretary considers practicable and otherwise only shall specify each general route to be followed. The Secretary shall authorize an air carrier holding a certificate to provide foreign air transportation to handle and transport mail of countries other than the United States.

(4) A certificate issued under section 41102 of this title to provide foreign charter air transportation shall specify the places between which the air carrier is authorized to provide the transportation only to the extent the Secretary considers practicable and otherwise only shall specify each geographical area in which, or between which, the transportation may be provided.

(b) MODIFYING TERMS.—(1) An air carrier may file with the Secretary an application to modify any term of its certificate issued under section 41102 of this title to provide interstate or foreign air transportation. Not later than 60 days after an application is filed, the Secretary shall—

(A) provide the carrier an opportunity for an oral evidentiary hearing on the record; or

(B) begin to consider the application under section 41111 of this title.

(2) The Secretary shall modify each term the Secretary finds to be inconsistent with the criteria under section 40101(a) and (b) of this title.

(3) An application under this subsection may not be dismissed under section 41108(b)(1)(C) of this title.

§41110. Effective periods and amendments, modifications, suspensions, and revocations of certificates

(a) GENERAL.—(1) Each certificate issued under section 41102 of this title is effective from the date specified in it and remains in effect until—

(A) the Secretary of Transportation suspends or revokes the certificate under this section;

(B) the end of the period the Secretary specifies for an air carrier having a certificate of temporary authority issued under section 41102(a)(2) of this title; or

(C) the Secretary certifies that transportation is no longer being provided under a certificate.

(2) On application or on the initiative of the Secretary and after notice and an opportunity for a hearing or, except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, under section 41111 of this title, the Secretary may—

(A) amend, modify, or suspend any part of a certificate if the Secretary finds the public convenience and necessity require amendment, modification, or suspension; and

(B) revoke any part of a certificate if the Secretary finds that the holder of the certificate intentionally does not comply with this chapter, sections 41308–41310(a), 41501, 41503, 41504, 41506, 41510, 41511, 41701, 41702, 41705–41709, 41711, 41712, and 41731–41742, chapter 419, subchapter II of chapter 421, and section 46301(b) of this title, a regulation or order of the Secretary under any of those provisions, or a term of its certificate.

(3) The Secretary may revoke a certificate under paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection only if the holder of the certificate does not comply, within a reasonable time the Secretary specifies, with an order to the holder requiring compliance.

(4) A certificate to provide foreign air transportation may not be amended, modified, suspended, or revoked under section 41111 of this title if the holder of the certificate requests an oral evidentiary hearing or the Secretary finds, under all the facts and circumstances, that the hearing is required in the public interest.

(b) ALL-CARGO AIR TRANSPORTATION.—The Secretary may order that a certificate issued under section 41103 of this title authorizing all-cargo air transportation is ineffective if, after notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary finds that the transportation is not provided to the minimum extent specified by the Secretary.

(c) FOREIGN AIR TRANSPORTATION.—(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(2)–(4) of this section, after notice and a reasonable opportunity for the affected air carrier to present its views, but without a hearing, the Secretary may suspend or revoke the authority of an air carrier to provide foreign air transportation to a place under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title if the carrier—

(A) notifies the Secretary, under section 41734(a) of this title or a regulation of the Secretary, that it intends to suspend all transportation to that place; or

(B) does not provide regularly scheduled transportation to the place for 90 days immediately before the date the Secretary notifies the carrier of the action the Secretary proposes.

(2) Paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection does not apply to a place provided seasonal transportation comparable to the transportation provided during the prior year.

(d) TEMPORARY CERTIFICATES.—On application or on the initiative of the Secretary, the Secretary may—

(1) review the performance of an air carrier issued a certificate under section 41102(c) of this title on the basis that the air carrier will provide innovative or low-priced air transportation under the certificate; and

(2) amend, modify, suspend, or revoke the certificate or authority under subsection (a)(2) or (c) of this section if the air carrier has not provided, or is not providing, the transportation.

(e) CONTINUING REQUIREMENTS.—After notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary shall amend, modify, suspend, or revoke any part of a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title if the Secretary finds that the air carrier—

(1) is not fit, willing, and able to continue to provide the transportation authorized by the certificate and to comply with this part and regulations of the Secretary; or

(2) does not file reports necessary for the Secretary to decide if the carrier is complying with the requirements of clause (1) of this subsection.

(f) ILLEGAL IMPORTATION OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.—The Secretary—

(1) in consultation with appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, shall reexamine immediately the fitness of an air carrier that—

(A) violates the laws and regulations of the United States related to the illegal importation of a controlled substance; or

(B) does not adopt available measures to prevent the illegal importation of a controlled substance into the United States on its aircraft; and

(2) when appropriate, shall amend, modify, suspend, or revoke the certificate of the carrier issued under this chapter.

(g) RESPONSES.—An interested person may file a response with the Secretary opposing or supporting the amendment, modification, suspension, or revocation of a certificate under subsection (a) of this section.

§41111. Simplified procedure to apply for, amend, modify, suspend, and transfer certificates

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations that simplify the procedure for—

(A) acting on an application for a certificate to provide air transportation under section 41102 of this title; and

(B) amending, modifying, suspending, or transferring any part of that certificate under section 41105 or 41110(a) or (c) of this title.

(2) Regulations under this section shall provide for notice and an opportunity for each interested person to file appropriate written evidence and argument. An oral evidentiary hearing is not required to be provided under this section.

(b) WHEN SIMPLIFIED PROCEDURE USED.—The Secretary may use the simplified procedure to act on an application for a certificate to provide air transportation under section 41102 of this title, or to amend, modify, suspend, or transfer any part of that certificate under section 41105 or 41110(a) or (c) of this title, when the Secretary decides the use of the procedure is in the public interest.

(c) CONTENTS.—(1) To the extent the Secretary finds practicable, regulations under this section shall include each standard the Secretary will apply when—

(A) deciding whether to use the simplified procedure; and

(B) making a decision on an action in which the procedure is used.

(2) The regulations may provide that written evidence and argument may be filed under section 41108(b) of this title as a part of a response opposing or supporting the issuance of a certificate.

§41112. Liability insurance and financial responsibility

(a) LIABILITY INSURANCE.—The Secretary of Transportation may issue a certificate to a citizen of the United States to provide air transportation as an air carrier under section 41102 of this title only if the citizen complies with regulations and orders of the Secretary governing the filing of an insurance policy or self-insurance plan approved by the Secretary. The policy or plan must be sufficient to pay, not more than the amount of the insurance, for bodily injury to, or death of, an individual or for loss of, or damage to, property of others, resulting from the operation or maintenance of the aircraft under the certificate. A certificate does not remain in effect unless the carrier complies with this subsection.

(b) FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY.—To protect passengers and shippers using an aircraft operated by an air carrier issued a certificate under section 41102 of this title, the Secretary may require the carrier to file a performance bond or equivalent security in the amount and on terms the Secretary prescribes. The bond or security must be sufficient to ensure the carrier adequately will pay the passengers and shippers when the transportation the carrier agrees to provide is not provided. The Secretary shall prescribe the amounts to be paid under this subsection.

After notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary may amend, modify, suspend, or revoke the permit if the Secretary finds that action to be in the public interest.

(b) SUSPENSIONS AND RESTRICTIONS.—Without a hearing, but subject to the approval of the President, the Secretary—

(1) may suspend summarily the permits of foreign air carriers of a foreign country, or amend, modify, or limit the operations of the foreign air carriers under the permits, when the Secretary finds—

(A) the action is in the public interest; and

(B) the government, an aeronautical authority, or a foreign air carrier of the foreign country, over the objection of the United States Government, has—

(i) limited or denied the operating rights of an air carrier; or

The President may disapprove the decision of the Secretary only if the reason for disapproval is based on foreign relations or national defense considerations that are under the jurisdiction of the President. The President may not disapprove a decision of the Secretary if the reason is economic or related to carrier selection. A decision of the Secretary—

(b) APPROVAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall approve an agreement, request, modification, or cancellation referred to in subsection (a) of this section when the Secretary finds it is not adverse to the public interest and is not in violation of this part. However, the Secretary shall disapprove—

(1) or, after periodic review, end approval of, an agreement, request, modification, or cancellation, that substantially reduces or eliminates competition unless the Secretary finds that—

(A) the agreement, request, modification, or cancellation is necessary to meet a serious transportation need or to achieve important public benefits (including international comity and foreign policy considerations); and

(B) the transportation need cannot be met or those benefits cannot be achieved by reasonably available alternatives that are materially less anticompetitive; or

(2) an agreement that—

(A) is between an air carrier not directly operating aircraft in foreign air transportation and a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title; and

(B) governs the compensation the common carrier may receive for the transportation.

(c) NOTICE AND OPPORTUNITY TO RESPOND OR FOR HEARING.—(1) When an agreement, request, modification, or cancellation is filed, the Secretary of Transportation shall give the Attorney General and the Secretary of State written notice of, and an opportunity to submit written comments about, the filing. On the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or on request of the Attorney General or Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation may conduct a hearing to decide whether an agreement, request, modification, or cancellation is consistent with this part whether or not it was approved previously.

(2) In a proceeding before the Secretary of Transportation applying standards under subsection (b)(1) of this section, a party opposing an agreement, request, modification, or cancellation has the burden of proving that it substantially reduces or eliminates competition and that less anticompetitive alternatives are available. The party defending the agreement, request, modification, or cancellation has the burden of proving the transportation need or public benefits.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation shall include the findings required by subsection (b)(1) of this section in an order of the Secretary approving or disapproving an agreement, request, modification, or cancellation.

§41310. Discriminatory practices

(a) PROHIBITION.—An air carrier or foreign air carrier may not subject a person, place, port, or type of traffic in foreign air transportation to unreasonable discrimination.

(b) REVIEW AND NEGOTIATION OF DISCRIMINATORY FOREIGN CHARGES.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall survey charges imposed on an air carrier by the government of a foreign country or another foreign entity for the use of airport property or airway property in foreign air transportation. If the Secretary of Transportation decides that a charge is discriminatory, the Secretary promptly shall report the decision to the Secretary of State. The Secretaries of State and Transportation promptly shall begin negotiations with the appropriate government to end the discrimination. If the discrimination is not ended in a reasonable time through negotiation, the Secretary of Transportation shall establish a compensating charge equal to the discriminatory charge. With the approval of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury shall impose the compensating charge on a foreign air carrier of that country as a condition to accepting the general declaration of the aircraft of the foreign air carrier when it lands or takes off.

(2) The Secretary of the Treasury shall maintain an account to credit money collected under paragraph (1) of this subsection. An air carrier shall be paid from the account an amount certified by the Secretary of Transportation to compensate the air carrier for the discriminatory charge paid to the government.

(c) ACTIONS AGAINST DISCRIMINATORY ACTIVITY.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may take actions the Secretary considers are in the public interest to eliminate an activity of a government of a foreign country or another foreign entity, including a foreign air carrier, when the Secretary, on the initiative of the Secretary or on complaint, decides that the activity—

(A) is an unjustifiable or unreasonable discriminatory, predatory, or anticompetitive practice against an air carrier; or

(B) imposes an unjustifiable or unreasonable restriction on access of an air carrier to a foreign market.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation may deny, amend, modify, suspend, revoke, or transfer under paragraph (1) of this subsection a foreign air carrier permit or tariff under section 41302, 41303, 41304(a), 41504(c), 41507, or 41509 of this title.

(d) FILING OF, AND ACTING ON, COMPLAINTS.—(1) An air carrier or a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government may file a complaint under subsection (c) of this section with the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary shall approve, deny, or dismiss the complaint, set the complaint for a hearing or investigation, or begin another proceeding proposing remedial action not later than 60 days after receiving the complaint. The Secretary may extend the period for acting for additional periods totaling not more than 30 days if the Secretary decides that with additional time it is likely that a complaint can be resolved satisfactorily through negotiations with the government of the foreign country or foreign entity. The Secretary must act not later than 90 days after receiving the complaint. However, the Secretary may extend this 90-day period for not more than an additional 90 days if, on the last day of the initial 90-day period, the Secretary finds that—

(A) negotiations with the government have progressed to a point that a satisfactory resolution of the complaint appears imminent;

(B) an air carrier has not been subjected to economic injury by the government or entity as a result of filing the complaint; and

(C) the public interest requires additional time before the Secretary acts on the complaint.

(2) In carrying out paragraph (1) of this subsection and subsection (c) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(A) solicit the views of the Secretaries of Commerce and State and the United States Trade Representative;

(B) give an affected air carrier or foreign air carrier reasonable notice and an opportunity to submit written evidence and arguments within the time limits of this subsection; and

(C) submit to the President under section 41307 or 41509(f) of this title actions proposed by the Secretary of Transportation.

(e) REVIEW.—(1) The Secretaries of State, the Treasury, and Transportation and the heads of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government shall keep under review, to the extent of each of their jurisdictions, each form of discrimination or unfair competitive practice to which an air carrier is subject when providing foreign air transportation. Each Secretary and head shall—

(A) take appropriate action to eliminate any discrimination or unfair competitive practice found to exist; and

(B) request Congress to enact legislation when the authority to eliminate the discrimination or unfair practice is inadequate.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall report to Congress annually on each action taken under paragraph (1) of this subsection and on the continuing program to eliminate discrimination and unfair competitive practices. The Secretaries of State and the Treasury each shall give the Secretary of Transportation information necessary to prepare the report.

(f) REPORTS.—Not later than 30 days after acting on a complaint under this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall report to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate on action taken under this section on the complaint.

§41501. Establishing reasonable prices, classifications, rules, practices, and divisions of joint prices for foreign air transportation

Every air carrier and foreign air carrier shall establish, comply with, and enforce—

(1) reasonable prices, classifications, rules, and practices related to foreign air transportation; and

(2) for joint prices established for foreign air transportation, reasonable divisions of those prices among the participating air carriers or foreign air carriers without unreasonably discriminating against any of those carriers.

§41502. Establishing joint prices for through routes with other common carriers

(a) JOINT PRICES.—An air carrier may establish reasonable joint prices and through service with another common carrier. However, an air carrier not directly operating aircraft in air transportation (except an air express company) may not establish under this section a joint price for the transportation of property with a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title.

(b) PRICES, CLASSIFICATIONS, RULES, AND PRACTICES AND DIVISIONS OF JOINT PRICES.—For through service by an air carrier and a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title, the participating carriers shall establish—

(1) reasonable prices and reasonable classifications, rules, and practices affecting those prices or the value of the transportation provided under those prices; and

(2) for joint prices established for the through service, reasonable divisions of those joint prices among the participating carriers.

(c) STATEMENTS INCLUDED IN TARIFFS.—An air carrier and a common carrier subject to subtitle IV of this title that are participating in through service and joint prices shall include in their tariffs, filed with the Secretary of Transportation, a statement showing the through service and joint prices.

§41503. Establishing joint prices for through routes provided by State authorized carriers

Subject to sections 41309 and 42111 of this title, a citizen of the United States providing transportation under section 41101(b) of this title may make an agreement with an air carrier or foreign air carrier for joint prices for that transportation. The joint prices agreed to must be the lowest of—

(1) the sum of the applicable prices for—

(A) the part of the transportation provided in the State and approved by the appropriate State authority; and

(B) the part of the transportation provided by the air carrier or foreign air carrier;

(2) a joint price established and filed under section 41504 of this title; or

(3) a joint price prescribed by the Secretary of Transportation under section 41507 of this title.

§41504. Tariffs for foreign air transportation

(a) FILING AND CONTENTS.—In the way prescribed by regulation by the Secretary of Transportation, every air carrier and foreign air carrier shall file with the Secretary, publish, and keep open to public inspection, tariffs showing the prices for the foreign air transportation provided between places served by the carrier and provided between places served by the carrier and places served by another air carrier or foreign air carrier with which through service and joint prices have been established. A tariff—

(1) shall contain—

(A) to the extent the Secretary requires by regulation, a description of the classifications, rules, and practices related to the foreign air transportation;

(B) a statement of the prices in money of the United States; and

(C) other information the Secretary requires by regulation; and

(2) may contain—

(A) a statement of the prices in money that is not money of the United States; and

(B) information that is required under the laws of a foreign country in or to which the air carrier or foreign air carrier is authorized to operate.

(b) CHANGES.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, an air carrier or foreign air carrier may change a price or a classification, rule, or practice affecting that price or the value of the transportation provided under that price, specified in a tariff of the carrier for foreign air transportation only after 30 days after the carrier has filed, published, and posted notice of the proposed change in the same way as required for a tariff under subsection (a) of this section. However, the Secretary may prescribe an alternative notice requirement, of at least 25 days, to allow an air carrier or foreign air carrier to match a proposed change in a passenger fare or a charge of another air carrier or foreign air carrier. A notice under this paragraph must state plainly the change proposed and when the change will take effect.

(2) If the effect of a proposed change would be to begin a passenger fare that is outside of, or not covered by, the range of passenger fares specified under section 41509(e)(2) and (3) of this title, the proposed change may be put into effect only on the expiration of 60 days after the notice is filed under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(c) REJECTION OF CHANGES.—The Secretary may reject a tariff or tariff change that is not consistent with this section and regulations prescribed by the Secretary. A tariff or change that is rejected is void.

§41505. Uniform methods for establishing joint prices, and divisions of joint prices, applicable to commuter air carriers

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "commuter air carrier" means an air carrier providing transportation under section 40109(f) of this title that provides at least 5 scheduled roundtrips a week between the same 2 places.

(b) GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, when the Secretary of Transportation prescribes under section 41508 or 41509 of this title a uniform method generally applicable to establishing joint prices and divisions of joint prices for and between air carriers holding certificates issued under section 41102 of this title, the Secretary shall make that uniform method apply to establishing joint prices and divisions of joint prices for and between air carriers and commuter air carriers.

(c) NOTICE REQUIRED BEFORE MODIFYING, SUSPENDING, OR ENDING TRANSPORTATION.—A commuter air carrier that has an agreement with an air carrier to provide transportation for passengers and property that includes through service by the commuter air carrier over the commuter air carrier's routes and air transportation provided by the air carrier shall give the air carrier and the Secretary at least 90 days' notice before modifying, suspending, or ending the transportation. If the commuter air carrier does not give that notice, the uniform method of establishing joint prices and divisions of joint prices referred to in subsection (b) of this section does not apply to the commuter air carrier.

§41506. Price division filing requirements for foreign air transportation

Every air carrier and foreign air carrier shall keep currently on file with the Secretary of Transportation, if the Secretary requires, the established divisions of all joint prices for foreign air transportation in which the carrier participates.

§41507. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to change prices, classifications, rules, and practices for foreign air transportation

(a) GENERAL.—When the Secretary of Transportation decides that a price charged or received by an air carrier or foreign air carrier for foreign air transportation, or a classification, rule, or practice affecting that price or the value of the transportation provided under that price, is or will be unreasonably discriminatory, the Secretary may—

(1) change the price, classification, rule, or practice as necessary to correct the discrimination; and

(2) order the air carrier or foreign air carrier to stop charging or collecting the discriminatory price or carrying out the discriminatory classification, rule, or practice.

(b) WHEN SECRETARY MAY ACT.—The Secretary may act under this section on the Secretary's own initiative or on a complaint filed with the Secretary and only after notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

§41508. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to adjust divisions of joint prices for foreign air transportation

(a) GENERAL.—When the Secretary of Transportation decides that a division between air carriers, foreign air carriers, or both, of a joint price for foreign air transportation is or will be unreasonable or unreasonably discriminatory against any of those carriers, the Secretary shall prescribe a reasonable division of the joint price among those carriers. The Secretary may order the adjustment in the division of the joint price to be made retroactively to the date the complaint was filed, the date the order for an investigation was made, or a later date the Secretary decides is reasonable.

(b) WHEN SECRETARY MAY ACT.—The Secretary may act under this section on the Secretary's own initiative or on a complaint filed with the Secretary and only after notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

§ 41509. Authority of the Secretary of Transportation to suspend, cancel, and reject tariffs for foreign air transportation

(a) CANCELLATION AND REJECTION.—(1) On the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or on a complaint filed with the Secretary, the Secretary may conduct a hearing to decide whether a price for foreign air transportation contained in an existing or newly filed tariff of an air carrier or foreign air carrier, a classification, rule, or practice affecting that price, or the value of the transportation provided under that price, is lawful. The Secretary may begin the hearing at once and without an answer or another formal pleading by the air carrier or foreign air carrier, but only after reasonable notice. If, after the hearing, the Secretary decides that the price, classification, rule, or practice is or will be unreasonable or unreasonably discriminatory, the Secretary may cancel or reject the tariff and prevent the use of the price, classification, rule, or practice.

(2) With or without a hearing, the Secretary may cancel or reject an existing or newly filed tariff of a foreign air carrier and prevent the use of a price, classification, rule, or practice when the Secretary decides that the cancellation or rejection is in the public interest.

(3) In deciding whether to cancel or reject a tariff of an air carrier or foreign air carrier under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the effect of the price on the movement of traffic;

(B) the need in the public interest of adequate and efficient transportation by air carriers and foreign air carriers at the lowest cost consistent with providing the transportation;

(C) the standards prescribed under law related to the character and quality of transportation to be provided by air carriers and foreign air carriers;

(D) the inherent advantages of transportation by aircraft;

(E) the need of the air carrier and foreign air carrier for revenue sufficient to enable the air carrier and foreign air carrier, under honest, economical, and efficient management, to provide adequate and efficient air carrier and foreign air carrier transportation;

(F) whether the price will be predatory or tend to monopolize competition among air carriers and foreign air carriers in foreign air transportation;

(G) reasonably estimated or foreseeable future costs and revenues for the air carrier or foreign air carrier for a reasonably limited future period during which the price would be in effect; and

(H) other factors.

(b) SUSPENSION.—(1)(A) Pending a decision under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the Secretary may suspend a tariff and the use of a price contained in the tariff or a classification, rule, or practice affecting that price.

(B) The Secretary may suspend a tariff of a foreign air carrier and the use of a price, classification, rule, or practice when the suspension is in the public interest.

(2) A suspension becomes effective when the Secretary files with the tariff and delivers to the air carrier or foreign air carrier affected by the suspension a written statement of the reasons for the suspension. To suspend a tariff, reasonable notice of the suspension must be given to the affected carrier.

(3) The suspension of a newly filed tariff may be for periods totaling not more than 365 days after the date the tariff otherwise would go into effect. The suspension of an existing tariff may be for periods totaling not more than 365 days after the effective date of the suspension. The Secretary may rescind at any time the suspension of a newly filed tariff and allow the price, classification, rule, or practice to go into effect.

(c) EFFECTIVE TARIFFS AND PRICES WHEN TARIFF IS SUSPENDED, CANCELED, OR REJECTED.—(1) If a tariff is suspended pending the outcome of a proceeding under subsection (a) of this section and the Secretary does not take final action in the proceeding during the suspension period, the tariff goes into effect at the end of that period subject to cancellation when the proceeding is concluded.

(2)(A) During the period of suspension, or after the cancellation or rejection, of a newly filed tariff (including a tariff that has gone into effect provisionally), the affected air carrier or foreign air carrier shall maintain in effect and use—

(i) the corresponding seasonal prices, or the classifications, rules, and practices affecting those prices or the value of transportation provided under those prices, that were in effect for the carrier immediately before the new tariff was filed; or

(ii) another price provided for under an applicable intergovernmental agreement or understanding.

(B) If the suspended, canceled, or rejected tariff is the first tariff of the carrier for the covered transportation, the carrier, for the purpose of operations during the period of suspension or pending effectiveness of a new tariff, may file another tariff containing a price or another classification, rule, or practice affecting the price, or the value of the transportation provided under the price, that is in effect (and not subject to a suspension order) for any air carrier providing the same transportation.

(3) If an existing tariff is suspended or canceled, the affected air carrier or foreign air carrier, for the purpose of operations during the period of suspension or pending effectiveness of a new tariff, may file another tariff containing a price or another classification, rule, or practice affecting the price, or the value of the transportation provided under the price, that is in effect (and not subject to a suspension order) for any air carrier providing the same transportation.

(d) RESPONSE TO REFUSAL OF FOREIGN COUNTRY TO ALLOW AIR CARRIER TO CHARGE A PRICE.—When the Secretary finds that the government or an aeronautical authority of a foreign country has refused to allow an air carrier to charge a price contained in a tariff filed and published under section 41504 of this title for foreign air transportation to the foreign country—

(1) the Secretary, without a hearing—

(A) may suspend any existing tariff of a foreign air carrier providing transportation between the United States and the foreign country for periods totaling not more than 365 days after the date of the suspension; and

(B) may order the foreign air carrier to charge, during the suspension periods, prices that are the same as those contained in a tariff (designated by the Secretary) of an air carrier filed and published under section 41504 of this title for foreign air transportation to the foreign country; and

(2) a foreign air carrier may continue to provide foreign air transportation to the foreign country only if the government or aeronautical authority of the foreign country allows an air carrier to start or continue foreign air transportation to the foreign country at the prices designated by the Secretary.

(e) STANDARD FOREIGN FARE LEVEL.—(1)(A) In this subsection, "standard foreign fare level" means—

(i) for a class of fares existing on October 1, 1979, the fare between 2 places (as adjusted under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph) filed for and allowed by the Civil Aeronautics Board to go into effect after September 30, 1979, and before August 13, 1980 (with seasonal fares adjusted by the percentage difference that prevailed between seasons in 1978), or the fare established under section 1002(j)(8) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (Public Law 85–726, 72 Stat. 731), as added by section 24(a) of the International Air Transportation Competition Act of 1979 (Public Law 96–192, 94 Stat. 46); or

(ii) for a class of fares established after October 1, 1979, the fare between 2 places in effect on the effective date of the establishment of the new class.

(B) At least once every 60 days for fuel costs, and at least once every 180 days for other costs, the Secretary shall adjust the standard foreign fare level for the particular foreign air transportation to which the standard foreign fare level applies by increasing or decreasing that level by the percentage change from the last previous period in the actual operating cost for each available seat-mile. In adjusting a standard foreign fare level, the Secretary may not make an adjustment to costs actually incurred. In establishing a standard foreign fare level and making adjustments in the level under this paragraph, the Secretary may use all relevant or appropriate information reasonably available to the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may not decide that a proposed fare for foreign air transportation is unreasonable on the basis that the fare is too low or too high if the proposed fare is neither more than 5 percent higher nor 50 percent lower than the standard foreign fare level for the same or essentially similar class of transportation. The Secretary by regulation may increase the 50 percent specified in this paragraph.

(3) Paragraph (2) of this subsection does not apply to a proposed fare that is not more than—

(A) 5 percent higher than the standard foreign fare level when the Secretary decides that the proposed fare may be unreasonably discriminatory or that suspension of the fare is in the public interest because of an unreasonable regulatory action by the government of a foreign country that is related to a fare proposal of an air carrier; or

(B) 50 percent lower than the standard foreign fare level when the Secretary decides that the proposed fare may be predatory or discriminatory or that suspension of the fare is required because of an unreasonable regulatory action by the government of a foreign country that is related to a fare proposal of an air carrier.

(f) SUBMISSION OF ORDERS TO PRESIDENT.—The Secretary shall submit to the President an order made under this section suspending, canceling, or rejecting a price for foreign air transportation, and an order rescinding the effectiveness of such an order, before publishing the order. Not later than 10 days after its submission, the President may disapprove the order on finding disapproval is necessary for United States foreign policy or national defense reasons.

(g) COMPLIANCE AS CONDITION OF CERTIFICATE OR PERMIT.—This section and compliance with an order of the Secretary under this section are conditions to any certificate or permit held by an air carrier or foreign air carrier. An air carrier or foreign air carrier may provide foreign air transportation only as long as the carrier maintains prices for that transportation that comply with this section and orders of the Secretary under this section.

§41510. Required adherence to foreign air transportation tariffs

(a) PROHIBITED ACTIONS BY AIR CARRIERS, FOREIGN AIR CARRIERS, AND TICKET AGENTS.—An air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent may not—

(1) charge or receive compensation for foreign air transportation that is different from the price specified in the tariff of the carrier that is in effect for that transportation;

(2) refund or remit any part of the price specified in the tariff; or

(3) extend to any person a privilege or facility, related to a matter required by the Secretary of Transportation to be specified in a tariff for foreign air transportation, except as specified in the tariff.

(b) PROHIBITED ACTIONS BY ANY PERSON.—A person may not knowingly—

(1) pay compensation for foreign air transportation of property that is different from the price specified in the tariff in effect for that transportation; or

(2) solicit, accept, or receive—

(A) a refund or remittance of any part of the price specified in the tariff; or

(B) a privilege or facility, related to a matter required by the Secretary to be specified in a tariff for foreign air transportation of property, except as specified in the tariff.

§41511. Special prices for foreign air transportation

(a) FREE AND REDUCED PRICING.—This chapter does not prohibit an air carrier or foreign air carrier, under terms the Secretary of Transportation prescribes, from issuing or interchanging tickets or passes for free or reduced-price foreign air transportation to or for the following:

(1) a director, officer, or employee of the carrier (including a retired director, officer, or employee who is receiving retirement benefits from an air carrier or foreign air carrier).

(2) a parent or the immediate family of such an officer or employee or the immediate family of such a director.

(3) a widow, widower, or minor child of an employee of the carrier who died as a direct result of a personal injury sustained when performing a duty in the service of the carrier.

(4) a witness or attorney attending a legal investigation in which the air carrier is interested.

(5) an individual injured in an aircraft accident and a physician or nurse attending the individual.

(6) a parent or the immediate family of an individual injured or killed in an aircraft accident when the transportation is related to the accident.

(7) an individual or property to provide relief in a general epidemic, pestilence, or other emergency.

(8) other individuals under other circumstances the Secretary prescribes by regulation.

(b) SPACE-AVAILABLE BASIS.—Under terms the Secretary prescribes, an air carrier or foreign air carrier may grant reduced-price foreign air transportation on a space-available basis to the following:

(1) a minister of religion.

(2) an individual who is at least 60 years of age and no longer gainfully employed.

(3) an individual who is at least 65 years of age.

(4) an individual who has severely impaired vision or hearing or another physical or mental handicap and an accompanying attendant needed by that individual.

SUBCHAPTER I—REQUIREMENTS

§41701. Classification of air carriers

The Secretary of Transportation may establish—

(1) reasonable classifications for air carriers when required because of the nature of the transportation provided by them; and

(2) reasonable requirements for each class when the Secretary decides those requirements are necessary in the public interest.

§41702. Interstate air transportation

An air carrier shall provide safe and adequate interstate air transportation.

§41703. Navigation of foreign civil aircraft

(a) PERMITTED NAVIGATION.—A foreign aircraft, not part of the armed forces of a foreign country, may be navigated in the United States only—

(1) if the country of registry grants a similar privilege to aircraft of the United States;

(2) by an airman holding a certificate or license issued or made valid by the United States Government or the country of registry;

(3) if the Secretary of Transportation authorizes the navigation; and

(4) if the navigation is consistent with terms the Secretary may prescribe.

(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR AUTHORIZING NAVIGATION.—The Secretary may authorize navigation under this section only if the Secretary decides the authorization is—

(1) in the public interest; and

(2) consistent with any agreement between the Government and the government of a foreign country.

(c) PROVIDING AIR COMMERCE.—The Secretary may authorize an aircraft permitted to navigate in the United States under this section to provide air commerce in the United States. However, the aircraft may take on for compensation, at a place in the United States, passengers or cargo destined for another place in the United States only if—

(1) specifically authorized under section 40109(g) of this title; or

(2) under regulations the Secretary prescribes authorizing air carriers to provide otherwise authorized air transportation with foreign registered aircraft under lease or charter to them without crew.

(d) PERMIT REQUIREMENTS NOT AFFECTED.—This section does not affect section 41301 or 41302 of this title. However, a foreign air carrier holding a permit under section 41302 does not need to obtain additional authorization under this section for an operation authorized by the permit.

§41704. Transporting property not to be transported in aircraft cabins

Under regulations or orders of the Secretary of Transportation, an air carrier shall transport as baggage the property of a passenger traveling in air transportation that may not be carried in an aircraft cabin because of a law or regulation of the United States. The carrier is liable to pay an amount not more than the amount declared to the carrier by that passenger for actual loss of, or damage to, the property caused by the carrier. The carrier may impose reasonable charges and conditions for its liability.

§41705. Discrimination against handicapped individuals

In providing air transportation, an air carrier may not discriminate against an otherwise qualified individual on the following grounds:

(1) the individual has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities.

(2) the individual has a record of such an impairment.

(3) the individual is regarded as having such an impairment.

§41706. Prohibitions against smoking on scheduled flights

(a) GENERAL.—An individual may not smoke in the passenger cabin or lavatory of an aircraft on a scheduled airline flight segment in air transportation or intrastate air transportation that is—

(1) between places in a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands;

(2) between a place in any jurisdiction referred to in clause (1) of this subsection (except Alaska and Hawaii) and a place in any other of those jurisdictions; or

(3)(A) scheduled for not more than 6 hours' duration; and

(B)(i) between a place referred to in clause (1) of this subsection (except Alaska and Hawaii) and Alaska or Hawaii; or

(ii) between Alaska and Hawaii.

(b) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section.

§41707. Incorporating contract terms into written instrument

To the extent the Secretary of Transportation prescribes by regulation, an air carrier may incorporate by reference in a ticket or written instrument any term of the contract for providing interstate air transportation.

§41708. Reports

(a) APPLICATION.—To the extent the Secretary of Transportation finds necessary to carry out this subpart, this section and section 41709 of this title apply to a person controlling an air carrier or affiliated (within the meaning of section 11343(c) of this title) with a carrier.

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may require an air carrier or foreign air carrier—

(1)(A) to file annual, monthly, periodical, and special reports with the Secretary in the form and way prescribed by the Secretary; and

(B) to file the reports under oath;

(2) to provide specific answers to questions on which the Secretary considers information to be necessary; and

(3) to file with the Secretary a copy of each agreement, arrangement, contract, or understanding between the carrier and another carrier or person related to transportation affected by this subpart.

§41709. Records of air carriers

(a) REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe the form of records to be kept by an air carrier, including records on the movement of traffic, receipts and expenditures of money, and the time period during which the records shall be kept. A carrier may keep only records prescribed or approved by the Secretary. However, a carrier may keep additional records if the additional records do not impair the integrity of the records prescribed or approved by the Secretary and are not an unreasonable financial burden on the carrier.

(b) INSPECTION.—(1) The Secretary at any time may—

(A) inspect the land, buildings, and equipment of an air carrier or foreign air carrier when necessary to decide under subchapter II of this chapter or section 41102, 41103, or 41302 of this title whether a carrier is fit, willing, and able; and

(B) inspect records kept or required to be kept by an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent.

(2) The Secretary may employ special agents or auditors to carry out this subsection.

§41710. Time requirements

When a matter requiring action of the Secretary of Transportation is submitted under section 40109(a) or (c)–(h), 41309, or 42111 of this title and an evidentiary hearing—

(1) is ordered, the Secretary shall make a final decision on the matter not later than the last day of the 12th month that begins after the date the matter is submitted; or

(2) is not ordered, the Secretary shall make a final decision on the matter not later than the last day of the 6th month that begins after the date the matter is submitted.

§41711. Air carrier management inquiry and cooperation with other authorities

In carrying out this subpart, the Secretary of Transportation may—

(1) inquire into the management of the business of an air carrier and obtain from the air carrier, and a person controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the carrier, information the Secretary decides reasonably is necessary to carry out the inquiry;

(2) confer and hold a joint hearing with a State authority; and

(3) exchange information related to aeronautics with a government of a foreign country through appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government.

§41712. Unfair and deceptive practices and unfair methods of competition

On the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or the complaint of an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent, and if the Secretary considers it is in the public interest, the Secretary may investigate and decide whether an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent has been or is engaged in an unfair or deceptive practice or an unfair method of competition in air transportation or the sale of air transportation. If the Secretary, after notice and an opportunity for a hearing, finds that an air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent is engaged in an unfair or deceptive practice or unfair method of competition, the Secretary shall order the air carrier, foreign air carrier, or ticket agent to stop the practice or method.

§41713. Preemption of authority over prices, routes, and service

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "State" means a State, the District of Columbia, and a territory or possession of the United States.

(b) PREEMPTION.—(1) Except as provided in this subsection, a State, political subdivision of a State, or political authority of at least 2 States may not enact or enforce a law, regulation, or other provision having the force and effect of law related to a price, route, or service of an air carrier that may provide air transportation under this subpart.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply to air transportation provided entirely in Alaska unless the transportation is air transportation (except charter air transportation) provided under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title.

(3) This subsection does not limit a State, political subdivision of a State, or political authority of at least 2 States that owns or operates an airport served by an air carrier holding a certificate issued by the Secretary of Transportation from carrying out its proprietary powers and rights.

SUBCHAPTER II—SMALL COMMUNITY AIR SERVICE

§41731. Definitions

(a) GENERAL.—In this subchapter—

(1) "eligible place" means a place in the United States that—

(A) was an eligible point under section 419 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 before October 1, 1988;

(B) received scheduled air transportation at any time after January 1, 1990; and

(C) is not listed in Department of Transportation Orders 89–9–37 and 89–12–52 as a place ineligible for compensation under this subchapter.

(2) "enhanced essential air service" means scheduled air transportation to an eligible place of a higher level or quality than basic essential air service described in section 41732 of this title.

(3) "hub airport" means an airport that each year has at least .25 percent of the total annual boardings in the United States.

(4) "nonhub airport" means an airport that each year has less than .05 percent of the total annual boardings in the United States.

(5) "small hub airport" means an airport that each year has at least .05 percent, but less than .25 percent, of the total annual boardings in the United States.

(b) LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY TO DECIDE A PLACE NOT AN ELIGIBLE PLACE.—The Secretary of Transportation may not decide that a place described in subsection (a)(1) of this section is not an eligible place on the basis of a passenger subsidy at that place or on another basis that is not specifically stated in this subchapter.

§41732. Basic essential air service

(a) GENERAL.—Basic essential air service provided under section 41733 of this title is scheduled air transportation of passengers and cargo—

(1) to a hub airport that has convenient connecting or single-plane air service to a substantial number of destinations beyond that airport; or

(2) to a small hub or nonhub airport, when in Alaska or when the nearest hub airport is more than 400 miles from an eligible place.

(b) MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS.—Basic essential air service shall include at least the following:

(1)(A) for a place not in Alaska, 2 daily round trips 6 days a week, with not more than one intermediate stop on each flight; or

(B) for a place in Alaska, a level of service at least equal to that provided in 1976 or 2 round trips a week, whichever is greater, except that the Secretary of Transportation and the appropriate State authority of Alaska may agree to a different level of service after consulting with the affected community.

(2) flights at reasonable times considering the needs of passengers with connecting flights at the airport and at prices that are not excessive compared to the generally prevailing prices of other air carriers for like service between similar places.

(3) for a place not in Alaska, service provided in an aircraft with an effective capacity of at least 15 passengers if the average daily boardings at the place in any calendar year from 1976-1986 were more than 11 passengers unless—

(A) that level-of-service requirement would require paying compensation in a fiscal year under section 41733(d) or 41734(d) or (e) of this title for the place when compensation otherwise would not have been paid for that place in that year; or

(B) the affected community agrees with the Secretary in writing to the use of smaller aircraft to provide service to the place.

(4) service accommodating the estimated passenger and property traffic at an average load factor, for each class of traffic considering seasonal demands for the service, of not more than—

(A) 50 percent; or

(B) 60 percent when service is provided by aircraft with more than 14 passenger seats.

(5) service provided in aircraft with at least 2 engines and using 2 pilots, unless scheduled air transportation has not been provided to the place in aircraft with at least 2 engines and using 2 pilots for at least 60 consecutive operating days at any time since October 31, 1978.

(6) service provided by pressurized aircraft when the service is provided by aircraft that regularly fly above 8,000 feet in altitude.

§41733. Level of basic essential air service

(a) Decisions Made Before October 1, 1988.—For each eligible place for which a decision was made before October 1, 1988, under section 419 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, establishing the level of essential air transportation, the level of basic essential air service for that place shall be the level established by the Secretary of Transportation for that place by not later than December 29, 1988.

(b) Decisions Not Made Before October 1, 1988.—(1) The Secretary shall decide on the level of basic essential air service for each eligible place for which a decision was not made before October 1, 1988, establishing the level of essential air transportation, when the Secretary receives notice that service to that place will be provided by only one air carrier. The Secretary shall make the decision by the last day of the 6-month period beginning on the date the Secretary receives the notice. The Secretary may impose notice requirements necessary to carry out this subsection. Before making a decision, the Secretary shall consider the views of any interested community and the appropriate State authority of the State in which the community is located.

(2) Until the Secretary has made a decision on a level of basic essential air service for an eligible place under this subsection, the Secretary, on petition by an appropriate representative of the place, shall prohibit an air carrier from ending, suspending, or reducing air transportation to that place that appears to deprive the place of basic essential air service.

(c) Availability of Compensation.—(1) If the Secretary decides that basic essential air service will not be provided to an eligible place without compensation, the Secretary shall provide notice that an air carrier may apply to provide basic essential air service to the place for compensation under this section. In selecting an applicant, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors—

(A) the demonstrated reliability of the applicant in providing scheduled air service;

(B) the contractual and marketing arrangements the applicant has made with a larger carrier to ensure service beyond the hub airport;

(C) the interline arrangements that the applicant has made with a larger carrier to allow passengers and cargo of the applicant at the hub airport to be transported by the larger carrier through one reservation, ticket, and baggage check-in;

(D) the preferences of the actual and potential users of air transportation at the eligible place, giving substantial weight to the views of the elected officials representing the users; and

(E) for an eligible place in Alaska, the experience of the applicant in providing, in Alaska, scheduled air service, or significant patterns of non-scheduled air service under an exemption granted under section 40109(a) and (c)-(h) of this title.

(2) Under guidelines prescribed under section 41737(a) of this title, the Secretary shall pay the rate of compensation for providing basic essential air service under this section and section 41734 of this title.

(d) Compensation Payments.—The Secretary shall pay compensation under this section at times and in the way the Secretary decides is appropriate. The Secretary shall end payment of compensation to an air carrier for providing basic essential air service to an eligible place when the Secretary decides the compensation is no longer necessary to maintain basic essential air service to the place.

(e) Review.—The Secretary shall review periodically the level of basic essential air service for each eligible place. Based on the review and consultations with an interested community and the appropriate State authority of the State in which the community is located, the Secretary may make appropriate adjustments in the level of service.

§41734. Ending, suspending, and reducing basic essential air service

(a) Notice Required.—An air carrier may end, suspend, or reduce air transportation to an eligible place below the level of basic essential air service established for that place under section 41733 of this title only after giving the Secretary of Transportation, the appropriate State authority, and the affected communities at least 90 days' notice before ending, suspending, or reducing that transportation.

(b) Continuation of Service for 30 Days After Notice Period.—If at the end of the notice period under subsection (a) of this section the Secretary has not found another air carrier to provide basic essential air service to the eligible place, the Secretary shall require the carrier providing notice to continue to provide basic essential air service to the place for an additional 30-day period or until another carrier begins to provide basic essential air service to the place, whichever occurs first.

(c) Continuation of Service for Additional 30-Day Periods.—If at the end of the 30-day period under subsection (b) of this section the Secretary decides another air carrier will not provide basic essential air service to the place on a continuing basis, the Secretary shall require the carrier providing service to continue to provide service for additional 30-day periods until another carrier begins providing service on a continuing basis. At the end of each 30-day period, the Secretary shall decide if another carrier will provide service on a continuing basis.

(d) Continuation of Compensation After Notice Period.—If an air carrier receiving compensation under section 41733 of this title for providing basic essential air service to an eligible place is required to continue to provide service to the place under this section after the 90-day notice period under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall continue to pay that compensation after the last day of that period. The Secretary shall pay the compensation until the Secretary finds another carrier to provide the service to the place or the 90th day after the end of that notice period, whichever is earlier. If, after the 90th day after the end of the 90-day notice period, the Secretary has not found another carrier to provide the service, the carrier required to continue to provide that service shall receive compensation sufficient—

(1) to pay for the fully allocated actual cost to the carrier of performing the basic essential air service that was being provided when the 90-day notice was given under subsection (a) of this section plus a reasonable return on investment that is at least 5 percent of operating costs; and

(2) to provide the carrier an additional return that recognizes the demonstrated additional lost profits from opportunities foregone and the likelihood that those lost profits increase as the period during which the carrier is required to provide the service continues.

(e) Compensation to Air Carriers Originally Providing Service Without Compensation.—If the Secretary requires an air carrier providing basic essential air service to an eligible place without compensation under section 41733 of this title to continue providing that service after the 90-day notice period required by subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall provide the carrier with compensation after the end of the 90-day notice period that is sufficient—

(1) to pay for the fully allocated actual cost to the carrier of performing the basic essential air service that was being provided when the 90-day notice was given under subsection (a) of this section plus a reasonable return on investment that is at least 5 percent of operating costs; and

(2) to provide the carrier an additional return that recognizes the demonstrated additional lost profits from opportunities foregone and the likelihood that those lost profits increase as the period during which the carrier is required to provide the service continues.

(f) Finding Replacement Carriers.—When the Secretary requires an air carrier to continue to provide basic essential air service to an eligible place, the Secretary shall continue to make every effort to find another carrier to provide at least that basic essential air service to the place on a continuing basis.

(g) Transfer of Authority.—If an air carrier, providing basic essential air service under section 41733 of this title between an eligible place and an airport at which the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration limits the number of instrument flight rule takeoffs and landings of aircraft, provides notice under subsection (a) of this section of an intention to end, suspend, or reduce that service and another carrier is found to provide the service, the Secretary shall require the carrier providing notice to transfer any operational authority the carrier has to land or take off at that airport related to the service to the eligible place to the carrier that will provide the service, if—

(1) the carrier that will provide the service needs the authority; and

(2) the authority to be transferred is being used only to provide air service to the eligible place.

§41735. Enhanced essential air service

(a) Proposals.—(1) A State or local government may submit a proposal to the Secretary of Transportation for enhanced essential air service to an eligible place for which basic essential air service is being provided under section 41733 of this title. The proposal shall—

(A) specify the level and type of enhanced essential air service the State or local government considers appropriate; and

(B) include an agreement related to compensation required for the proposed service.

(2) The agreement submitted under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection shall provide that—

(A) the State or local government or a person pay 50 percent of the compensation required for the proposed service and the United States Government pay the remaining 50 percent; or

(B)(i) the Government pay 100 percent of the compensation; and

(ii) if the proposed service is not successful for at least a 2-year period under the criteria prescribed by the Secretary under paragraph (3) of this subsection, the eligible place is not eligible for air service or air transportation for which compensation is paid by the Secretary under this subchapter.

(3) The Secretary shall prescribe by regulation objective criteria for deciding whether enhanced essential air service to an eligible place under this section is successful in terms of—

(A) increasing passenger usage of the airport facilities at the place; and

(B) reducing the amount of compensation provided by the Secretary under this subchapter for that service.

(b) DECISIONS.—Not later than 90 days after receiving a proposal under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) approve the proposal if the Secretary decides the proposal is reasonable; or

(2) if the Secretary decides the proposal is not reasonable, disapprove the proposal and notify the State or local government of the disapproval and the reasons for the disapproval.

(c) COMPENSATION PAYMENTS.—(1) The Secretary shall pay compensation under this section when and in the way the Secretary decides is appropriate. Compensation for enhanced essential air service under this section may be paid only for the costs incurred in providing air service to an eligible place that are in addition to the costs incurred in providing basic essential air service to the place under section 41733 of this title. The Secretary shall continue to pay compensation under this section only as long as—

(A) the air carrier maintains the level of enhanced essential air service;

(B) the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation under this section continues to pay the compensation; and

(C) the Secretary decides the compensation is necessary to maintain the service to the place.

(2) The Secretary may require the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation under this section to make advance payments or provide other security to ensure that timely payments are made.

(d) REVIEW.—(1) The Secretary shall review periodically the enhanced essential air service provided to each eligible place under this section.

(2) For service for which the Government pays 50 percent of the compensation, based on the review and consultation with the affected community and the State or local government or person paying the remaining 50 percent of the compensation, the Secretary shall make appropriate adjustments in the type and level of service to the place.

(3) For service for which the Government pays 100 percent of the compensation, based on the review and consultation with the State or local government submitting the proposal, the Secretary shall decide whether the service has succeeded for at least a 2-year period under the criteria prescribed under subsection (a)(3) of this section. If unsuccessful, the place is not eligible for air service or air transportation for which compensation is paid by the Secretary under this subchapter.

(e) ENDING, SUSPENDING, AND REDUCING AIR TRANSPORTATION.—An air carrier may end, suspend, or reduce air transportation to an eligible place below the level of enhanced essential air service established for that place by the Secretary under this section only after giving the Secretary, the affected community, and the State or local government or person paying compensation for that service at least 30 days' notice before ending, suspending, or reducing the service. This subsection does not relieve the carrier of an obligation under section 41734 of this title.

§41736. Air transportation to noneligible places

(a) PROPOSALS AND DECISIONS.—(1) A State or local government may propose to the Secretary of Transportation that the Secretary provide compensation to an air carrier to provide air transportation to a place that is not an eligible place under this subchapter. Not later than 90 days after receiving a proposal under this section, the Secretary shall—

(A) decide whether to designate the place as eligible to receive compensation under this section; and

(B)(i) approve the proposal if the State or local government or a person is willing and able to pay 50 percent of the compensation for providing the transportation, and notify the State or local government of the approval; or

(ii) disapprove the proposal if the Secretary decides the proposal is not reasonable under paragraph (2) of this subsection, and notify the State or local government of the disapproval and the reasons for the disapproval.

(2) In deciding whether a proposal is reasonable, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors—

(A) the traffic-generating potential of the place;

(B) the cost to the United States Government of providing the proposed transportation; and

(C) the distance of the place from the closest hub airport.

(b) APPROVAL FOR CERTAIN AIR TRANSPORTATION.—Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section, the Secretary shall approve a proposal under this section to compensate an air carrier for providing air transportation to a place in the 48 contiguous States or the District of Columbia and designate the place as eligible for compensation under this section if—

(1) at any time before October 23, 1978, the place was served by a carrier holding a certificate under section 401 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958;

(2) the place is more than 50 miles from the nearest small hub airport or an eligible place;

(3) the place is more than 150 miles from the nearest hub airport; and

(4) the State or local government submitting the proposal or a person is willing and able to pay 25 percent of the cost of providing the compensated transportation.

(c) LEVEL OF AIR TRANSPORTATION.—(1) If the Secretary designates a place under subsection (a)(1) of this section as eligible for compensation under this section, the Secretary shall decide, not later than 6 months after the date of the designation, on the level of air transportation to be provided under this section. Before making a decision, the Secretary shall consider the views of any interested community, the appropriate State authority of the State in which the place is located, and the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation for the transportation under subsection (b)(4) of this section.

(2) After making the decision under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Secretary shall provide notice that any air carrier that is willing to provide the level of air transportation established under paragraph (1) for a place may submit an application to provide the transportation. In selecting an applicant, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors—

(A) the factors listed in section 41733(c)(1) of this title; and

(B) the views of the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation for the transportation.

(d) COMPENSATION PAYMENTS.—(1) The Secretary shall pay compensation under this section when and in the way the Secretary decides is appropriate. The Secretary shall continue to pay compensation under this section only as long as—

(A) the air carrier maintains the level of air transportation established by the Secretary under subsection (c)(1) of this section;

(B) the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation for transportation under this section continues to pay that compensation; and

(C) the Secretary decides the compensation is necessary to maintain the transportation to the place.

(2) The Secretary may require the State or local government or person agreeing to pay compensation under this section to make advance payments or provide other security to ensure that timely payments are made.

(e) REVIEW.—The Secretary shall review periodically the level of air transportation provided under this section. Based on the review and consultation with any interested community, the appropriate State authority of the State in which the community is located, and the State or local government or person paying compensation under this section, the Secretary may make appropriate adjustments in the level of transportation.

(f) WITHDRAWAL OF ELIGIBILITY DESIGNATIONS.—After providing notice and an opportunity for interested persons to comment, the Secretary may withdraw the designation of a place under subsection (a)(1) of this section as eligible to receive compensation under this section if the place has received air transportation under this section for at least 2 years and the Secretary decides the withdrawal would be in the public interest. The Secretary by regulation shall prescribe standards for deciding whether the withdrawal of a designation under this subsection is in the public interest. The standards shall include the factors listed in subsection (a)(2) of this section.

(g) ENDING, SUSPENDING, AND REDUCING AIR TRANSPORTATION.—An air carrier providing air transportation for compensation under this section may end, suspend, or reduce that transportation below the level of transportation established by the Secretary under this section only after giving the Secretary, the affected community, and the State or local government or person paying compensation under this section at least 30 days' notice before ending, suspending, or reducing the transportation.

§41737. Compensation guidelines, limitations, and claims

(a) COMPENSATION GUIDELINES.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe guidelines governing the rate of compensation payable under this subchapter. The guidelines shall be used to determine the reasonable amount of compensation required to ensure the continuation of air service or air transportation under this subchapter. The guidelines shall—

(A) provide for a reduction in compensation when an air carrier does not provide service or transportation agreed to be provided;

(B) consider amounts needed by an air carrier to promote public use of the service or transportation for which compensation is being paid; and

(C) include expense elements based on representative costs of air carriers providing scheduled air transportation of passengers, property, and mail on aircraft of the type the Secretary decides is appropriate for providing the service or transportation for which compensation is being provided.

(2) Promotional amounts described in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection shall be a special, segregated element of the compensation provided to a carrier under this subchapter.

(b) REQUIRED FINDING.—The Secretary may pay compensation to an air carrier for providing air service or air transportation under this subchapter only if the Secretary finds the carrier is able to provide the service or transportation in a reliable way.

(c) CLAIMS.—Not later than 15 days after receiving a written claim from an air carrier for compensation under this subchapter, the Secretary shall—

(1) pay or deny the United States Government's share of a claim; and

(2) if denying the claim, notify the carrier of the denial and the reasons for the denial.

(d) AUTHORITY TO MAKE AGREEMENTS AND INCUR OBLIGATIONS.—(1) The Secretary may make agreements and incur obligations from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) to pay compensation under this subchapter. An agreement by the Secretary under this subsection is a contractual obligation of the Government to pay the Government's share of the compensation.

(2) Not more than $38,600,000 is available to the Secretary out of the Fund for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1993–1998, to incur obligations under this section. Amounts made available under this section remain available until expended.

§41738. Fitness of air carriers

Notwithstanding section 40109(a) and (c)–(h) of this title, an air carrier may provide air service to an eligible place or air transportation to a place designated under section 41736 of this title only when the Secretary of Transportation decides that—

(1) the carrier is fit, willing, and able to perform the service or transportation; and

(2) aircraft used to provide the service or transportation, and operations related to the service or transportation, conform to the safety standards prescribed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

§41739. Air carrier obligations

If at least 2 air carriers make an agreement to operate under or use a single carrier designator code to provide air transportation, the carrier whose code is being used shares responsibility with the other carriers for the quality of transportation provided the public under the code by the other carriers.

§41740. Joint proposals

The Secretary of Transportation shall encourage the submission of joint proposals by 2 or more air carriers for providing air service or air transportation under this subchapter through arrangements that maximize the service or transportation to and from major destinations beyond the hub.

§41741. Insurance

The Secretary of Transportation may pay an air carrier compensation under this subchapter only when the carrier files with the Secretary an insurance policy or self-insurance plan approved by the Secretary. The policy or plan must be sufficient to pay for bodily injury to, or death of, an individual, or for loss of or damage to property of others, resulting from the operation of aircraft, but not more than the amount of the policy or plan limits.

§41742. Ending effective date

This subchapter is not effective after September 30, 1998.

§41901. General authority

(a) TITLE 39.—The United States Postal Service may provide for the transportation of mail by aircraft in interstate air transportation under section 5402(d) and (f) of title 39.

(b) AUTHORITY TO PRESCRIBE PRICES.—Except as provided in section 5402 of title 39, on the initiative of the Secretary of Transportation or on petition by the Postal Service or an air carrier, the Secretary shall prescribe and publish—

(1) after notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record, reasonable prices to be paid by the Postal Service for the transportation of mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska, the facilities used in and useful for the transportation of mail, and the services related to the transportation of mail for each carrier holding a certificate that authorizes that transportation;

(2) the methods used, whether by aircraft-mile, pound-mile, weight, space, or a combination of those or other methods, to determine the prices for each air carrier or class of air carriers; and

(3) the effective date of the prices.

(c) OTHER TRANSPORTATION.—In prescribing prices under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary may include transportation other than by aircraft that is incidental to transportation of mail by aircraft or necessary because of emergency conditions related to aircraft operations.

(d) AUTHORITY TO PRESCRIBE DIFFERENT PRICES.—Considering conditions peculiar to transportation by aircraft and to particular air carriers or classes of air carriers, the Secretary may prescribe different prices under this section for different air carriers or classes of air carriers and for different classes of service. In prescribing a price for a carrier under this section, the Secretary shall consider, among other factors, the following:

(1) the condition that the carrier may hold and operate under a certificate authorizing the transportation of mail only by providing necessary and adequate facilities and service for the transportation of mail.

(2) standards related to the character and quality of service to be provided that are prescribed by or under law.

(e) STATEMENTS ON PRICES.—A petition for prescribing a reasonable price under this section must include a statement of the price the petitioner believes is reasonable.

(f) STATEMENTS ON REQUIRED SERVICES.—The Postal Service shall introduce as part of the record in every proceeding under this section a comprehensive statement of the services to be required of the air carrier and other information the Postal Service has that the Secretary considers material to the proceeding.

(g) EXPIRATION DATE.—The authority of the Secretary under this part and section 5402 of title 39 providing for the transportation of mail by aircraft between places in Alaska expires on the date specified in section 5402(f) of title 39.

§41902. Schedules for certain transportation of mail

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Except as provided in section 41906 of this title and section 5402 of title 39, an air carrier may transport mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska only under a schedule designated or required to be established under subsection (c) of this section for the transportation of mail.

(b) STATEMENTS ON PLACES AND SCHEDULES.—Every air carrier shall file with the Secretary of Transportation and the United States Postal Service a statement showing—

(1) the places between which the carrier is authorized to provide foreign air transportation;

(2) the places between which the carrier is authorized to transport mail in Alaska;

(3) every schedule of aircraft regularly operated by the carrier between places described in clauses (1) and (2) of this subsection and every change in each schedule; and

(4) for each schedule, the places served by the carrier and the time of arrival at, and departure from, each place.

(c) DESIGNATING AND ADDITIONAL SCHEDULES.—The Postal Service may—

(1) designate any schedule of an air carrier filed under subsection (b)(3) of this section for the transportation of mail between the places between which the carrier is authorized by its certificate to transport mail; and

(2) require the carrier to establish additional schedules for the transportation of mail between those places.

(d) CHANGING SCHEDULES.—A schedule designated or required to be established for the transportation of mail under subsection (c) of this section may be changed only after 10 days' notice of the change is filed as provided in subsection (b)(3) of this section. The Postal Service may disapprove a proposed change in a schedule or amend or modify the schedule or proposed change.

(e) ORDERS.—An order of the Postal Service under this section may become effective only after 10 days after the order is issued. A person adversely affected by the order may appeal the order to the Secretary before the end of the 10-day period under regulations the Secretary prescribes. If the public convenience and necessity require, the Secretary may amend, modify, suspend, or cancel the order. Pending a decision about the order, the Secretary may postpone the effective date of the order.

(f) PROCEEDINGS PREFERENCES.—The Secretary shall give preference to a proceeding under this section over all other proceedings before the Secretary under this subpart.

§41903. Duty to provide certain transportation of mail

(a) AIR CARRIERS.—Subject to subsection (b) of this section, an air carrier authorized by its certificate to transport mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska shall—

(1) provide facilities and services necessary and adequate to provide that transportation; and

(2) transport mail between the places authorized in the certificate for transportation of mail when required, and under regulations prescribed, by the United States Postal Service.

(b) MAXIMUM MAIL LOAD.—The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe the maximum mail load for a schedule or for an aircraft or type of aircraft for the transportation of mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation or between places in Alaska. If the Postal Service tenders to an air carrier mail exceeding the maximum load for transportation by the carrier under a schedule designated or required to be established for the transportation of mail under section 41902(c) of this title, the carrier, as nearly in accordance with the schedule as the Secretary decides is possible, shall—

(1) provide facilities sufficient to transport the mail to the extent the Secretary decides the carrier reasonably is able to do so; and

(2) transport that mail.

§41904. Noncitizens transporting mail to or in foreign countries

When the United States Postal Service decides that it may be necessary to have a person not a citizen of the United States transport mail by aircraft to or in a foreign country, the Postal Service may make an arrangement with the person, without advertising, to provide the transportation.

§41905. Regulating air carrier transportation of foreign mail

An air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation and transporting mail of a foreign country shall transport that mail under the control of, and subject to regulation by, the United States Government.

§41906. Emergency mail transportation

(a) CONTRACT AUTHORITY.—In an emergency caused by a flood, fire, or other disaster, the United States Postal Service may make a contract without advertising to transport mail by aircraft to or from a locality affected by the emergency when the available facilities of persons authorized to transport mail to or from the locality are inadequate to meet the requirements of the Postal Service during the emergency. The contract may be only for periods necessary to maintain mail service because of the inadequacy of the facilities. Payment for transportation provided under the contract shall be made at prices provided in the contract.

(b) TRANSPORTATION NOT AIR TRANSPORTATION.—Transportation provided under a contract made under subsection (a) of this section is not air transportation within the meaning of this part.

§41907. Prices for foreign transportation of mail

(a) LIMITATIONS.—When air transportation is provided between the United States and a foreign country both by aircraft owned or operated by an air carrier holding a certificate under chapter 411 of this title and by aircraft owned or operated by a foreign air carrier, the United States Postal Service may not pay to or for the account of the foreign air carrier a price for transporting mail by aircraft between the United States and the foreign country that the Postal Service believes will result (over a reasonable period determined by the Postal Service considering exchange fluctuations and other factors) in the foreign air carrier receiving a price for transporting the mail that is higher than the price—

(1) the government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration pays to air carriers for transporting mail of the foreign country by aircraft between the foreign country and the United States; or

(2) determined by the Postal Service to be comparable to the price the government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration pays to air carriers for transporting mail of the foreign country by aircraft between the foreign country and an intermediate country on the route of the air carrier between the foreign country and the United States.

(b) CHANGES.—The Secretary of Transportation shall act expeditiously on proposed changes in prices for transporting mail by aircraft in foreign air transportation. When prescribing those prices, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the prices paid for transportation of mail under the Universal Postal Union Convention as ratified by the United States Government;

(2) the price-making elements used by the Universal Postal Union in prescribing its airmail prices; and

(3) the competitive disadvantage to United States flag air carriers resulting from foreign air carriers receiving Universal Postal Union prices for transporting United States mail and national origin mail of their own countries.

§41908. Prices for transporting mail of foreign countries

(a) PRICE DETERMINATIONS.—The United States Postal Service shall determine the prices that an air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation must charge a government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration for transporting mail of the foreign country. The Postal Service shall put those prices into effect under the postal convention regulating postal relations between the United States and the foreign country or as provided under this section.

(b) CHANGES.—The Postal Service may authorize an air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation, under limitations the Postal Service prescribes, to change the prices the carrier charges a government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration for transporting mail of the foreign country in the foreign country or between the foreign country and another foreign country.

(c) COLLECTING COMPENSATION.—(1) When an air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation transports mail of a foreign country—

(A) under an arrangement with a government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration made or approved under this section, the carrier must collect its compensation for the transportation from the foreign country under the arrangement; and

(B) without having an arrangement with a government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration consistent with this section, the compensation collected by the United States Government for the transportation shall be for the account of the air carrier.

(2) An air carrier holding a certificate that authorizes foreign air transportation is not entitled to receive compensation from both a government of a foreign country or foreign postal administration and the United States Government for transporting the same mail of the foreign country.

§41909. Duty to oppose unreasonable prices under the Universal Postal Union Convention

The Secretary of State and the United States Postal Service shall—

(1) take appropriate action to ensure that the prices paid for transporting mail under the Universal Postal Union Convention are not higher than reasonable prices for transporting mail; and

(2) oppose any existing or proposed Universal Postal Union price that is higher than a reasonable price for transporting mail.

§41910. Weighing mail

The United States Postal Service may weigh mail transported by aircraft and make statistical and administrative computations necessary in the interest of mail service. When the Secretary of Transportation decides that additional or more frequent weighings of mail are advisable or necessary to carry out this part, the Postal Service shall provide the weighings, but it is not required to provide them for continuous periods of more than 30 days.

§41911. Evidence of providing mail service

When and in the form required by the United States Postal Service, an air carrier transporting or handling—

(1) United States mail shall submit evidence, signed by an authorized official, that the transportation or handling has been provided; and

(2) mail of a foreign country shall submit evidence, signed by an authorized official, of the amount of mail transported or handled and the compensation payable and received for that transportation or handling.

§41912. Effect on foreign postal arrangements

This part does not—

(1) affect an arrangement made by the United States Government with the postal administration of a foreign country related to the transportation of mail by aircraft; or

(2) impair the authority of the United States Postal Service to make such an arrangement.

42101. Definitions.
42102. Payments to eligible protected employees.
42103. Duty to hire protected employees.
42104. Congressional review of regulations.
42105. Airline Employees Protective Account.
42106. Ending effective date.

SUBCHAPTER II—MUTUAL AID AGREEMENTS AND LABOR REQUIREMENTS OF AIR CARRIERS

42111. Mutual aid agreements.
42112. Labor requirements of air carriers.

SUBCHAPTER I—EMPLOYEE PROTECTION PROGRAM

§42101. Definitions

(a) GENERAL.—In this subchapter—

(1) "eligible protected employee" means a protected employee who is deprived of employment, or who is adversely affected related to compensation, because of a qualifying dislocation.

(2) "major contraction" means a reduction (except as provided in subsection (b) of this section) of at least 7.5 percent in the number of full-time employees of an air carrier within a 12-month period, except for employees deprived of employment because of a strike or whose employment is ended for cause.

(3) "protected employee" means an individual who on October 24, 1978, had been employed for at least 4 years by an air carrier that held a certificate under section 401 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, but does not include a director or officer of a corporation.

(4) "qualifying dislocation" means a bankruptcy or major contraction of an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title when the Secretary of Transportation finds the bankruptcy or contraction occurred after December 31, 1978, and before January 1, 1989, the major cause of which was the change in regulatory structure provided by the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978.

(b) MAJOR CONTRACTION.—The Secretary may find a reduction of less than 7.5 percent of the number of full-time employees is part of a major contraction if the Secretary decides another reduction is likely to occur within the 12-month period in which the first reduction occurs that, when included with the first reduction, will result in a total reduction of more than 7.5 percent.

§42102. Payments to eligible protected employees

(a) AUTHORITY TO PAY AND APPLICATIONS FOR PAYMENTS.—Subject to amounts provided in an appropriation law, the Secretary of Labor shall make monthly assistance payments, moving expense payments, and reimbursement payments as provided under this section to an eligible protected employee whose employment is not ended for cause. The employee must apply to receive the payments and cooperate with the Secretary in finding other employment.

(b) NUMBER AND AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS.—(1) Subject to amounts provided in an appropriation law, an eligible protected employee shall receive 72 monthly assistance payments. However, an eligible protected employee deprived of employment may not receive a payment after obtaining other employment. For each class or craft of protected employees, the Secretary of Labor, after consulting with the Secretary of Transportation, shall prescribe by regulation guidelines for computing the amount of each monthly assistance payment to be made to a member of the class or craft and what percentage of salary that payment represents.

(2) The amount of a monthly payment payable under paragraph (1) of this subsection to an eligible protected employee shall be reduced—

(A) by unemployment compensation the employee receives; or

(B) if the employee does not accept reasonably comparable employment, to an amount the employee would be entitled to receive if the employee had accepted the employment.

(3) If accepting comparable employment to avoid a reduction in the monthly assistance payment under paragraph (2) of this subsection would force an eligible protected employee to relocate, the employee may decide not to relocate. Instead of the payments provided under this section, the employee may receive the lesser of 3 payments or the maximum number of payments that remain to be paid under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(c) MOVING EXPENSES AND REIMBURSEMENTS.—(1) Subject to amounts provided in an appropriation law, an eligible protected employee who relocates shall receive—

(A) reasonable moving expense payments to move the employee and the employee's immediate family; and

(B) reimbursement payments for a loss incurred in selling the employee's principal place of residence for less than fair market value or in cancelling a lease on, or contract to buy, the residence.

(2) The Secretary of Labor shall decide on the amount of the moving expenses and the fair market value of the residence.

§42103. Duty to hire protected employees

(a) REHIRING PROTECTED EMPLOYEES.—A protected employee of an air carrier regulated by the Secretary of Transportation who was furloughed or whose employment was ended by the carrier (except for cause) before October 23, 1988, is entitled to be the first employed in the occupational specialty of the employee, regardless of the employee's age, by any other air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title before October 24, 1978. However, the air carrier may recall its furloughed employees before hiring a protected employee of another air carrier regulated by the Secretary who was furloughed or whose employment was ended by the other carrier (except for cause) before October 23, 1988. An employee hired by an air carrier under this section retains seniority and recall rights with the air carrier that furloughed or ended the employment of the employee.

(b) DUTIES OF SECRETARY OF LABOR.—The Secretary of Labor—

(1) shall establish and publish periodically a list of jobs available with an air carrier holding a certificate under section 41102 of this title that includes necessary information and detail;

(2) shall assist eligible protected employees to find other employment;

(3) shall encourage negotiations between air carriers and representatives of employees on rehiring practices and seniority; and

(4) may require an air carrier to file with the Secretary information necessary to carry out this section.

§42104. Congressional review of regulations

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "legislative day" means a calendar day on which both Houses of Congress are in session.

(b) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Labor may not prescribe a regulation under this subchapter until 30 legislative days after the regulation is submitted to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives.

(c) EFFECTIVENESS OF REGULATIONS.—A proposed regulation under this subchapter shall be submitted to Congress and becomes effective only if, during the period of 60 legislative days after the regulation is submitted to Congress, either House does not pass a resolution disapproving the regulation. However, if Congress adopts a resolution approving the regulation during the 60-day period, the regulation is effective on that date.

§42105. Airline Employees Protective Account

The Department of Labor has an Airline Employees Protective Account consisting of amounts appropriated to it. An amount necessary to carry out this subchapter, including administrative expenses, may be appropriated to the Account annually.

§42106. Ending effective date

This subchapter is not effective after the last day the Secretary of Labor must make a payment under this subchapter.

SUBCHAPTER II—MUTUAL AID AGREEMENTS AND LABOR REQUIREMENTS OF AIR CARRIERS

§42111. Mutual aid agreements

An air carrier that will receive payments from another air carrier under an agreement between the air carriers for the time the one air carrier is not providing foreign air transportation, or is providing reduced levels of foreign air transportation, because of a labor strike must file a true copy of the agreement with the Secretary of Transportation and have it approved by the Secretary under section 41309 of this title. Notwithstanding section 41309, the Secretary shall approve the agreement only if it provides that—

(1) the air carrier will receive payments of not more than 60 percent of direct operating expenses, including interest expenses, but not depreciation or amortization expenses;

(2) benefits may be paid for not more than 8 weeks, and may not be for losses incurred during the first 30 days of a strike; and

(3) on request of the striking employees, the dispute will be submitted to binding arbitration under the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.).

§42112. Labor requirements of air carriers

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) "copilot" means an employee whose duties include assisting or relieving the pilot in manipulating an aircraft and who is qualified to serve as, and has in effect an airman certificate authorizing the employee to serve as, a copilot.

(2) "pilot" means an employee who is—

(A) responsible for manipulating or who manipulates the flight controls of an aircraft when under way, including the landing and takeoff of an aircraft; and

(B) qualified to serve as, and has in effect an airman certificate authorizing the employee to serve as, a pilot.

(b) DUTIES OF AIR CARRIERS.—An air carrier shall—

(1) maintain rates of compensation, maximum hours, and other working conditions and relations for its pilots and copilots who are providing interstate air transportation in the 48 contiguous States and the District of Columbia to conform with decision number 83, May 10, 1934, National Labor Board, notwithstanding any limitation in that decision on the period of its effectiveness;

(2) maintain rates of compensation for its pilots and copilots who are providing foreign air transportation or air transportation only in one territory or possession of the United States; and

(3) comply with title II of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 181 et seq.) as long as it holds its certificate.

(c) MINIMUM ANNUAL RATE OF COMPENSATION.—A minimum annual rate under subsection (b)(2) of this section may not be less than the annual rate required to be paid for comparable service to a pilot or copilot under subsection (b)(1) of this section.

(d) COLLECTIVE BARGAINING.—This section does not prevent pilots or copilots of an air carrier from obtaining by collective bargaining higher rates of compensation or more favorable working conditions or relations.

SUBPART III—SAFETY

CHAPTER 441—REGISTRATION AND RECORDATION OF AIRCRAFT

Sec.
44101. Operation of aircraft.
44102. Registration requirements.
44103. Registration of aircraft.
44104. Registration of aircraft components and dealers' certificates of registration.
44105. Suspension and revocation of aircraft certificates.
44106. Revocation of aircraft certificates for controlled substance violations.
44107. Recordation of conveyances, leases, and security instruments.
44108. Validity of conveyances, leases, and security instruments.
44109. Reporting transfer of ownership.
44110. Information about aircraft ownership and rights.
44111. Modifications in registration and recordation system for aircraft not providing air transportation.
44112. Limitation of liability.

§44101. Operation of aircraft

(a) REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT.—Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, a person may operate an aircraft only when the aircraft is registered under section 44103 of this title.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—A person may operate an aircraft in the United States that is not registered—

(1) when authorized under section 40103(d) or 41703 of this title;

(2) when it is an aircraft of the national defense forces of the United States and is identified in a way satisfactory to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration; and

(3) for a reasonable period of time after a transfer of ownership, under regulations prescribed by the Administrator.

§44102. Registration requirements

(a) ELIGIBILITY.—An aircraft may be registered under section 44103 of this title only when the aircraft is—

(1) not registered under the laws of a foreign country and is owned by—

(A) a citizen of the United States;

(B) an individual citizen of a foreign country lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States; or

(C) a corporation not a citizen of the United States when the corporation is organized and doing business under the laws of the United States or a State, and the aircraft is based and primarily used in the United States; or

(2) an aircraft of—

(A) the United States Government; or

(B) a State, the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, or a political subdivision of a State, territory, or possession.

(b) DUTY TO DEFINE CERTAIN TERM.—In carrying out subsection (a)(1)(C) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall define "based and primarily used in the United States".

§44103. Registration of aircraft

(a) GENERAL.—(1) On application of the owner of an aircraft that meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(A) register the aircraft; and

(B) issue a certificate of registration to its owner.

(2) The Administrator may prescribe the extent to which an aircraft owned by the holder of a dealer's certificate of registration issued under section 44104(2) of this title also is registered under this section.

(b) CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE VIOLATIONS.—(1) The Administrator may not issue an owner's certificate of registration under subsection (a)(1) of this section to a person whose certificate is revoked under section 44106 of this title during the 5-year period beginning on the date of the revocation, except—

(A) as provided in section 44106(e)(2) of this title; or

(B) that the Administrator may issue the certificate to the person after the one-year period beginning on the date of the revocation if the Administrator decides that the aircraft otherwise meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title and that denial of a certificate for the 5-year period—

(i) would be excessive considering the nature of the offense or the act committed and the burden the denial places on the person; or

(ii) would not be in the public interest.

(2) A decision of the Administrator under paragraph (1)(B)(i) or (ii) of this subsection is within the discretion of the Administrator. That decision or failure to make a decision is not subject to administrative or judicial review.

(c) CERTIFICATES AS EVIDENCE.—A certificate of registration issued under this section is—

(1) conclusive evidence of the nationality of an aircraft for international purposes, but not conclusive evidence in a proceeding under the laws of the United States; and

(2) not evidence of ownership of an aircraft in a proceeding in which ownership is or may be in issue.

(d) CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE FOR INSPECTION.—An operator of an aircraft shall make available for inspection a certificate of registration for the aircraft when requested by a United States Government, State, or local law enforcement officer.

§44104. Registration of aircraft components and dealers' certificates of registration

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may prescribe regulations—

(1) in the interest of safety for registering and identifying an aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance; and

(2) in the public interest for issuing, suspending, and revoking a dealer's certificate of registration under this chapter and for its use by a person manufacturing, distributing, or selling aircraft.

§44105. Suspension and revocation of aircraft certificates

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may suspend or revoke a certificate of registration issued under section 44103 of this title when the aircraft no longer meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title.

§44106. Revocation of aircraft certificates for controlled substance violations

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "controlled substance" has the same meaning given that term in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802).

(b) REVOCATIONS.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an order revoking the certificate of registration for an aircraft issued to an owner under section 44103 of this title and any other certificate of registration that the owner of the aircraft holds under section 44103, if the Administrator finds that—

(A) the aircraft was used to carry out, or facilitate, an activity that is punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance); and

(B) the owner of the aircraft permitted the use of the aircraft knowing that the aircraft was to be used for the activity described in clause (A) of this paragraph.

(2) An aircraft owner that is not an individual is deemed to have permitted the use of the aircraft knowing that the aircraft was to be used for the activity described in paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection only if a majority of the individuals who control the owner of the aircraft or who are involved in forming the major policy of the owner permitted the use of the aircraft knowing that the aircraft was to be used for the activity described in paragraph (1)(A).

(c) ADVICE TO HOLDERS AND OPPORTUNITY TO ANSWER.—Before the Administrator revokes a certificate under subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator shall—

(1) advise the holder of the certificate of the charges or reasons on which the Administrator bases the proposed action; and

(2) provide the holder of the certificate an opportunity to answer the charges and state why the certificate should not be revoked.

(d) APPEALS.—(1) A person whose certificate is revoked by the Administrator under subsection (b) of this section may appeal the revocation order to the National Transportation Safety Board. The Board shall affirm or reverse the order after providing notice and a hearing on the record. In conducting the hearing, the Board is not bound by the findings of fact of the Administrator.

(2) When a person files an appeal with the Board under this subsection, the order of the Administrator revoking the certificate is stayed. However, if the Administrator advises the Board that safety in air transportation or air commerce requires the immediate effectiveness of the order—

(A) the order remains effective; and

(B) the Board shall dispose of the appeal not later than 60 days after notification by the Administrator under this paragraph.

(3) A person substantially affected by an order of the Board under this subsection may seek judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to that judicial proceeding.

(e) ACQUITTAL.—(1) The Administrator may not revoke, and the Board may not affirm a revocation of, a certificate of registration under this section on the basis of an activity described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section if the holder of the certificate is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity.

(2) If the Administrator has revoked a certificate of registration of a person under this section because of an activity described in subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section, the Administrator shall reissue a certificate to the person if the person—

(A) subsequently is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity; and

(B) otherwise meets the requirements of section 44102 of this title.

§44107. Recordation of conveyances, leases, and security instruments

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF SYSTEM.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish a system for recording—

(1) conveyances that affect an interest in civil aircraft of the United States;

(2) leases and instruments executed for security purposes, including conditional sales contracts, assignments, and amendments, that affect an interest in—

(A) a specifically identified aircraft engine having at least 750 rated takeoff horsepower or its equivalent;

(B) a specifically identified aircraft propeller capable of absorbing at least 750 rated takeoff shaft horsepower;

(C) an aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance maintained for installation or use in an aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller, by or for an air carrier holding a certificate issued under section 44705 of this title; and

(D) spare parts maintained by or for an air carrier holding a certificate issued under section 44705 of this title; and

(3) releases, cancellations, discharges, and satisfactions related to a conveyance, lease, or instrument recorded under clause (1) or (2) of this subsection.

(b) GENERAL DESCRIPTION REQUIRED.—A lease or instrument recorded under subsection (a)(2)(C) or (D) of this section only has to describe generally the engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part by type and designate its location.

(c) ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—Except as the Administrator otherwise may provide, a conveyance, lease, or instrument may be recorded under subsection (a) of this section only after it has been acknowledged before—

(1) a notary public; or

(2) another officer authorized under the laws of the United States, a State, the District of Columbia, or a territory or possession of the United States to acknowledge deeds.

(d) RECORDS AND INDEXES.—The Administrator shall—

(1) keep a record of the time and date that each conveyance, lease, and instrument is filed and recorded with the Administrator; and

(2) record each conveyance, lease, and instrument filed with the Administrator, in the order of their receipt, and index them by—

(A) the identifying description of the aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller, or location specified in a lease or instrument recorded under subsection (a)(2)(C) or (D) of this section; and

(B) the names of the parties to each conveyance, lease, and instrument.

§44108. Validity of conveyances, leases, and security instruments

(a) VALIDITY BEFORE FILING.—Until a conveyance, lease, or instrument executed for security purposes that may be recorded under section 44107(a)(1) or (2) of this title is filed for recording, the conveyance, lease, or instrument is valid only against—

(1) the person making the conveyance, lease, or instrument;

(2) that person's heirs and devisees; and

(3) a person having actual notice of the conveyance, lease, or instrument.

(b) PERIOD OF VALIDITY.—When a conveyance, lease, or instrument is recorded under section 44107 of this title, the conveyance, lease, or instrument is valid from the date of filing against all persons, without other recordation, except that—

(1) a lease or instrument recorded under section 44107(a)(2)(A) or (B) of this title is valid for a specifically identified engine or propeller without regard to a lease or instrument previously or subsequently recorded under section 44107(a)(2)(C) or (D); and

(2) a lease or instrument recorded under section 44107(a)(2)(C) or (D) of this title is valid only for items at the location designated in the lease or instrument.

(c) APPLICABLE LAWS.—(1) The validity of a conveyance, lease, or instrument that may be recorded under section 44107 of this title is subject to the laws of the State, the District of Columbia, or the territory or possession of the United States at which the conveyance, lease, or instrument is delivered, regardless of the place at which the subject of the conveyance, lease, or instrument is located or delivered. If the conveyance, lease, or instrument specifies the place at which delivery is intended, it is presumed that the conveyance, lease, or instrument was delivered at the specified place.

(2) This subsection does not take precedence over the Convention on the International Recognition of Rights in Aircraft (4 U.S.T. 1830).

(d) NONAPPLICATION.—This section does not apply to—

(1) a conveyance described in section 44107(a)(1) of this title that was made before August 22, 1938; or

(2) a lease or instrument described in section 44107(a)(2) of this title that was made before June 20, 1948.

§44109. Reporting transfer of ownership

(a) FILING NOTICES.—A person having an ownership interest in an aircraft for which a certificate of registration was issued under section 44103 of this title shall file a notice with the Secretary of the Treasury that the Secretary requires by regulation, not later than 15 days after a sale, conditional sale, transfer, or conveyance of the interest.

(b) EXEMPTIONS.—The Secretary—

(1) shall prescribe regulations that establish guidelines for exempting a person or class from subsection (a) of this section; and

(2) may exempt a person or class under the regulations.

§44110. Information about aircraft ownership and rights

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may provide by regulation for—

(1) endorsing information on each certificate of registration issued under section 44103 of this title and each certificate issued under section 44704 of this title about ownership of the aircraft for which each certificate is issued; and

(2) recording transactions affecting an interest in, and for other records, proceedings, and details necessary to decide the rights of a party related to, a civil aircraft of the United States, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part.

§44111. Modifications in registration and recordation system for aircraft not providing air transportation

(a) APPLICATION.—This section applies only to aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(b) AUTHORITY TO MAKE MODIFICATIONS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make modifications in the system for registering and recording aircraft necessary to make the system more effective in serving the needs of—

(1) buyers and sellers of aircraft;

(2) officials responsible for enforcing laws related to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)); and

(3) other users of the system.

(c) NATURE OF MODIFICATIONS.—Modifications made under subsection (b) of this section—

(1) may include a system of titling aircraft or registering all aircraft, even aircraft not operated;

(2) shall ensure positive, verifiable, and timely identification of the true owner; and

(3) shall address at least each of the following deficiencies in and abuses of the existing system:

(A) the registration of aircraft to fictitious persons.

(B) the use of false or nonexistent addresses by persons registering aircraft.

(C) the use by a person registering an aircraft of a post office box or "mail drop" as a return address to evade identification of the person's address.

(D) the registration of aircraft to entities established to facilitate unlawful activities.

(E) the submission of names of individuals on applications for registration of aircraft that are not identifiable.

(F) the ability to make frequent legal changes in the registration markings assigned to aircraft.

(G) the use of false registration markings on aircraft.

(H) the illegal use of "reserved" registration markings on aircraft.

(I) the large number of aircraft classified as being in "self-reported status".

(J) the lack of a system to ensure timely and adequate notice of the transfer of ownership of aircraft.

(K) the practice of allowing temporary operation and navigation of aircraft without the issuance of a certificate of registration.

(d) REGULATIONS.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section and provide a written explanation of how the regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses described in subsection (c) of this section. In prescribing the regulations, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, the Commissioner of Customs, other law enforcement officials of the United States Government, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

(2) Regulations prescribed under this subsection shall require that—

(A) each individual listed in an application for registration of an aircraft provide with the application the individual's driver's license number; and

(B) an aircraft owned or chartered by, or made available to—

(i) the United States Government; or

(ii) a State, the District of Columbia, a territory or possession of the United States, or a political subdivision of the State, territory, or possession.

(b) PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.—The Secretary may provide insurance or reinsurance under subsection (a) of this section only with the approval of the President. The President may approve the insurance or reinsurance only after deciding that the continued operation of the American aircraft or foreign-flag aircraft to be insured or reinsured is necessary to carry out the foreign policy of the United States Government.

(c) CONSULTATION.—The President may require the Secretary to consult with interested departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government before providing insurance or reinsurance under this chapter.

(d) ADDITIONAL INSURANCE.—With the approval of the Secretary, a person having an insurable interest in an aircraft may insure with other underwriters in an amount that is more than the amount insured with the Secretary. However, the Secretary may not benefit from the additional insurance. This subsection does not prevent the Secretary from making contracts of coinsurance.

§44303. Coverage

The Secretary of Transportation may provide insurance and reinsurance authorized under section 44302 of this title for the following:

(1) an American aircraft or foreign-flag aircraft engaged in aircraft operations the President decides are necessary to carry out the foreign policy of the United States Government.

(5) statutory or contractual obligations or other liabilities, customarily covered by insurance, of an aircraft referred to in clause (1) of this section or of the owner or operator of that aircraft.

§44304. Reinsurance

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—To the extent the Secretary of Transportation is authorized to provide insurance under this chapter, the Secretary may reinsure any part of the insurance provided by an insurance carrier. The Secretary may reinsure with, transfer to, or transfer back to, the carrier any insurance or reinsurance provided by the Secretary under this chapter.

(b) PREMIUM LEVELS.—The Secretary may provide reinsurance at premiums not less than, or obtain reinsurance at premiums not higher than, the premiums the Secretary establishes on similar risks or the premiums the insurance carrier charges for the insurance to be reinsured by the Secretary, whichever is most advantageous to the Secretary. However, the Secretary may make allowances to the insurance carrier for expenses incurred in providing services and facilities that the Secretary considers good business practice, except for payments by the carrier for the stimulation or solicitation of insurance business.

§44305. Insuring United States Government property

(a) GENERAL.—With the approval of the President, a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government may obtain—

(1) insurance under this chapter, including insurance for risks from operating an aircraft in intrastate or interstate air commerce, but not including insurance on valuables subject to sections 1 and 2 of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (40 U.S.C. 721, 722); and

(2) insurance for risks arising from providing goods or services directly related to and necessary for operating an aircraft covered by insurance obtained under clause (1) of this subsection if the aircraft is operated—

(A) in carrying out a contract of the department, agency, or instrumentality; or

(B) to transport military forces or materiel on behalf of the United States under an agreement between the Government and the government of a foreign country.

(b) PREMIUM WAIVERS AND INDEMNIFICATION.—With the approval required under subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation may provide the insurance without premium at the request of the Secretary of Defense or the head of a department, agency, or instrumentality designated by the President when the Secretary of Defense or the designated head agrees to indemnify the Secretary of Transportation against all losses covered by the insurance. The Secretary of Defense and any designated head may make indemnity agreements with the Secretary of Transportation under this section.

§44306. Premiums and limitations on coverage and claims

(a) PREMIUMS BASED ON RISK.—To the extent practical, the premium charged for insurance or reinsurance under this chapter shall be based on consideration of the risk involved.

(b) TIME LIMITS.—The Secretary of Transportation may provide insurance and reinsurance under this chapter for a period of not more than 60 days. The period may be extended for additional periods of not more than 60 days each only if the President decides, before each additional period, that the continued operation of the aircraft to be insured or reinsured is necessary to carry out the foreign policy of the United States Government.

(c) MAXIMUM INSURED AMOUNT.—The insurance policy on an aircraft insured or reinsured under this chapter shall specify a stated amount that is not more than the value of the aircraft, as determined by the Secretary. A claim under the policy may not be paid for more than that stated amount.

§44307. Revolving fund

(a) EXISTENCE, DISBURSEMENTS, APPROPRIATIONS, AND DEPOSITS.—(1) There is a revolving fund in the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall disburse from the fund payments to carry out this chapter.

(2) Necessary amounts to carry out this chapter may be appropriated to the fund. The amounts appropriated and other amounts received in carrying out this chapter shall be deposited in the fund.

(b) INVESTMENT.—On request of the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary of the Treasury may invest any part of the amounts in the revolving fund in interest-bearing securities of the United States Government. The interest on, and the proceeds from the sale or redemption of, the securities shall be deposited in the fund.

(c) EXCESS AMOUNTS.—The balance in the revolving fund in excess of an amount the Secretary of Transportation determines is necessary for the requirements of the fund and for reasonable reserves to maintain the solvency of the fund shall be deposited at least annually in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(d) EXPENSES.—The Secretary of Transportation shall deposit annually an amount in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts to cover the expenses the Government incurs when the Secretary of Transportation uses appropriated amounts in carrying out this chapter. The deposited amount shall equal an amount determined by multiplying the average monthly balance of appropriated amounts retained in the revolving fund by a percentage that is at least the current average rate payable on marketable obligations of the Government. The Secretary of the Treasury shall determine annually in advance the percentage applied.

§44308. Administrative

(a) COMMERCIAL PRACTICES.—The Secretary of Transportation may carry out this chapter consistent with commercial practices of the aviation insurance business.

(b) ISSUANCE OF POLICIES AND DISPOSITION OF CLAIMS.—(1) The Secretary may issue insurance policies to carry out this chapter. The Secretary may prescribe the forms, amounts insured under the policies, and premiums charged. The Secretary may change an amount of insurance or a premium for an existing policy only with the consent of the insured.

(2) For a claim under insurance authorized by this chapter, the Secretary may—

(A) settle and pay the claim made for or against the United States Government; and

(B) pay the amount of a judgment entered against the Government.

(c) UNDERWRITING AGENT.—(1) The Secretary may, and when practical shall, employ an insurance carrier or group of insurance carriers to act as an underwriting agent. The Secretary may use the agent to adjust claims under this chapter, but claims may be paid only when approved by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary may pay reasonable compensation to an underwriting agent for servicing insurance the agent writes for the Secretary. Compensation may include payment for reasonable expenses incurred by the agent but may not include a payment by the agent for stimulation or solicitation of insurance business.

(3) Except as provided by this subsection, the Secretary may not pay an insurance broker or other person acting in a similar capacity any consideration for arranging insurance when the Secretary directly insures any part of the risk.

(d) BUDGET.—The Secretary shall submit annually a budget program for carrying out this chapter as provided for wholly owned Government corporations under chapter 91 of title 31.

(e) ACCOUNTS.—The Secretary shall maintain a set of accounts. The Comptroller General shall audit those accounts under chapter 35 of title 31. Notwithstanding chapter 35, the Comptroller General shall allow credit for expenditures under this chapter made consistent with commercial practices in the aviation insurance business when shown to be necessary because of the business activities authorized by this chapter.

§44309. Civil actions

(a) DISPUTED LOSSES.—A person may bring a civil action in a district court of the United States against the United States Government when a loss insured under this chapter is in dispute. A civil action involving the same matter (except the action authorized by this subsection) may not be brought against an agent, officer, or employee of the Government carrying out this chapter. To the extent applicable, the procedure in an action brought under section 1346(a)(2) of title 28 applies to an action under this subsection.

(b) VENUE AND JOINDER.—(1) A civil action under subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the judicial district for the District of Columbia or in the judicial district in which the plaintiff or the agent of the plaintiff resides if the plaintiff resides in the United States. If the plaintiff does not reside in the United States, the action may be brought in the judicial district for the District of Columbia or in the judicial district in which the Attorney General agrees to accept service.

(2) An interested person may be joined as a party to a civil action brought under subsection (a) of this section initially or on motion of either party to the action.

(c) TIME REQUIREMENTS.—When an insurance claim is made under this chapter, the period during which, under section 2401 of title 28, a civil action must be brought under subsection (a) of this section is suspended until 60 days after the Secretary of Transportation denies the claim. The claim is deemed to be administratively denied if the Secretary does not act on the claim not later than 6 months after filing, unless the Secretary makes a different agreement with the claimant when there is good cause for an agreement.

(d) INTERPLEADER.—(1) If the Secretary admits the Government owes money under an insurance claim under this chapter and there is a dispute about the person that is entitled to payment, the Government may bring a civil action of interpleader in a district court of the United States against the persons that may be entitled to payment. The action may be brought in the judicial district for the District of Columbia or in the judicial district in which any party resides.

(2) The district court may order a party not residing or found in the judicial district in which the action is brought to appear in a civil action under this subsection. The order shall be served in a reasonable manner decided by the district court. If the court decides an unknown person might assert a claim under the insurance that is the subject of the action, the court may order service on that person by publication in the Federal Register.

(3) Judgment in a civil action under this subsection discharges the Government from further liability to the parties to the action and to all other persons served by publication under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

§44310. Ending effective date

The authority of the Secretary of Transportation to provide insurance and reinsurance under this chapter is not effective after September 30, 1997.

The plan shall be submitted not later than the date of submission of the President's budget to Congress.

(2)(A) The plan shall describe, for a 15-year period, the research, engineering, and development that the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration considers necessary—

(i) to ensure the continued capacity, safety, and efficiency of aviation in the United States, considering emerging technologies and forecasted needs of civil aeronautics; and

(ii) to provide the highest degree of safety in air travel.

(B) The plan shall cover all research conducted under sections 40119, 44504, 44505, 44507, 44511–44513, and 44912 of this title and shall identify complementary and coordinated research efforts that the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration conducts with amounts specifically appropriated to the Administration. (a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may—

(A) acquire, establish, improve, operate, and maintain air navigation facilities; and

(B) provide facilities and personnel to regulate and protect air traffic.

(2) The cost of site preparation work associated with acquiring, establishing, or improving an air navigation facility under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection shall be charged to amounts available for that purpose appropriated under section 48101(a) of this title. The Secretary of Transportation may make an agreement with an airport owner or sponsor (as defined in section 47102 of this title) so that the owner or sponsor will provide the work and be paid or reimbursed by the Secretary from the appropriated amounts.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation may authorize a department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States Government to carry out any duty or power under this subsection with the consent of the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality.

(b) CERTIFICATION OF NECESSITY.—Except for Government money expended under this part or for a military purpose, money may be expended to acquire, establish, construct, operate, repair, alter, or maintain an air navigation facility only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration certifies in writing that the facility is reasonably necessary for use in air commerce or for the national defense. An interested person may apply for a certificate for a facility to be acquired, established, constructed, operated, repaired, altered, or maintained by or for the person.

(c) ENSURING CONFORMITY WITH PLANS AND POLICIES.—(1) To ensure conformity with plans and policies for, and allocation of, airspace by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under section 40103(b)(1) of this title, a military airport, military landing area, or missile or rocket site may be acquired, established, or constructed, or a runway may be altered substantially, only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration is given reasonable prior notice so that the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may advise the appropriate committees of Congress and interested departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government on the effect of the acquisition, establishment, construction, or alteration on the use of airspace by aircraft. A disagreement between the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Secretary of Defense or the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration may be appealed to the President for a final decision.

(2) To ensure conformity, an airport or landing area not involving the expenditure of Government money may be established or constructed, or a runway may be altered substantially, only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration is given reasonable prior notice so that the Administrator may provide advice on the effects of the establishment, construction, or alteration on the use of airspace by aircraft.

(d) PUBLIC USE AND EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE.—(1) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government having jurisdiction over an air navigation facility owned or operated by the Government may provide, under regulations the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality prescribes, for public use of the facility.

(2) The head of a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government having jurisdiction over an airport or emergency landing field owned or operated by the Government may provide, under regulations the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality prescribes, for assistance, and the sale of fuel, oil, equipment, and supplies, to an aircraft, but only when necessary, because of an emergency, to allow the aircraft to continue to the nearest airport operated by private enterprise. The head of the department, agency, or instrumentality shall provide for the assistance and sale at the prevailing local fair market value as determined by the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality. An amount that the head decides is equal to the cost of the assistance provided and the fuel, oil, equipment, and supplies sold shall be credited to the appropriation from which the cost was paid. The balance shall be credited to miscellaneous receipts.

(e) CONSENT OF CONGRESS.—Congress consents to a State making an agreement, not in conflict with a law of the United States, with another State to develop or operate an airport facility.

(f) TRANSFERS OF INSTRUMENT LANDING SYSTEMS.—An airport may transfer, without consideration, to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration an instrument landing system (and associated approach lighting equipment and runway visual range equipment) that conforms to performance specifications of the Administrator if a Government airport aid program, airport development aid program, or airport improvement project grant was used to assist in purchasing the system. The Administrator shall accept the system and operate and maintain it under criteria of the Administrator.

§44503. Reducing nonessential expenditures

The Secretary of Transportation shall attempt to reduce the capital, operating, maintenance, and administrative costs of the national airport and airway system to the maximum extent practicable consistent with the highest degree of aviation safety. At least annually, the Secretary shall consult with and consider the recommendations of users of the system on ways to reduce nonessential expenditures of the United States Government for aviation. The Secretary shall give particular attention to a recommendation that may reduce, with no adverse effect on safety, future personnel requirements and costs to the Government required to be recovered from user charges.

§44504. Improved aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances

(a) DEVELOPMENTAL WORK AND SERVICE TESTING.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may conduct or supervise developmental work and service testing to improve aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances.

(7) to develop technologies and methods to assess the risk of and prevent defects, failures, and malfunctions of products, parts, processes, and articles manufactured for use in aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances that could result in a catastrophic failure of an aircraft.

(c) AUTHORITY TO BUY ITEMS OFFERING SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.—In carrying out this section, the Administrator, by negotiation or otherwise, may buy or exchange experimental aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances that the Administrator decides may offer special advantages to aeronautics.

§44505. Systems, procedures, facilities, and devices

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(A) develop, alter, test, and evaluate systems, procedures, facilities, and devices, and define their performance characteristics, to meet the needs for safe and efficient navigation and traffic control of civil and military aviation, except for needs of the armed forces that are peculiar to air warfare and primarily of military concern; and

(b) PRESCRIBING MINIMUM SAFETY STANDARDS.—The Administrator may prescribe minimum safety standards for—

(1) an air carrier to whom a certificate is issued under section 44705 of this title; and

(2) operating an airport serving any passenger operation of air carrier aircraft designed for at least 31 passenger seats.

(c) REDUCING AND ELIMINATING ACCIDENTS.—The Administrator shall carry out this chapter in a way that best tends to reduce or eliminate the possibility or recurrence of accidents in air transportation. However, the Administrator is not required to give preference either to air transportation or to other air commerce in carrying out this chapter.

(d) CONSIDERATIONS AND CLASSIFICATION OF REGULATIONS AND STANDARDS.—When prescribing a regulation or standard under subsection (a) or (b) of this section or section 44702–44716 of this title, the Administrator shall—

(1) consider—

(A) the duty of an air carrier to provide service with the highest possible degree of safety in the public interest; and

(B) differences between air transportation and other air commerce; and

(2) classify a regulation or standard appropriate to the differences between air transportation and other air commerce.

(e) EXEMPTIONS.—The Administrator may grant an exemption from a requirement of a regulation prescribed under subsection (a) or (b) of this section or section 44702–44716 of this title if the Administrator finds the exemption is in the public interest.

§44702. Issuance of certificates

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY AND APPLICATIONS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may issue airman certificates, type certificates, production certificates, airworthiness certificates, air carrier operating certificates, airport operating certificates, air agency certificates, and air navigation facility certificates under this chapter. An application for a certificate must—

(A) the duty of an air carrier to provide service with the highest possible degree of safety in the public interest; and

(B) differences between air transportation and other air commerce; and

(2) classify a certificate according to the differences between air transportation and other air commerce.

(c) PRIOR CERTIFICATION.—The Administrator may authorize an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance for which a certificate has been issued authorizing the use of the aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance in air transportation to be used in air commerce without another certificate being issued.

(d) DELEGATION.—(1) Subject to regulations, supervision, and review the Administrator may prescribe, the Administrator may delegate to a qualified private person, or to an employee under the supervision of that person, a matter related to—

(A) the examination, testing, and inspection necessary to issue a certificate under this chapter; and

(B) issuing the certificate.

(2) The Administrator may rescind a delegation under this subsection at any time for any reason the Administrator considers appropriate.

On the Administrator's own initiative, the Administrator may reconsider the action of a private person at any time. If the Administrator decides on reconsideration that the action is unreasonable or unwarranted, the Administrator shall change, modify, or reverse the action. If the Administrator decides the action is warranted, the Administrator shall affirm the action.

§44703. Airman certificates

(a) GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an airman certificate to an individual when the Administrator finds, after investigation, that the individual is qualified for, and physically able to perform the duties related to, the position to be authorized by the certificate.

(b) CONTENTS.—(1) An airman certificate shall—

(A) be numbered and recorded by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration;

(B) contain the name, address, and description of the individual to whom the certificate is issued;

(C) contain terms the Administrator decides are necessary to ensure safety in air commerce, including terms on the duration of the certificate, periodic or special examinations, and tests of physical fitness;

(D) specify the capacity in which the holder of the certificate may serve as an airman with respect to an aircraft; and

(E) designate the class the certificate covers.

(2) A certificate issued to a pilot serving in scheduled air transportation shall have the designation "airline transport pilot" of the appropriate class.

(c) APPEALS.—(1) An individual whose application for the issuance or renewal of an airman certificate has been denied may appeal the denial to the National Transportation Safety Board, except if the individual holds a certificate that—

(A) is suspended at the time of denial; or

(B) was revoked within one year from the date of the denial.

(2) The Board shall conduct a hearing on the appeal at a place convenient to the place of residence or employment of the applicant. The Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration but is bound by all validly adopted interpretations of laws and regulations the Administrator carries out unless the Board finds an interpretation is arbitrary, capricious, or otherwise not according to law. At the end of the hearing, the Board shall decide whether the individual meets the applicable regulations and standards. The Administrator is bound by that decision.

(d) RESTRICTIONS AND PROHIBITIONS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may—

(1) restrict or prohibit issuing an airman certificate to an alien; or

(2) make issuing the certificate to an alien dependent on a reciprocal agreement with the government of a foreign country.

(e) CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE VIOLATIONS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may not issue an airman certificate to an individual whose certificate is revoked under section 44710 of this title except—

(1) when the Administrator decides that issuing the certificate will facilitate law enforcement efforts; and

(2) as provided in section 44710(e)(2) of this title.

(f) MODIFICATIONS IN SYSTEM.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make modifications in the system for issuing airman certificates necessary to make the system more effective in serving the needs of pilots and officials responsible for enforcing laws related to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)). The modifications shall ensure positive and verifiable identification of each individual applying for or holding a certificate and shall address at least each of the following deficiencies in, and abuses of, the existing system:

(A) the use of fictitious names and addresses by applicants for those certificates.

(B) the use of stolen or fraudulent identification in applying for those certificates.

(C) the use by an applicant of a post office box or "mail drop" as a return address to evade identification of the applicant's address.

(D) the use of counterfeit and stolen airman certificates by pilots.

(E) the absence of information about physical characteristics of holders of those certificates.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations to carry out paragraph (1) of this subsection and provide a written explanation of how the regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses described in paragraph (1). In prescribing the regulations, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, the Commissioner of Customs, other law enforcement officials of the United States Government, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

§44704. Type certificates, production certificates, and airworthiness certificates

(a) TYPE CERTIFICATES.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue a type certificate for an aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller, or for an appliance specified under paragraph (2)(A) of this subsection when the Administrator finds that the aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance is properly designed and manufactured, performs properly, and meets the regulations and minimum standards prescribed under section 44701(a) of this title. On receiving an application for a type certificate, the Administrator shall investigate the application and may conduct a hearing. The Administrator shall make, or require the applicant to make, tests the Administrator considers necessary in the interest of safety.

(2) The Administrator may—

(A) specify in regulations those appliances that reasonably require a type certificate in the interest of safety;

(B) include in a type certificate terms required in the interest of safety; and

(C) record on the certificate a numerical specification of the essential factors related to the performance of the aircraft, aircraft engine, or propeller for which the certificate is issued.

(b) PRODUCTION CERTIFICATES.—The Administrator shall issue a production certificate authorizing the production of a duplicate of an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance for which a type certificate has been issued when the Administrator finds the duplicate will conform to the certificate. On receiving an application, the Administrator shall inspect, and may require testing of, a duplicate to ensure that it conforms to the requirements of the certificate. The Administrator may include in a production certificate terms required in the interest of safety.

(c) AIRWORTHINESS CERTIFICATES.—(1) The registered owner of an aircraft may apply to the Administrator for an airworthiness certificate for the aircraft. The Administrator shall issue an airworthiness certificate when the Administrator finds that the aircraft conforms to its type certificate and, after inspection, is in condition for safe operation. The Administrator shall register each airworthiness certificate and may include appropriate information in the certificate. The certificate number or other individual designation the Administrator requires shall be displayed on the aircraft. The Administrator may include in an airworthiness certificate terms required in the interest of safety.

(2) A person applying for the issuance or renewal of an airworthiness certificate for an aircraft for which ownership has not been recorded under section 44107 or 44110 of this title must submit with the application information related to the ownership of the aircraft the Administrator decides is necessary to identify each person having a property interest in the aircraft and the kind and extent of the interest.

§44705. Air carrier operating certificates

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an air carrier operating certificate to a person desiring to operate as an air carrier when the Administrator finds, after investigation, that the person properly and adequately is equipped and able to operate safely under this part and regulations and standards prescribed under this part. An air carrier operating certificate shall—

(1) contain terms necessary to ensure safety in air transportation; and

(2) specify the places to and from which, and the airways of the United States over which, a person may operate as an air carrier.

§44706. Airport operating certificates

(a) GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an airport operating certificate to a person desiring to operate an airport—

(1) that serves an air carrier operating aircraft designed for at least 31 passenger seats;

(2) that the Administrator requires to have a certificate; and

(3) when the Administrator finds, after investigation, that the person properly and adequately is equipped and able to operate safely under this part and regulations and standards prescribed under this part.

(b) TERMS.—An airport operating certificate issued under this section shall contain terms necessary to ensure safety in air transportation. Unless the Administrator decides that it is not in the public interest, the terms shall include conditions related to—

(1) operating and maintaining adequate safety equipment, including firefighting and rescue equipment capable of rapid access to any part of the airport used for landing, takeoff, or surface maneuvering of an aircraft; and

(2) friction treatment for primary and secondary runways that the Secretary of Transportation decides is necessary.

(c) EXEMPTIONS.—The Administrator may exempt from the requirements of this section, related to firefighting and rescue equipment, an operator of an airport described in subsection (a) of this section having less than .25 percent of the total number of passenger boardings each year at all airports described in subsection (a) when the Administrator decides that the requirements are or would be unreasonably costly, burdensome, or impractical.

§44707. Examining and rating air agencies

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may examine and rate the following air agencies:

(1) civilian schools giving instruction in flying or repairing, altering, and maintaining aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances, on the adequacy of instruction, the suitability and airworthiness of equipment, and the competency of instructors.

(2) repair stations and shops that repair, alter, and maintain aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances, on the adequacy and suitability of the equipment, facilities, and materials for, and methods of, repair and overhaul, and the competency of the individuals doing the work or giving instruction in the work.

(3) other air agencies the Administrator decides are necessary in the public interest.

§44708. Inspecting and rating air navigation facilities

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may inspect, classify, and rate an air navigation facility available for the use of civil aircraft on the suitability of the facility for that use.

§44709. Amendments, modifications, suspensions, and revocations of certificates

(a) REINSPECTION AND REEXAMINATION.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may reinspect at any time a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, air navigation facility, or air agency, or reexamine an airman holding a certificate issued under section 44703 of this title.

(b) ACTIONS OF THE ADMINISTRATOR.—The Administrator may issue an order amending, modifying, suspending, or revoking—

(1) any part of a certificate issued under this chapter if—

(A) the Administrator decides after conducting a reinspection, reexamination, or other investigation that safety in air commerce or air transportation and the public interest require that action; or

(B) the holder of the certificate has violated an aircraft noise or sonic boom standard or regulation prescribed under section 44715(a) of this title; and

(2) an airman certificate when the holder of the certificate is convicted of violating section 13(a) of the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956 (16 U.S.C. 742j-1(a)).

(c) ADVICE TO CERTIFICATE HOLDERS AND OPPORTUNITY TO ANSWER.—Before acting under subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator shall advise the holder of the certificate of the charges or other reasons on which the Administrator relies for the proposed action. Except in an emergency, the Administrator shall provide the holder an opportunity to answer the charges and be heard why the certificate should not be amended, modified, suspended, or revoked.

(d) APPEALS.—(1) A person adversely affected by an order of the Administrator under this section may appeal the order to the National Transportation Safety Board. After notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Board may amend, modify, or reverse the order when the Board finds—

(A) if the order was issued under subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section, that safety in air commerce or air transportation and the public interest do not require affirmation of the order; or

(B) if the order was issued under subsection (b)(1)(B) of this section—

(i) that control or abatement of aircraft noise or sonic boom and the public health and welfare do not require affirmation of the order; or

(ii) the order, as it is related to a violation of aircraft noise or sonic boom standards and regulations, is not consistent with safety in air commerce or air transportation.

(2) The Board may modify a suspension or revocation of a certificate to imposition of a civil penalty.

(3) When conducting a hearing under this subsection, the Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator but is bound by all validly adopted interpretations of laws and regulations the Administrator carries out and of written agency policy guidance available to the public related to sanctions to be imposed under this section unless the Board finds an interpretation is arbitrary, capricious, or otherwise not according to law.

(e) EFFECTIVENESS OF ORDERS PENDING APPEAL.—When a person files an appeal with the Board under subsection (d) of the section, the order of the Administrator is stayed. However, if the Administrator advises the Board that an emergency exists and safety in air commerce or air transportation requires the order to be effective immediately—

(1) the order is effective; and

(2) the Board shall make a final disposition of the appeal not later than 60 days after the Administrator so advises the Board.

(f) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—A person substantially affected by an order of the Board under this section, or the Administrator when the Administrator decides that an order of the Board under this section will have a significant adverse impact on carrying out this part, may obtain judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to the judicial review proceedings. Findings of fact of the Board are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence

§44710. Revocations of airman certificates for controlled substance violations

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "controlled substance" has the same meaning given that term in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802).

(b) REVOCATION.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue an order revoking an airman certificate issued an individual under section 44703 of this title after the individual is convicted, under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance), of an offense punishable by death or imprisonment for more than one year if the Administrator finds that—

(A) an aircraft was used to commit, or facilitate the commission of, the offense; and

(B) the individual served as an airman, or was on the aircraft, in connection with committing, or facilitating the commission of, the offense.

(2) The Administrator shall issue an order revoking an airman certificate issued an individual under section 44703 of this title if the Administrator finds that—

(A) the individual knowingly carried out an activity punishable, under a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance (except a law related to simple possession of a controlled substance), by death or imprisonment for more than one year;

(B) an aircraft was used to carry out or facilitate the activity; and

(C) the individual served as an airman, or was on the aircraft, in connection with carrying out, or facilitating the carrying out of, the activity.

(3) The Administrator has no authority under paragraph (1) of this subsection to review whether an airman violated a law of the United States or a State related to a controlled substance.

(c) ADVICE TO HOLDERS AND OPPORTUNITY TO ANSWER.—Before the Administrator revokes a certificate under subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator must—

(1) advise the holder of the certificate of the charges or reasons on which the Administrator relies for the proposed revocation; and

(2) provide the holder of the certificate an opportunity to answer the charges and be heard why the certificate should not be revoked.

(d) APPEALS.—(1) An individual whose certificate is revoked by the Administrator under subsection (b) of this section may appeal the revocation order to the National Transportation Safety Board. The Board shall affirm or reverse the order after providing notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record. When conducting the hearing, the Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator but shall be bound by all validly adopted interpretations of laws and regulations the Administrator carries out and of written agency policy guidance available to the public related to sanctions to be imposed under this section unless the Board finds an interpretation is arbitrary, capricious, or otherwise not according to law.

(2) When an individual files an appeal with the Board under this subsection, the order of the Administrator revoking the certificate is stayed. However, if the Administrator advises the Board that safety in air transportation or air commerce requires the immediate effectiveness of the order—

(A) the order remains effective; and

(B) the Board shall make a final disposition of the appeal not later than 60 days after the Administrator so advises the Board.

(3) An individual substantially affected by an order of the Board under this subsection, or the Administrator when the Administrator decides that an order of the Board will have a significant adverse effect on carrying out this part, may obtain judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to the judicial review proceedings. Findings of fact of the Board are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

(e) ACQUITTAL.—(1) The Administrator may not revoke, and the Board may not affirm a revocation of, an airman certificate under subsection (b)(2) of this section on the basis of an activity described in subsection (b)(2)(A) if the holder of the certificate is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity.

(2) If the Administrator has revoked an airman certificate under this section because of an activity described in subsection (b)(2)(A) of this section, the Administrator shall reissue a certificate to the individual if—

(A) the individual otherwise satisfies the requirements for a certificate under section 44703 of this title; and

(B)(i) the individual subsequently is acquitted of all charges related to a controlled substance in an indictment or information arising from the activity; or

(ii) the conviction on which a revocation under subsection (b)(1) of this section is based is reversed.

(f) WAIVERS.—The Administrator may waive the requirement of subsection (b) of this section that an airman certificate of an individual be revoked if—

(1) a law enforcement official of the United States Government or of a State requests a waiver; and

(2) the Administrator decides that the waiver will facilitate law enforcement efforts.

§44711. Prohibitions and exemption

(a) PROHIBITIONS.—A person may not—

(1) operate a civil aircraft in air commerce without an airworthiness certificate in effect or in violation of a term of the certificate;

(2) serve in any capacity as an airman with respect to a civil aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance used, or intended for use, in air commerce—

(A) without an airman certificate authorizing the airman to serve in the capacity for which the certificate was issued; or

(B) in violation of a term of the certificate or a regulation prescribed or order issued under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title;

(3) employ for service related to civil aircraft used in air commerce an airman who does not have an airman certificate authorizing the airman to serve in the capacity for which the airman is employed;

(4) operate as an air carrier without an air carrier operating certificate or in violation of a term of the certificate;

(5) operate aircraft in air commerce in violation of a regulation prescribed or certificate issued under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title;

(6) operate a seaplane or other aircraft of United States registry on the high seas in violation of a regulation under section 3 of the International Navigational Rules Act of 1977 (33 U.S.C. 1602);

(7) violate a term of an air agency or production certificate or a regulation prescribed or order issued under section 44701(a) or (b) or 44702–44716 of this title related to the holder of the certificate;

(8) operate an airport without an airport operating certificate required under section 44706 of this title or in violation of a term of the certificate; or

(9) manufacture, deliver, sell, or offer for sale any aviation fuel or additive in violation of a regulation prescribed under section 44714 of this title.

(b) EXEMPTION.—On terms the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration prescribes as being in the public interest, the Administrator may exempt a foreign aircraft and airmen serving on the aircraft from subsection (a) of this section. However, an exemption from observing air traffic regulations may not be granted.

§44712. Emergency locator transmitters

(a) INSTALLATION.—An emergency locator transmitter must be installed on a fixed-wing powered civil aircraft for use in air commerce.

(b) NONAPPLICATION.—Subsection (a) of this section does not apply to—

(1) turbojet-powered aircraft;

(2) aircraft when used in scheduled flights by scheduled air carriers holding certificates issued by the Secretary of Transportation under subpart II of this part;

(3) aircraft when used in training operations conducted entirely within a 50 mile radius of the airport from which the training operations begin;

(4) aircraft when used in flight operations related to design and testing, the manufacture, preparation, and delivery of the aircraft, or the aerial application of a substance for an agricultural purpose;

(5) aircraft holding certificates from the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration for research and development;

(6) aircraft when used for showing compliance with regulations, crew training, exhibition, air racing, or market surveys; and

(7) aircraft equipped to carry only one individual.

(c) REMOVAL.—The Administrator shall prescribe regulations specifying the conditions under which an aircraft subject to subsection (a) of this section may operate when its emergency locator transmitter has been removed for inspection, repair, alteration, or replacement.

§44713. Inspection and maintenance

(a) GENERAL EQUIPMENT REQUIREMENTS.—An air carrier shall make, or cause to be made, any inspection, repair, or maintenance of equipment used in air transportation as required by this part or regulations prescribed or orders issued by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under this part. A person operating, inspecting, repairing, or maintaining the equipment shall comply with those requirements, regulations, and orders.

(b) DUTIES OF INSPECTORS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall employ inspectors who shall—

(1) inspect aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances designed for use in air transportation, during manufacture and when in use by an air carrier in air transportation, to enable the Administrator to decide whether the aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, or appliances are in safe condition and maintained properly; and

(2) advise and cooperate with the air carrier during that inspection and maintenance.

(c) UNSAFE AIRCRAFT, ENGINES, PROPELLERS, AND APPLIANCES.—When an inspector decides that an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, or appliance is not in condition for safe operation, the inspector shall notify the air carrier in the form and way prescribed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration. For 5 days after the carrier is notified, the aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance may not be used in air transportation or in a way that endangers air transportation unless the Administrator or the inspector decides the aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance is in condition for safe operation.

(d) MODIFICATIONS IN SYSTEM.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make modifications in the system for processing forms for major repairs or alterations to fuel tanks and fuel systems of aircraft not used to provide air transportation that are necessary to make the system more effective in serving the needs of users of the system, including officials responsible for enforcing laws related to the regulation of controlled substances (as defined in section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802)). The modifications shall address at least each of the following deficiencies in, and abuses of, the existing system:

(A) the lack of a special identification feature to allow the forms to be distinguished easily from other major repair and alteration forms.

(B) the excessive period of time required to receive the forms at the Airmen and Aircraft Registry of the Administration.

(C) the backlog of forms waiting for processing at the Registry.

(D) the lack of ready access by law enforcement officials to information contained on the forms.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations to carry out paragraph (1) of this subsection and provide a written explanation of how the regulations address each of the deficiencies and abuses described in paragraph (1). In prescribing the regulations, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of Drug Enforcement, the Commissioner of Customs, other law enforcement officials of the United States Government, representatives of State and local law enforcement officials, representatives of the general aviation aircraft industry, representatives of users of general aviation aircraft, and other interested persons.

§44714. Aviation fuel standards

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe—

(1) standards for the composition or chemical or physical properties of an aircraft fuel or fuel additive to control or eliminate aircraft emissions the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency decides under section 231 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7571) endanger the public health or welfare; and

(2) regulations providing for carrying out and enforcing those standards.

§44715. Controlling aircraft noise and sonic boom

(a) STANDARDS AND REGULATIONS.—(1) To relieve and protect the public health and welfare from aircraft noise and sonic boom, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe—

(A) standards to measure aircraft noise and sonic boom; and

(B) regulations to control and abate aircraft noise and sonic boom.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may prescribe standards and regulations under this subsection only after consulting with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. The standards and regulations shall be applied when issuing, amending, modifying, suspending, or revoking a certificate authorized under this chapter.

(3) An original type certificate may be issued under section 44704(a) of this title for an aircraft for which substantial noise abatement can be achieved only after the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration prescribes standards and regulations under this section that apply to that aircraft.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS AND CONSULTATION.—When prescribing a standard or regulation under this section, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) consider relevant information related to aircraft noise and sonic boom;

(2) consult with appropriate departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government and State and interstate authorities;

(3) consider whether the standard or regulation is consistent with the highest degree of safety in air transportation or air commerce in the public interest;

(4) consider whether the standard or regulation is economically reasonable, technologically practicable, and appropriate for the applicable aircraft, aircraft engine, appliance, or certificate; and

(5) consider the extent to which the standard or regulation will carry out the purposes of this section.

(c) PROPOSED REGULATIONS OF ADMINISTRATOR OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY.—The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall submit to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration proposed regulations to control and abate aircraft noise and sonic boom (including control and abatement through the use of the authority of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration) that the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency considers necessary to protect the public health and welfare. The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consider those proposed regulations and shall publish them in a notice of proposed regulations not later than 30 days after they are received. Not later than 60 days after publication, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall begin a hearing at which interested persons are given an opportunity for oral and written presentations. Not later than 90 days after the hearing is completed and after consulting with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) prescribe regulations as provided by this section—

(A) substantially the same as the proposed regulations submitted by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency; or

(B) that amend the proposed regulations; or

(2) publish in the Federal Register—

(A) a notice that no regulation is being prescribed in response to the proposed regulations of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency;

(B) a detailed analysis of, and response to, all information the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency submitted with the proposed regulations; and

(C) a detailed explanation of why no regulation is being prescribed.

(d) CONSULTATION AND REPORTS.—(1) If the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency believes that the action of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under subsection (c)(1)(B) or (2) of this section does not protect the public health and welfare from aircraft noise or sonic boom, consistent with the considerations in subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall consult with the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and may request a report on the advisability of prescribing the regulation as originally proposed. The request, including a detailed statement of the information on which the request is based, shall be published in the Federal Register.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall report to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency within the time, if any, specified in the request. However, the time specified must be at least 90 days after the date of the request. The report shall—

(A) be accompanied by a detailed statement of the findings of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the reasons for the findings;

(B) identify any statement related to an action under subsection (c) of this section filed under section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(C));

(C) specify whether and where that statement is available for public inspection; and

(D) be published in the Federal Register unless the request proposes specific action by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the report indicates that action will be taken.

(e) SUPPLEMENTAL REPORTS.—The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency may request the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration to file a supplemental report if the report under subsection (d) of this section indicates that the proposed regulations under subsection (c) of this section, for which a statement under section 102(2)(C) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(C)) is not required, should not be prescribed. The supplemental report shall be published in the Federal Register within the time the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency specifies. However, the time specified must be at least 90 days after the date of the request. The supplemental report shall contain a comparison of the environmental effects, including those that cannot be avoided, of the action of the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the proposed regulations of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(f) EXEMPTIONS.—An exemption from a standard or regulation prescribed under this section may be granted only if, before granting the exemption, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration consults with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. However, if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration finds that safety in air transportation or air commerce requires an exemption before the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency can be consulted, the exemption may be granted. The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall consult with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency as soon as practicable after the exemption is granted.

§44716. Collision avoidance systems

(a) DEVELOPMENT AND CERTIFICATION.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall—

(1) complete the development of the collision avoidance system known as TCAS–II so that TCAS–II can operate under visual and instrument flight rules and can be upgraded to the performance standards applicable to the collision avoidance system known as TCAS–III;

(2) develop and carry out a schedule for developing and certifying TCAS–II that will result in certification not later than June 30, 1989; and

(3) submit to Congress monthly reports on the progress being made in developing and certifying TCAS–II.

(b) INSTALLATION AND OPERATION.—The Administrator shall require by regulation that, not later than 30 months after the date certification is made under subsection (a)(2) of this section, TCAS–II be installed and operated on each civil aircraft that has a maximum passenger capacity of at least 31 seats and is used to provide air transportation of passengers, including intrastate air transportation of passengers. The Administrator may extend the deadline in this subsection for not more than 2 years if the Administrator finds the extension is necessary to promote—

(1) a safe and orderly transition to the operation of a fleet of civil aircraft described in this subsection equipped with TCAS–II; or

(2) other safety objectives.

(c) OPERATIONAL EVALUATION.—Not later than December 30, 1990, the Administrator shall establish a one-year program to collect and assess safety and operational information from civil aircraft equipped with TCAS–II for the operational evaluation of TCAS–II. The Administrator shall encourage foreign air carriers that operate civil aircraft equipped with TCAS–II to participate in the program.

(d) AMENDING SCHEDULE FOR WINDSHEAR EQUIPMENT.—The Administrator shall consider the feasibility and desirability of amending the schedule for installing airborne low-altitude windshear equipment to make the schedule compatible with the schedule for installing TCAS–II.

(e) DEADLINE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND CERTIFICATION.—(1) The Administrator shall complete developing and certifying TCAS–III as soon as possible.

(2) Necessary amounts may be appropriated from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502) to carry out this subsection.

(f) INSTALLING AND USING TRANSPONDERS.—The Administrator shall prescribe regulations requiring that, not later than December 30, 1990, operating transponders with automatic altitude reporting capability be installed and used for aircraft operating in designated terminal airspace where radar service is provided for separation of aircraft. The Administrator may provide for access to that airspace (except terminal control areas and airport radar service areas) by nonequipped aircraft if the Administrator finds the access will not interfere with the normal traffic flow.

§44717. Aging aircraft

(a) INSPECTIONS AND REVIEWS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations that ensure the continuing airworthiness of aging aircraft. The regulations prescribed under subsection (a) of this section—

(1) at least shall require the Administrator to make inspections, and review the maintenance and other records, of each aircraft an air carrier uses to provide air transportation that the Administrator decides may be necessary to enable the Administrator to decide whether the aircraft is in safe condition and maintained properly for operation in air transportation;

(2) at least shall require an air carrier to demonstrate to the Administrator, as part of the inspection, that maintenance of the aircraft's age-sensitive parts and components has been adequate and timely enough to ensure the highest degree of safety;

(3) shall require the air carrier to make available to the Administrator the aircraft and any records about the aircraft that the Administrator requires to carry out a review; and

(4) shall establish procedures to be followed in carrying out an inspection.

(b) WHEN AND HOW INSPECTIONS AND REVIEWS SHALL BE CARRIED OUT.—(1) Inspections and reviews required under subsection (a)(1) of this section shall be carried out as part of each heavy maintenance check of the aircraft conducted after the 14th year in which the aircraft has been in service.

(2) Inspections under subsection (a)(1) of this section shall be carried out as provided under section 44701(a)(2)(B) and (C) of this title.

(c) AIRCRAFT MAINTENANCE SAFETY PROGRAMS.—The Administrator shall establish—

(1) a program to verify that air carriers are maintaining their aircraft according to maintenance programs approved by the Administrator;

(2) a program—

(A) to provide inspectors and engineers of the Administration with training necessary to conduct auditing inspections of aircraft operated by air carriers for corrosion and metal fatigue; and

(B) to enhance participation of those inspectors and engineers in those inspections; and

(3) a program to ensure that air carriers demonstrate to the Administrator their commitment and technical competence to ensure the airworthiness of aircraft that the carriers operate.

(d) FOREIGN AIR TRANSPORTATION.—(1) The Administrator shall take all possible steps to encourage governments of foreign countries and relevant international organizations to develop standards and requirements for inspections and reviews that—

(A) will ensure the continuing airworthiness of aging aircraft used by foreign air carriers to provide foreign air transportation to and from the United States; and

(B) will provide passengers of those foreign air carriers with the same level of safety that will be provided passengers of air carriers by carrying out this section.

(2) Not later than September 30, 1994, the Administrator shall report to Congress on carrying out this subsection.

§44718. Structures interfering with air commerce

(a) NOTICE.—By regulation or by order when necessary, the Secretary of Transportation shall require a person to give adequate public notice, in the form and way the Secretary prescribes, of the construction, alteration, establishment, or expansion, or the proposed construction, alteration, establishment, or expansion, of a structure or sanitary landfill when the notice will promote—

(1) safety in air commerce; and

(2) the efficient use and preservation of the navigable airspace and of airport traffic capacity at public-use airports.

(b) STUDIES.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if the Secretary decides that constructing or altering a structure may result in an obstruction of the navigable airspace or an interference with air navigation facilities and equipment or the navigable airspace, the Secretary shall conduct an aeronautical study to decide the extent of any adverse impact on the safe and efficient use of the airspace, facilities, or equipment. In conducting the study, the Secretary shall consider factors relevant to the efficient and effective use of the navigable airspace, including—

(A) the impact on arrival, departure, and en route procedures for aircraft operating under visual flight rules;

(B) the impact on arrival, departure, and en route procedures for aircraft operating under instrument flight rules;

(C) the impact on existing public-use airports and aeronautical facilities;

(D) the impact on planned public-use airports and aeronautical facilities; and

(E) the cumulative impact resulting from the proposed construction or alteration of a structure when combined with the impact of other existing or proposed structures.

(2) On completing the study, the Secretary shall issue a report disclosing completely the extent of the adverse impact on the safe and efficient use of the navigable airspace that the Secretary finds will result from constructing or altering the structure.

(c) BROADCAST APPLICATIONS AND TOWER STUDIES.—In carrying out laws related to a broadcast application and conducting an aeronautical study related to broadcast towers, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Communications Commission shall take action necessary to coordinate efficiently—

(1) the receipt and consideration of, and action on, the application; and

(2) the completion of any associated aeronautical study.

§44719. Standards for navigational aids

The Secretary of Transportation shall prescribe regulations on standards for installing navigational aids, including airport control towers. For each type of facility, the regulations shall consider at a minimum traffic density (number of aircraft operations without consideration of aircraft size), terrain and other obstacles to navigation, weather characteristics, passengers served, and potential aircraft operating efficiencies.

§44720. Meteorological services

(a) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make recommendations to the Secretary of Commerce on providing meteorological services necessary for the safe and efficient movement of aircraft in air commerce. In providing the services, the Secretary shall cooperate with the Administrator and give complete consideration to those recommendations.

(b) PROMOTING SAFETY AND EFFICIENCY.—To promote safety and efficiency in air navigation to the highest possible degree, the Secretary shall—

(1) observe, measure, investigate, and study atmospheric phenomena, and maintain meteorological stations and offices, that are necessary or best suited for finding out in advance information about probable weather conditions;

(2) provide reports to the Administrator to persons engaged in civil aeronautics that are designated by the Administrator and to other persons designated by the Secretary in a way and with a frequency that best will result in safety in, and facilitating, air navigation;

(3) cooperate with persons engaged in air commerce in meteorological services, maintain reciprocal arrangements with those persons in carrying out this clause, and collect and distribute weather reports available from aircraft in flight;

(4) maintain and coordinate international exchanges of meteorological information required for the safety and efficiency of air navigation;

(5) in cooperation with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, meteorological services of foreign countries, and persons engaged in air commerce, participate in developing an international basic meteorological reporting network, including the establishment, operation, and maintenance of reporting stations on the high seas, in polar regions, and in foreign countries;

(6) coordinate meteorological requirements in the United States to maintain standard observations, to promote efficient use of facilities, and to avoid duplication of services unless the duplication tends to promote the safety and efficiency of air navigation; and

(7) promote and develop meteorological science and foster and support research projects in meteorology through the use of private and governmental research facilities and provide for publishing the results of the projects unless publication would not be in the public interest.

§44721. Aeronautical maps and charts

(a) PUBLICATION.—(1) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may arrange for the publication of aeronautical maps and charts necessary for the safe and efficient movement of aircraft in air navigation, using the facilities and assistance of departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government as far as practicable.

(2) In carrying out paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Administrator shall update and arrange for the publication of clearly defined routes for navigating through a complex terminal airspace area and to and from an airport located in such an area, if the Administrator decides that publication of the routes would promote safety in air navigation. The routes shall be developed in consultation with pilots and other users of affected airports and shall be for the optional use of pilots operating under visual flight rules.

(b) INDEMNIFICATION.—The Government shall make an agreement to indemnify any person that publishes a map or chart for use in aeronautics from any part of a claim arising out of the depiction by the person on the map or chart of a defective or deficient flight procedure or airway if the flight procedure or airway was—

(1) prescribed by the Administrator;

(2) depicted accurately on the map or chart; and

(3) not obviously defective or deficient.

§44722. Aircraft operations in winter conditions

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations requiring procedures to improve safety of aircraft operations during winter conditions. In deciding on the procedures to be required, the Administrator shall consider at least aircraft and air traffic control modifications, the availability of different types of deicing fluids (considering their efficacy and environmental limitations), the types of deicing equipment available, and the feasibility and desirability of establishing timeframes within which deicing must occur under certain types of inclement weather.

§44723. Annual report

Not later than January 1 of each year, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a comprehensive report on the safety enforcement activities of the Federal Aviation Administration during the fiscal year ending the prior September 30th. The report shall include—

(1) a comparison of end-of-year staffing levels by operations, maintenance, and avionics inspector categories to staffing goals and a statement on how staffing standards were applied to make allocations between air carrier and general aviation operations, maintenance, and avionics inspectors;

(2) schedules showing the range of inspector experience by various inspector work force categories, and the number of inspectors in each of the categories who are considered fully qualified;

(3) schedules showing the number and percentage of inspectors who have received mandatory training by individual course, and the number of inspectors by work force categories, who have received all mandatory training;

(4) a description of the criteria used to set annual work programs, an explanation of how these criteria differ from criteria used in the prior fiscal year and how the annual work programs ensure compliance with appropriate regulations and safe operating practices;

(5) a comparison of actual inspections performed during the fiscal year to the annual work programs by field location and, for any field location completing less than 80 percent of its planned number of inspections, an explanation of why annual work program plans were not met;

(6) a statement of the adequacy of Administration internal management controls available to ensure that field managers comply with Administration policies and procedures, including those on inspector priorities, district office coordination, minimum inspection standards, and inspection followup;

(7) the status of efforts made by the Administration to update inspector guidance documents and regulations to include technological, management, and structural changes taking place in the aviation industry, including a listing of the backlog of all proposed regulatory amendments;

(10) a schedule showing the number of enforcement actions taken (except civil penalties) during the 2 prior fiscal years, including the total number of violations cited, and the number of cited violation cases closed by certificate suspensions, certificate revocations, warnings, and no action taken; and

(11) schedules showing the safety record of the aviation industry during the fiscal year for air carriers and general aviation, including—

(A) the number of inspections performed when deficiencies were identified compared with inspections when no deficiencies were found;

(B) the frequency of safety deficiencies for each air carrier; and

SUBCHAPTER I—REQUIREMENTS

§44901. Screening passengers and property

(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations requiring screening of all passengers and property that will be carried in a cabin of an aircraft in air transportation or intrastate air transportation. The screening must take place before boarding and be carried out by a weapon-detecting facility or procedure used or operated by an employee or agent of an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier.

(b) AMENDING REGULATIONS.—Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section, the Administrator may amend a regulation prescribed under subsection (a) to require screening only to ensure security against criminal violence and aircraft piracy in air transportation and intrastate air transportation.

(c) EXEMPTIONS AND ADVISING CONGRESS ON REGULATIONS.—The Administrator—

(1) may exempt from this section air transportation operations, except scheduled passenger operations of an air carrier providing air transportation under a certificate issued under section 41102 of this title or a permit issued under section 41302 of this title; and

(2) shall advise Congress of a regulation to be prescribed under this section at least 30 days before the effective date of the regulation, unless the Administrator decides an emergency exists requiring the regulation to become effective in fewer than 30 days and notifies Congress of that decision.

§44902. Refusal to transport passengers and property

(a) MANDATORY REFUSAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations requiring an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier to refuse to transport—

(1) a passenger who does not consent to a search under section 44901(a) of this title establishing whether the passenger is carrying unlawfully a dangerous weapon, explosive, or other destructive substance; or

(2) property of a passenger who does not consent to a search of the property establishing whether the property unlawfully contains a dangerous weapon, explosive, or other destructive substance.

(b) PERMISSIVE REFUSAL.—Subject to regulations of the Administrator, an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier may refuse to transport a passenger or property the carrier decides is, or might be, inimical to safety.

(c) AGREEING TO CONSENT TO SEARCH.—An agreement to carry passengers or property in air transportation or intrastate air transportation by an air carrier, intrastate air carrier, or foreign air carrier is deemed to include an agreement that the passenger or property will not be carried if consent to search the passenger or property for a purpose referred to in this section is not given.

§44903. Air transportation security

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, "law enforcement personnel" means individuals—

(1) authorized to carry and use firearms;

(2) vested with the degree of the police power of arrest the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration considers necessary to carry out this section; and

(3) identifiable by appropriate indicia of authority.

(b) PROTECTION AGAINST VIOLENCE AND PIRACY.—The Administrator shall prescribe regulations to protect passengers and property on an aircraft operating in air transportation or intrastate air transportation against an act of criminal violence or aircraft piracy. When prescribing a regulation under this subsection, the Administrator shall—

(1) consult with the Secretary of Transportation, the Attorney General, the heads of other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States Government, and State and local authorities;

(2) consider whether a proposed regulation is consistent with—

(A) protecting passengers; and

(B) the public interest in promoting air transportation and intrastate air transportation;

(3) to the maximum extent practicable, require a uniform procedure for searching and detaining passengers and property to ensure—

(A) their safety; and

(B) courteous and efficient treatment by an air carrier, an agent or employee of an air carrier, and Government, State, and local law enforcement personnel carrying out this section; and

(4) consider the extent to which a proposed regulation will carry out this section.

(c) SECURITY PROGRAMS.—(1) The Administrator shall prescribe regulations under subsection (b) of this section that require each operator of an airport regularly serving an air carrier holding a certificate issued by the Secretary of Transportation to establish an air transportation security program that provides a law enforcement presence and capability at each of those airports that is adequate to ensure the safety of passengers. The regulations shall authorize the operator to use the services of qualified State, local, and private law enforcement personnel. When the Administrator decides, after being notified by an operator in the form the Administrator prescribes, that not enough qualified State, local, and private law enforcement personnel are available to carry out subsection (b), the Administrator may authorize the operator to use, on a reimbursable basis, personnel employed by the Administrator, or by another department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government with the consent of the head of the department, agency, or instrumentality, to supplement State, local, and private law enforcement personnel. When deciding whether additional personnel are needed, the Administrator shall consider the number of passengers boarded at the airport, the extent of anticipated risk of criminal violence or aircraft piracy at the airport or to the air carrier aircraft operations at the airport, and the availability of qualified State or local law enforcement personnel at the airport.

(2)(A) The Administrator may approve a security program of an airport operator, or an amendment in an existing program, that incorporates a security program of an airport tenant (except an air carrier separately complying with part 108 or 129 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations) having access to a secured area of the airport, if the program or amendment incorporates—

(i) the measures the tenant will use, within the tenant's leased areas or areas designated for the tenant's exclusive use under an agreement with the airport operator, to carry out the security requirements imposed by the Administrator on the airport operator under the access control system requirements of section 107.14 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, or under other requirements of part 107 of title 14; and

(ii) the methods the airport operator will use to monitor and audit the tenant's compliance with the security requirements and provides that the tenant will be required to pay monetary penalties to the airport operator if the tenant fails to carry out a security requirement under a contractual provision or requirement imposed by the airport operator.

(B) If the Administrator approves a program or amendment described in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the airport operator may not be found to be in violation of a requirement of this subsection or subsection (b) of this section when the airport operator demonstrates that the tenant or an employee, permittee, or invitee of the tenant is responsible for the violation and that the airport operator has complied with all measures in its security program for securing compliance with its security program by the tenant.

(d) AUTHORIZING INDIVIDUALS TO CARRY FIREARMS AND MAKE ARRESTS.—With the approval of the Attorney General and the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation may authorize an individual who carries out air transportation security duties—

(1) to carry firearms; and

(2) to make arrests without warrant for an offense against the United States committed in the presence of the individual or for a felony under the laws of the United States, if the individual reasonably believes the individual to be arrested has committed or is committing a felony.

(e) EXCLUSIVE RESPONSIBILITY OVER PASSENGER SAFETY.—The Administrator has the exclusive responsibility to direct law enforcement activity related to the safety of passengers on an aircraft involved in an offense under section 46502 of this title from the moment all external doors of the aircraft are closed following boarding until those doors are opened to allow passengers to leave the aircraft. When requested by the Administrator, other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government shall provide assistance necessary to carry out this subsection.

§44904. Domestic air transportation system security

(a) ASSESSING THREATS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation jointly shall assess current and potential threats to the domestic air transportation system. The assessment shall include consideration of the extent to which there are individuals with the capability and intent to carry out terrorist or related unlawful acts against that system and the ways in which those individuals might carry out those acts. The Administrator and the Director jointly shall decide on and carry out the most effective method for continuous analysis and monitoring of security threats to that system.

(b) ASSESSING SECURITY.—In coordination with the Director, the Administrator shall carry out periodic threat and vulnerability assessments on security at each airport that is part of the domestic air transportation system. Each assessment shall include consideration of—

(1) the adequacy of security procedures related to the handling and transportation of checked baggage and cargo;

(2) space requirements for security personnel and equipment;

(3) separation of screened and unscreened passengers, baggage, and cargo;

(4) separation of the controlled and uncontrolled areas of airport facilities; and

(5) coordination of the activities of security personnel of the Administration, the United States Customs Service, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and air carriers, and of other law enforcement personnel.

(c) IMPROVING SECURITY.—The Administrator shall take necessary actions to improve domestic air transportation security by correcting any deficiencies in that security discovered in the assessments, analyses, and monitoring carried out under this section.

§44905. Information about threats to civil aviation

(a) PROVIDING INFORMATION.—Under guidelines the Secretary of Transportation prescribes, an air carrier, airport operator, ticket agent, or individual employed by an air carrier, airport operator, or ticket agent, receiving information (except a communication directed by the United States Government) about a threat to civil aviation shall provide the information promptly to the Secretary.

(b) FLIGHT CANCELLATION.—If a decision is made that a particular threat cannot be addressed in a way adequate to ensure, to the extent feasible, the safety of passengers and crew of a particular flight or series of flights, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall cancel the flight or series of flights.

(c) GUIDELINES ON PUBLIC NOTICE.—(1) The President shall develop guidelines for ensuring that public notice is provided in appropriate cases about threats to civil aviation. The guidelines shall identify officials responsible for—

(A) deciding, on a case-by-case basis, if public notice of a threat is in the best interest of the United States and the traveling public;

(B) ensuring that public notice is provided in a timely and effective way, including the use of a toll-free telephone number; and

(C) canceling the departure of a flight or series of flights under subsection (b) of this section.

(2) The guidelines shall provide for consideration of—

(A) the specificity of the threat;

(B) the credibility of intelligence information related to the threat;

(C) the ability to counter the threat effectively;

(D) the protection of intelligence information sources and methods;

(E) cancellation, by an air carrier or the Administrator, of a flight or series of flights instead of public notice;

(F) the ability of passengers and crew to take steps to reduce the risk to their safety after receiving public notice of a threat; and

(G) other factors the Administrator considers appropriate.

(d) GUIDELINES ON NOTICE TO CREWS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines for ensuring that notice in appropriate cases of threats to the security of an air carrier flight is provided to the flight crew and cabin crew of that flight.

(e) LIMITATION ON NOTICE TO SELECTIVE TRAVELERS.—Notice of a threat to civil aviation may be provided to selective potential travelers only if the threat applies only to those travelers.

(f) RESTRICTING ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—In cooperation with the departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Government that collect, receive, and analyze intelligence information related to aviation security, the Administrator shall develop procedures to minimize the number of individuals who have access to information about threats. However, a restriction on access to that information may be imposed only if the restriction does not diminish the ability of the Government to carry out its duties and powers related to aviation security effectively, including providing notice to the public and flight and cabin crews under this section.

(g) DISTRIBUTION OF GUIDELINES.—The guidelines developed under this section shall be distributed for use by appropriate officials of the Department of Transportation, the Department of State, the Department of Justice, and air carriers.

§44906. Foreign air carrier security programs

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall continue in effect the requirement of section 129.25 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, that a foreign air carrier must adopt and use a security program approved by the Administrator. The Administrator may approve a security program of a foreign air carrier under section 129.25 only if the Administrator decides the security program provides passengers of the foreign air carrier a level of protection similar to the level those passengers would receive under the security programs of air carriers serving the same airport. The Administrator shall require a foreign air carrier to use procedures equivalent to those required of air carriers serving the same airport if the Administrator decides that the procedures are necessary to provide a level of protection similar to that provided passengers of the air carriers serving the same airport. The Administrator shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section.

§44907. Security standards at foreign airports

(a) ASSESSMENT.—(1) At intervals the Secretary of Transportation considers necessary, the Secretary shall assess the effectiveness of the security measures maintained at—

(A) a foreign airport—

(i) served by an air carrier;

(ii) from which a foreign air carrier serves the United States; or

(iii) that poses a high risk of introducing danger to international air travel; and

(B) other foreign airports the Secretary considers appropriate.

(2) The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct an assessment under paragraph (1) of this subsection—

(A) in consultation with appropriate aeronautic authorities of the government of a foreign country concerned and each air carrier serving the foreign airport for which the Secretary is conducting the assessment;

(B) to establish the extent to which a foreign airport effectively maintains and carries out security measures; and

(C) by using a standard that will result in an analysis of the security measures at the airport based at least on the standards and appropriate recommended practices contained in Annex 17 to the Convention on International Civil Aviation in effect on the date of the assessment.

(3) Each report to Congress required under section 44938(b) of this title shall contain a summary of the assessments conducted under this subsection.

(b) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Secretary of State—

(1) on the terrorist threat that exists in each country; and

(2) to establish which foreign airports are not under the de facto control of the government of the foreign country in which they are located and pose a high risk of introducing danger to international air travel.

(c) NOTIFYING FOREIGN AUTHORITIES.—When the Secretary of Transportation, after conducting an assessment under subsection (a) of this section, decides that an airport does not maintain and carry out effective security measures, the Secretary of Transportation, after advising the Secretary of State, shall notify the appropriate authorities of the government of the foreign country of the decision and recommend the steps necessary to bring the security measures in use at the airport up to the standard used by the Secretary of Transportation in making the assessment.

(d) ACTIONS WHEN AIRPORTS NOT MAINTAINING AND CARRYING OUT EFFECTIVE SECURITY MEASURES.—(1) When the Secretary of Transportation decides under this section that an airport does not maintain and carry out effective security measures—

(B) each air carrier and foreign air carrier providing transportation between the United States and the airport shall provide written notice of the decision, on or with the ticket, to each passenger buying a ticket for transportation between the United States and the airport;

(C) notwithstanding section 40105(b) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation, after consulting with the appropriate aeronautic authorities of the foreign country concerned and each air carrier serving the airport and with the approval of the Secretary of State, may withhold, revoke, or prescribe conditions on the operating authority of an air carrier or foreign air carrier that uses that airport to provide foreign air transportation; and

(D) the President may prohibit an air carrier or foreign air carrier from providing transportation between the United States and any other foreign airport that is served by aircraft flying to or from the airport with respect to which a decision is made under this section.

(2)(A) Paragraph (1) of this subsection becomes effective—

(i) 90 days after the government of a foreign country is notified under subsection (c) of this section if the Secretary of Transportation finds that the government has not brought the security measures at the airport up to the standard the Secretary used in making an assessment under subsection (a) of this section; or

(ii) immediately on the decision of the Secretary of Transportation under subsection (c) of this section if the Secretary of Transportation decides, after consulting with the Secretary of State, that a condition exists that threatens the safety or security of passengers, aircraft, or crew traveling to or from the airport.

(B) The Secretary of Transportation immediately shall notify the Secretary of State of a decision under subparagraph (A)(ii) of this paragraph so that the Secretary of State may issue a travel advisory required under section 44908(a) of this title.

(3) The Secretary of Transportation promptly shall submit to Congress a report (and classified annex if necessary) on action taken under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, including information on attempts made to obtain the cooperation of the government of a foreign country in meeting the standard the Secretary used in assessing the airport under subsection (a) of this section.

(4) An action required under paragraph (1)(A) and (B) of this subsection is no longer required only if the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretary of State, decides that effective security measures are maintained and carried out at the airport. The Secretary of Transportation shall notify Congress when the action is no longer required to be taken.

(e) SUSPENSIONS.—Notwithstanding sections 40105(b) and 40106(b) of this title, the Secretary of Transportation, with the approval of the Secretary of State and without notice or a hearing, shall suspend the right of an air carrier or foreign air carrier to provide foreign air transportation, and the right of a person to operate aircraft in foreign air commerce, to or from a foreign airport when the Secretary of Transportation decides that—

(1) a condition exists that threatens the safety or security of passengers, aircraft, or crew traveling to or from that airport; and

(2) the public interest requires an immediate suspension of transportation between the United States and that airport.

(f) CONDITION OF CARRIER AUTHORITY.—This section is a condition to authority the Secretary of Transportation grants under this part to an air carrier or foreign air carrier.

§44908. Travel advisory and suspension of foreign assistance

(a) TRAVEL ADVISORIES.—On being notified by the Secretary of Transportation that the Secretary of Transportation has decided under section 44907(d)(2)(A)(ii) of this title that a condition exists that threatens the safety or security of passengers, aircraft, or crew traveling to or from a foreign airport that the Secretary of Transportation has decided under section 44907 of this title does not maintain and carry out effective security measures, the Secretary of State—

(1) immediately shall issue a travel advisory for that airport;

(2) shall publish the advisory in the Federal Register; and

(3) shall publicize the advisory widely.

(b) SUSPENDING ASSISTANCE.—The President shall suspend assistance provided under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151 et seq.) or the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2751 et seq.) to a country in which is located an airport with respect to which section 44907(d)(1) of this title becomes effective if the Secretary of State decides the country is a high terrorist threat country. The President may waive this subsection if the President decides, and reports to Congress, that the waiver is required because of national security interests or a humanitarian emergency.

(c) ACTIONS NO LONGER REQUIRED.—An action required under this section is no longer required only if the Secretary of Transportation has made a decision as provided under section 44907(d)(4) of this title. The Secretary shall notify Congress when the action is no longer required to be taken.

§44909. Passenger manifests

(a) AIR CARRIER REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Not later than March 16, 1991, the Secretary of Transportation shall require each air carrier to provide a passenger manifest for a flight to an appropriate representative of the Secretary of State—

(A) not later than one hour after that carrier is notified of an aviation disaster outside the United States involving that flight; or

(B) if it is not technologically feasible or reasonable to comply with clause (A) of this paragraph, then as expeditiously as possible, but not later than 3 hours after the carrier is so notified.

(2) The passenger manifest shall include the following information:

(A) the full name of each passenger.

(B) the passport number of each passenger, if required for travel.

(C) the name and telephone number of a contact for each passenger.

(3) In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation shall consider the necessity and feasibility of requiring air carriers to collect passenger manifest information as a condition for passengers boarding a flight of the carrier.

(b) FOREIGN AIR CARRIER REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall consider imposing a requirement on foreign air carriers comparable to that imposed on air carriers under subsection (a)(1) and (2) of this section.

§44910. Agreements on aircraft sabotage, aircraft hijacking, and airport security

(a) DEPLOYMENT AND PURCHASE OF EQUIPMENT.—(1) A deployment or purchase of explosive detection equipment under section 108.7(b)(8) or 108.20 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, or similar regulation is required only if the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration certifies that the equipment alone, or as part of an integrated system, can detect under realistic air carrier operating conditions the amounts, configurations, and types of explosive material that would likely be used to cause catastrophic damage to commercial aircraft. The Administrator shall base the certification on the results of tests conducted under protocols developed in consultation with expert scientists outside of the Administration. Those tests shall be completed not later than April 16, 1992.

(2) Before completion of the tests described in paragraph (1) of this subsection, but not later than April 16, 1992, the Administrator may require deployment of explosive detection equipment described in paragraph (1) if the Administrator decides that deployment will enhance aviation security significantly. In making that decision, the Administrator shall consider factors such as the ability of the equipment alone, or as part of an integrated system, to detect under realistic air carrier operating conditions the amounts, configurations, and types of explosive material that would likely be used to cause catastrophic damage to commercial aircraft. The Administrator shall notify the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives of a deployment decision made under this paragraph.

§45101. Definition

In this chapter, "controlled substance" means any substance under section 102 of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (21 U.S.C. 802) specified by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

§45102. Alcohol and controlled substances testing programs

(a) Program for Employees of Air Carriers and Foreign Air Carriers.—(1) In the interest of aviation safety, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations not later than October 28, 1992, that establish a program requiring air carriers and foreign air carriers to conduct preemployment, reasonable suspicion, random, and post-accident testing of airmen, crewmembers, airport security screening contract personnel, and other air carrier employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Administrator) for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation.

(2) When the Administrator considers it appropriate in the interest of safety, the Administrator may prescribe regulations for conducting periodic recurring testing of airmen, crewmembers, airport security screening contract personnel, and other air carrier employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation.

(b) Program for Employees of the Federal Aviation Administration.—(1) The Administrator shall establish a program of preemployment, reasonable suspicion, random, and post-accident testing for the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation for employees of the Administration whose duties include responsibility for safety-sensitive functions.

(2) When the Administrator considers it appropriate in the interest of safety, the Administrator may prescribe regulations for conducting periodic recurring testing of employees of the Administration responsible for safety-sensitive functions for use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation.

(c) SANCTIONS.—In prescribing regulations under the programs required by this section, the Administrator shall require, as the Administrator considers appropriate, the suspension or revocation of any certificate issued to an individual referred to in this section, or the disqualification or dismissal of the individual, under this chapter when a test conducted and confirmed under this chapter indicates the individual has used alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a Government regulation.

§45103. Prohibited service

(a) USE OF ALCOHOL OR A CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE.—An individual may not use alcohol or a controlled substance after October 28, 1991, in violation of law or a United States Government regulation and serve as an airman, crewmember, airport security screening contract employee, air carrier employee responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration), or employee of the Administration with responsibility for safety-sensitive functions.

(b) REHABILITATION REQUIRED TO RESUME SERVICE.—Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section, an individual found to have used alcohol or a controlled substance after October 28, 1991, in violation of law or a Government regulation may serve as an airman, crewmember, airport security screening contract employee, air carrier employee responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Administrator), or employee of the Administration with responsibility for safety-sensitive functions only if the individual completes a rehabilitation program described in section 45105 of this title.

(c) PERFORMANCE OF PRIOR DUTIES PROHIBITED.—An individual who served as an airman, crewmember, airport security screening contract employee, air carrier employee responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Administrator), or employee of the Administration with responsibility for safety-sensitive functions and who was found by the Administrator to have used alcohol or a controlled substance after October 28, 1991, in violation of law or a Government regulation may not carry out the duties related to air transportation that the individual carried out before the finding of the Administrator if the individual—

(1) used the alcohol or controlled substance when on duty;

(2) began or completed a rehabilitation program described in section 45105 of this title before using the alcohol or controlled substance; or

(3) refuses to begin or complete a rehabilitation program described in section 45105 of this title after a finding by the Administrator under this section.

§45104. Testing and laboratory requirements

In carrying out section 45102 of this title, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall develop requirements that—

(1) promote, to the maximum extent practicable, individual privacy in the collection of specimens;

(2) for laboratories and testing procedures for controlled substances, incorporate the Department of Health and Human Services scientific and technical guidelines dated April 11, 1988, and any amendments to those guidelines, including mandatory guidelines establishing—

(A) comprehensive standards for every aspect of laboratory controlled substances testing and laboratory procedures to be applied in carrying out this chapter, including standards requiring the use of the best available technology to ensure the complete reliability and accuracy of controlled substances tests and strict procedures governing the chain of custody of specimens collected for controlled substances testing;

(B) the minimum list of controlled substances for which individuals may be tested; and

(C) appropriate standards and procedures for periodic review of laboratories and criteria for certification and revocation of certification of laboratories to perform controlled substances testing in carrying out this chapter;

(3) require that a laboratory involved in controlled substances testing under this chapter have the capability and facility, at the laboratory, of performing screening and confirmation tests;

(4) provide that all tests indicating the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation be confirmed by a scientifically recognized method of testing capable of providing quantitative information about alcohol or a controlled substance;

(5) provide that each specimen be subdivided, secured, and labeled in the presence of the tested individual and that a part of the specimen be retained in a secure manner to prevent the possibility of tampering, so that if the individual's confirmation test results are positive the individual has an opportunity to have the retained part tested by a 2d confirmation test done independently at another certified laboratory if the individual requests the 2d confirmation test not later than 3 days after being advised of the results of the first confirmation test;

(6) ensure appropriate safeguards for testing to detect and quantify alcohol in breath and body fluid samples, including urine and blood, through the development of regulations that may be necessary and in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services;

(7) provide for the confidentiality of test results and medical information (except information about alcohol or a controlled substance) of employees, except that this clause does not prevent the use of test results for the orderly imposition of appropriate sanctions under this chapter; and

(8) ensure that employees are selected for tests by nondiscriminatory and impartial methods, so that no employee is harassed by being treated differently from other employees in similar circumstances.

§45105. Rehabilitation

(a) PROGRAM FOR EMPLOYEES OF AIR CARRIERS AND FOREIGN AIR CARRIERS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall prescribe regulations establishing requirements for rehabilitation programs that at least provide for the identification and opportunity for treatment of employees of air carriers and foreign air carriers referred to in section 45102(a)(1) of this title who need assistance in resolving problems with the use of alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation. Each air carrier and foreign air carrier is encouraged to make such a program available to all its employees in addition to the employees referred to in section 45102(a)(1)(A). The Administrator shall decide on the circumstances under which employees shall be required to participate in a program. This subsection does not prevent an air carrier or foreign air carrier from establishing a program under this subsection in cooperation with another air carrier or foreign air carrier.

(b) PROGRAM FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION.—The Administrator shall establish and maintain a rehabilitation program that at least provides for the identification and opportunity for treatment of employees of the Administration whose duties include responsibility for safety-sensitive functions who need assistance in resolving problems with the use of alcohol or a controlled substance.

§45106. Relationship to other laws, regulations, standards, and orders

(a) EFFECT ON STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT LAWS, REGULATIONS, STANDARDS, OR ORDERS.—A State or local government may not prescribe, issue, or continue in effect a law, regulation, standard, or order that is inconsistent with regulations prescribed under this chapter. However, a regulation prescribed under this chapter does not preempt a State criminal law that imposes sanctions for reckless conduct leading to loss of life, injury, or damage to property.

(b) INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS AND FOREIGN LAWS.—(1) In prescribing regulations under this chapter, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration—

(A) shall establish only requirements applicable to foreign air carriers that are consistent with international obligations of the United States; and

(B) shall consider applicable laws and regulations of foreign countries.

(2) The Secretaries of State and Transportation jointly shall request the governments of foreign countries that are members of the International Civil Aviation Organization to strengthen and enforce existing standards to prohibit crewmembers in international civil aviation from using alcohol or a controlled substance in violation of law or a United States Government regulation.

(c) OTHER REGULATIONS ALLOWED.—This section does not prevent the Administrator from continuing in effect, amending, or further supplementing a regulation prescribed before October 28, 1991, governing the use of alcohol or a controlled substance by airmen, crewmembers, airport security screening contract employees, air carrier employees responsible for safety-sensitive functions (as decided by the Administrator), or employees of the Administration with responsibility for safety-sensitive functions.

Findings of fact by the Secretary or Administrator, if supported by substantial evidence, are conclusive.

(d) REQUIREMENT FOR PRIOR OBJECTION.—In reviewing an order under this section, the court may consider an objection to an order of the Secretary or Administrator only if the objection was made in the proceeding conducted by the Secretary or Administrator or if there was a reasonable ground for not making the objection in the proceeding.

(D) a violation under subsection (a)(1) of this section related to the transportation of hazardous material.

(2) The Secretary shall give written notice of the finding of a violation and the civil penalty under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(d) ADMINISTRATIVE IMPOSITION OF PENALTIES.—(1) In this subsection—

(A) "flight engineer" means an individual who holds a flight engineer certificate issued under part 63 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.

(B) "mechanic" means an individual who holds a mechanic certificate issued under part 65 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.

(C) "pilot" means an individual who holds a pilot certificate issued under part 61 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.

(D) "repairman" means an individual who holds a repairman certificate issued under part 65 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.

(2) The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may impose a civil penalty for a violation of chapter 401 (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, 40106(b), 40116, and 40117), chapter 441 (except section 44109), or section 44701(a) or (b), 44702–44716, 44901, 44903(b) or (c), 44905, 44906, 44907(d)(1)(B), 44912–44915, 44932–44938, 46302, or 46303 of this title or a regulation prescribed or order issued under any of those provisions. The Administrator shall give written notice of the finding of a violation and the penalty.

(3) In a civil action to collect a civil penalty imposed by the Administrator under this subsection, the issues of liability and the amount of the penalty may not be reexamined.

(4) Notwithstanding paragraph (2) of this subsection, the district courts of the United States have exclusive jurisdiction of a civil action involving a penalty the Administrator initiates if—

(A) the amount in controversy is more than $50,000;

(B) the action is in rem or another action in rem based on the same violation has been brought;

(C) the action involves an aircraft subject to a lien that has been seized by the Government; or

(D) another action has been brought for an injunction based on the same violation.

(5)(A) The Administrator may issue an order imposing a penalty under this subsection against an individual acting as a pilot, flight engineer, mechanic, or repairman only after advising the individual of the charges or any reason the Administrator relied on for the proposed penalty and providing the individual an opportunity to answer the charges and be heard about why the order shall not be issued.

(B) An individual acting as a pilot, flight engineer, mechanic, or repairman may appeal an order imposing a penalty under this subsection to the National Transportation Safety Board. After notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record, the Board shall affirm, modify, or reverse the order. The Board may modify a civil penalty imposed to a suspension or revocation of a certificate.

(C) When conducting a hearing under this paragraph, the Board is not bound by findings of fact of the Administrator but is bound by all validly adopted interpretations of laws and regulations the Administrator carries out and of written agency policy guidance available to the public related to sanctions to be imposed under this section unless the Board finds an interpretation is arbitrary, capricious, or otherwise not according to law.

(D) When an individual files an appeal with the Board under this paragraph, the order of the Administrator is stayed.

(6) An individual substantially affected by an order of the Board under paragraph (5) of this subsection, or the Administrator when the Administrator decides that an order of the Board under paragraph (5) will have a significant adverse impact on carrying out this part, may obtain judicial review of the order under section 46110 of this title. The Administrator shall be made a party to the judicial review proceedings. Findings of fact of the Board are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

(7)(A) The Administrator may impose a penalty on an individual (except an individual acting as a pilot, flight engineer, mechanic, or repairman) only after notice and an opportunity for a hearing on the record.

(B) In an appeal from a decision of an administrative law judge as the result of a hearing under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the Administrator shall consider only whether—

(i) each finding of fact is supported by a preponderance of reliable, probative, and substantial evidence;

(ii) each conclusion of law is made according to applicable law, precedent, and public policy; and

(iii) the judge committed a prejudicial error that supports the appeal.

(C) Except for good cause, a civil action involving a penalty under this paragraph may not be initiated later than 2 years after the violation occurs.

(8) The maximum civil penalty the Administrator or Board may impose under this subsection is $50,000.

(9) This subsection applies only to a violation occurring after August 25, 1992.

(e) PENALTY CONSIDERATIONS.—In determining the amount of a civil penalty under subsection (a)(3) of this section related to transportation of hazardous material, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(2) with respect to the violator, the degree of culpability, any history of prior violations, the ability to pay, and any effect on the ability to continue doing business; and

(3) other matters that justice requires.

(f) COMPROMISE AND SETOFF.—(1)(A) The Secretary may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed for violating—

(i) chapter 401 (except sections 40103(a) and (d), 40105, 40116, and 40117), chapter 441 (except section 44109), or section 44701(a) or (b), 44702–44716, 44901, 44903(b) or (c), 44905, 44906, 44907(d)(1)(B), 44912–44915, or 44932–44938 of this title; or

(ii) a regulation prescribed or order issued under any provision to which clause (i) of this subparagraph applies.

(B) The Postal Service may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under subsection (a)(1)(D) of this section.

(2) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this subsection from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

(g) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—An order of the Secretary imposing a civil penalty may be reviewed judicially only under section 46110 of this title.

(h) NONAPPLICATION.—(1) This section does not apply to the following when performing official duties:

(A) a member of the armed forces of the United States.

(B) a civilian employee of the Department of Defense subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

(2) The appropriate military authority is responsible for taking necessary disciplinary action and submitting to the Secretary (or the Administrator with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator) a timely report on action taken.

§46302. False information

(a) CIVIL PENALTY.—A person that, knowing the information to be false, gives, or causes to be given, under circumstances in which the information reasonably may be believed, false information about an alleged attempt being made or to be made to do an act that would violate section 46502(a), 46504, 46505, or 46506 of this title, is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation.

(b) COMPROMISE AND SETOFF.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this section from amounts it owes the person liable for the penalty.

§46303. Carrying a weapon

(a) CIVIL PENALTY.—An individual who, when on, or attempting to board, an aircraft in, or intended for operation in, air transportation or intrastate air transportation, has on or about the individual or the property of the individual a concealed dangerous weapon that is or would be accessible to the individual in flight is liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation.

(b) COMPROMISE AND SETOFF.—(1) The Secretary of Transportation may compromise the amount of a civil penalty imposed under subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The Government may deduct the amount of a civil penalty imposed or compromised under this section from amounts it owes the individual liable for the penalty.

(c) NONAPPLICATION.—This section does not apply to—

(1) a law enforcement officer of a State or political subdivision of a State, or an officer or employee of the Government, authorized to carry arms in an official capacity; or

(2) another individual the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration by regulation authorizes to carry arms in an official capacity.

§46304. Liens on aircraft

(a) AIRCRAFT SUBJECT TO LIENS.—When an aircraft is involved in a violation referred to in section 46301(a)(1)(A)–(C), (2), or (3) of this title and the violation is by the owner of, or individual commanding, the aircraft, the aircraft is subject to a lien for the civil penalty.

(b) SEIZURE.—An aircraft subject to a lien under this section may be seized summarily and placed in the custody of a person authorized to take custody of it under regulations of the Secretary of Transportation (or the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration with respect to aviation safety duties and powers designated to be carried out by the Administrator). A report on the seizure shall be submitted to the Attorney General. The Attorney General promptly shall bring a civil action in rem to enforce the lien or notify the Secretary or Administrator that the action will not be brought.

(c) RELEASE.—An aircraft seized under subsection (b) of this section shall be released from custody when—

(1) the civil penalty is paid;

(2) a compromise amount agreed on is paid;

(3) the aircraft is seized under a civil action in rem to enforce the lien;

(4) the Attorney General gives notice that a civil action will not be brought under subsection (b) of this section; or

(5) a bond (in an amount and with a surety the Secretary or Administrator prescribes), conditioned on payment of the penalty or compromise, is deposited with the Secretary or Administrator.

§46305. Actions to recover civil penalties

A civil penalty under this chapter may be collected by bringing a civil action against the person subject to the penalty, a civil action in rem against an aircraft subject to a lien for a penalty, or both. The action shall conform as nearly as practicable to a civil action in admiralty, regardless of the place an aircraft in a civil action in rem is seized. However, a party may demand a jury trial of an issue of fact in an action involving a civil penalty under this chapter (except a penalty imposed by the Secretary of Transportation that formerly was imposed by the Civil Aeronautics Board) if the value of the matter in controversy is more than $20. Issues of fact tried by a jury may be reexamined only under common law rules.

§46306. Registration violations involving aircraft not providing air transportation

(a) APPLICATION.—This section applies only to aircraft not used to provide air transportation.

(b) GENERAL CRIMINAL PENALTY.—Except as provided by subsection (c) of this section, a person shall be fined under title 18, imprisoned for not more than 3 years, or both, if the person—
